12 Hurt Transferring to Surviving Vessel in Boston Harbor.

Holiday Seekers Returned to Port

By the United Press.

Boston, Sept. 9.—The coastwise passenger steamer, New York, tonight rammed and sank the excursion steamer, Romance, in thick fog at the entrance of Boston's outer harbor.

The 38-year-old, 1,240-ton Romance foundered in deep water 20 minutes after the crash, just after the last member of its crew had been taken aboard the other vessel.

Its 125 passengers and 53 crew members were transferred safely to the New York, either over ladders or by lifeboats.

Twelve of the Romance's passengers and crew members were injured. No casualties were reported aboard the New York, which, although damaged, was able to return to Boston under its own power and land the rescued.

On Way to New York.

The crash occurred near Grave's Buoy, about 10 miles off shore, as the New York, a 4,989-ton vessel operated by the Eastern Steamship Lines, was heading out of the harbor for New York with 300 passengers and a crew of 125. The Romance, returning from its daily Provincetown sail, was entering the harbor when the steel prow of the bigger ship loomed out of the "pea-soup" fog and rammed it amidships.

Miss Sally Brandeis, 22, of New York, tumbled three decks from the ladder over which she was being transferred from the sinking steamer to the New York, but escaped serious injury when caught in the arms of Edward Nugent and Maurice Gallagher, both of Boston, members of the Romance's crew. Nugent suffered a possible fracture of the arm.

Miss Brandeis with Wolf Schwartzmann, of New York, was en route from Provincetown to her home, via Boston.

"We were seated forward on the top deck," she recounted on her arrival here. "Fifteen minutes before the crash I asked an officer if we were on time. He said we were.

A little later we heard another vessel off the port side. You could not see more than 50 yards away at the time, the fog was so thick. Suddenly we saw the lookout run aft and we knew something was wrong.

"Before we could move from our seats the New York rode into us like a rampaging elephant."

Knocked to Deck.

Miss Brandeis was knocked to the deck. She said half a dozen elderly women were near her and Schwartzmann and all were hysterical. Members of the Romance's crew were soon on the scene, however, and allayed the fears of passengers while distributing life preservers.

Before Miss Brandeis fell from the ladder, more than 100 passengers had been transferred safely by this method to a deck of the New York. The remaining rescue work was performed with lifeboats, which were filled with passengers and lowered on the starboard side.

The Romance, which formerly was operated in southern New England waters under the name of the Tennessee, was owned by the Bay State Steamship Co. Next Sunday it would have completed its first season as a Boston-Provincetown excursion steamer.

It was captained by Adelbert C. Wickens, of Boston, who only this morning appeared befor United steamboat inspectors here to answer charges of negligence brought by the Cape Cod Steamship Co., a rival line.

The hearing was postponed when

U. S. to Get Out Of Cotton Pool, Loans Business

Liquidation Even at Loss to Follow Crop Cut, Rise in Prices.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Government is getting out of the cotton pooling and loan business, even if it has to do so at a loss.

The Commodity Credit Corporation, which already has released 1,404,892 bales of its peak 4,400,000-bale holdings, expects recent short crop developments to help it get rid of the rest, probably after the current marketing season.

The AAA cotton pool, which in 1934 took over 2,000,000 bales of the old Federal Farm Board cotton, has completely liquidated its holdings. It hopes to break even on the transaction, but the Commodity Credit Corporation may lose on an average of $10 a bale.

Prospects of further liquidating the remaining large stocks of Government-financed cotton were enhanced by bullish estimates of the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board. On Tuesday the board estimated a current crop of 11,121,000 bales, or 1,360,000 bales less than the August 1 estimate.

Market Prices Up.

This estimate assured a production of cotton substantially lower than the likely consumption of American cotton at home and abroad, which averages around 11,750,000 bales. Surprised at the extent of the slash, market prices for all months shot up to over 12 cents a pound, and slumped only slightly yesterday.

If the price goes to 14 cents, farmers may be able to repay at least part of Commodity Credit Corporation loans, in redemption of cotton still held by the Government, it was said.

Probability that the world again will have to draw on the rapidly diminishing carryover of the staple was said to improve prospects of the commodity corporation getting rid of its remaining 3,028,675 bales of cotton held against 10, 11 and 12 cent loans, and additional assessments of carrying charges and interest.

Carryover Reduced.

The world does not have as much American cotton on hand now as it had last year. The world carryover of American cotton as of August 1 was estimated by the trade at about 7,100,000 bales. The same date last year, it was 9,000,000 bales.

The crop reporting board's 1,360,000-bale slash in crop estimates was the most sensational change in cotton-crop prospects that the board has shown in more than ten years, and completely altered the cotton picture. The nearest approach in

Landon Maps Train Speeches, Observes His 49th Birthday

Nominee Expands Platform Appearance Schedule, Will Address Crowds at 4 Indiana Cities En Route to Close Maine Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 9.—Gov. Alf M. Landon's Northeast campaign tour to climax Maine's election contest was expanded tonight on his forty-ninth birthday by inclusion of four Indiana rear-platform appearances and a projected return-trip swing through Illinois.

The itinerary of the Presidential nominee's cross-country dash to close the Maine State Republican campaign with a speech in Portland Saturday night still was incomplete. But already 13 talks were listed for his eastbound journey and two settled definitely for the return.

The Kansan will leave Topeka at 9:10 p. m. (10:10 p. m. E. S. T.) tomorrow night and arrive in Chicago at 9:20 the next morning. He will lunch at the home of George P. Harding, national committeeman, before leaving at 2 p. m.

Three-minute stops and rear-platform talks will be made at Gary, Valparaiso, Plymouth and Fort Wayne.

The next stop scheduled was Manhattan Junction, N. J., at 7:15 a. m. Saturday. New England Republican leaders and Eastern newsmen will board the train there. A stop in New York City is not planned.

Landon was scheduled to start a series of nine appearances in four New England States beginning at

Roosevelt Pens Major Address For Rally Today

President Pauses Atop Great Smoky Mountain After Motor Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., Sept. 9.—After viewing the scenic grandeur of the Great Smoky Mountains on an all-day motor trip, President Roosevelt whipped a major address into final shape here tonight in a mountain-top hotel.

The President will head for Charlotte, N. C., about noon tomorrow to speak later in the day at a Green Pastures rally of a group of Southern States.

His trip through the thickly forested mountains—the highest east of South Dakota's Black Hills—was his initial visit to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Starting at Knoxville, Tenn., he made the 150-mile jaunt to Asheville through weather contrasts of heavy rains and brilliant sunshine.

Thunder roared and rain splashed as he stopped more than 6,000 feet up in the mountains at Clingman's Dome to eat friend chicken with his fingers at lunchtime. Later the President described the park as "delightful" and "thrilling."

Emerging from the park, he drove into the Cherokee Indian Reservation and received from Chief Jerry Blythe the highest honors of the tribe and the title "Chief White Feather."

Russell Appears Sure of Victory Over Talmadge

New Dealer Leads by 2 to 1, on Returns From All But 17 Counties.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Sept. 9.—Youthful Richard B. Russell, jr., seeking renomination to the United States Senate, took a commanding lead over his anti-New Deal opponent, Gov. Eugene Talmadge, on incomplete returns from Georgia's Democratic primary today.

Unofficial returns from 150 of the State's 159 counties gave Russell 127,073 votes to 53,464 for Talmage.

Under the State's county unit vote system, Russell had 330 county unit votes indicated to Talmadge's 58. The counties, as units, instead of the popular vote decide the primary victors. The State has 410 county units, with a majority required for nomination.

Russell jubilantly claimed victory in a statement late tonight and said he regarded it as "an expression of confidence by the people of Georgia in our President and our party."

Talmadge said he would defer making a statement until the returns are complete.

"I'll probably have something to say tomorrow," the Governor said.

Rivers Takes Lead.

In the Governor's race, Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the State House of Representatives, had a substantial lead over two opponents, Judge Blanton Fortson, of Athens, and State Senate President Charles D. Redwine, who was backed by Talmadge.

The incomplete tabulation showed Rivers with 34,183 popular votes and an indicated 220 county unit votes, Judge Fortson 8 unit votes and 5,073 popular votes, and Redwine 74 unit votes and 18,157 popular votes.

Representatives Ramspeck, Deen, Wheichel and Cox were reported leading their opponents in the Fifth, Eighth, Ninth and Second districts, respectively, but the returns were incomplete.

In the Third District, where Stephen Pace and Hollis Fort, both of Americus, were contesting for the place vacated by Representative B. T. Castellow, who declined to offer for renomination, Pace was leading.

The other five Representatives

6,000 Warrants to Be Served On District Traffic Violators

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday announced his bureau was going to crack down on traffic violators in the District.

Distribution of 6,000 warrants among holders of delinquent parking and other traffic violation tickets will be begun, Van Duzer declared.

The warrants will be distributed by the Traffic Division's officers after a conference, scheduled for today, between Milton D. Smith, chief of the Traffic Bureau, and Van Duzer. The warrants were sent to Van Duzer's office from Police Court yesterday.

"For the past three years the traffic Division has kept a close check on motorists who move from one address to another," Van Duzer said when asked if he expected trouble in serving the warrants.

"Even when we do not receive notification of these changes of address, we have a pretty good idea of where to find motorists who have warrants against them."

Van Duzer reiterated that violators "could save themselves a lot of trouble" if they would appear at the Traffic Bureau and post collateral on the warrants. Motorists who do not do this, he added, will not be given license tags next year.

Lost Colonies Set by Hitler As Next Goal

He Calls for Rebuilding of Reich Trade, Return of Land by Allies.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 9.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight in a speech before 800,000 Nazis assailed bolshevism, democracy and Jews.

Der Fuehrer's personal address to the fourth annual Nazi Party convention followed a proclamation in which he defined the Nazis' next immediate goal as repossession of her colonies and rebuilding of her economic structure.

Asserting "the rock of foundation of the state is an authoritarian will," Hitler said:

"Unlimited individual liberty leads to anarchy.

"All states have experienced the destructive effects of democracy.

"Bolshevism seeks to destroy culture, as we see in Spain, where 80 per cent of the leading personalities are Jews."

In his 8,500 word proclamation, read to the 800,000 Nazis earlier in the day by Adolf Wagner, Bavarian Nazi leader, Der Fuehrer set forth his goal of regaining Germany's lost colonies.

Trade Revival Aim.

In this fashion, Hitler said, would Germany's financial jam be broken and the increased markets would revivify her international trade, building up "our raw material forces."

Notably absent from the proclamation was even an approximate date for the aggressive colonial campaign.

Germany's pre-war colonies, either stripped from her outright by the victorious allies, or rendered useless to her economically under League mandates, comprised 1,032,757 square miles and included territories in Africa, China and Pacific islands.

The Reichsfuehrer's vitriolic attack on the Jewish influence in art and politics tonight was preluded by the playing of Beethoven's Sixth Symphony, before a huge audience in the opera house. In the crowd were foreign diplomats, party dignitaries and military leaders.

Hitler condemned the Jewish mentality as fundamentally negative and destructive and tending inevitably toward decadence in art and toward bolshevism in politics.

He characterized Soviet Russia as a country ruled by a parisitic coterie of Jews.

Spain, he declared, was another country whose culture was threatened with extermination by bolshevism under Jewish leadership.

His theme was: Authority is the foundation of all harmony, whether in governments, commerce or art.

Pictures Debacle.

"Authority sooner or later must prevail—either the kind we established here or the kind that will come after Europe's civilization has been wiped out by bolshevism," he asserted.

The proclamation, earlier in the day, read in Wagner's voice, so much similar to that of Hitler that is was almost as if the Reich Chancellor were speaking himself, disclosed that Hitler had signed decrees reorganizing Germany's economic structure.

Planned industrial and agricultural productions were to be stepped up, the proclamation said.

Realization of these decrees, the document went on, "is only a question of our energy and determination."

"Our colonial demands are part and parcel of this program. We must build up our raw material forces."

The decrees contained schemes for swelling Germany's exports by "raising by bootstraps," but details remained undisclosed.

Cites Achievements.

Der Fuehrer cited the industrial and economic accomplishments of the Nazi regime and extolled "regeneration" of the German arts.

Said he: "This occurred without a single Jew being in a position of influence."

Prolonged applause greeted the reading of Hitler's pronouncement that "the shackles of the Versailles Treaty have been torn off," and that the army, navy and air force could defend Germany against all enemies.

"Had I prophesied four years ago," said the proclamation, "all that we have done, the world would

Passengers 'Marooned' on Ship Ask Roosevelt to Halt Strike

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 9.—Passengers of the Dollar Liner President Hoover tied up here since Friday by a labor controversy over the dismissal of a sailor, appealed to President Roosevelt today to intervene.

While the ship was being guarded by policemen, its passenger list, originally including 471 Orient-bound travelers, dwindled sharply. Sixty canceled their booking today, following 40 others yesterday.

Three hundred of the rest telegraphed President Roosevelt that the situation approached a "national scandal that the White House has overlooked." They asked if they could expect "protection" from the Government.

Seeking to break the impasse, the company offered to pay off the 42 sailors involved. At first the men declined to accept wages, but did so on the advice of their union representative after Port Capt. L. H. Westdahl ordered them off the ship.

Reports were circulated the company had recruited a sailor crew from a rival group—the International Seamen's Union—and was about to start the ship for the Orient. Dollar Line officials declined to confirm this.

Sailors' union officials intimated they would throw a picket line about the pier if seamen from the rival union were brought in.

The controversy developed when the company dismissed Charles Brenner, deck hand, who was union representative aboard the ship on her last voyage.

Labor Demands Blum Send Arms to Madrid; San Sebastian Is Saved

Town Won't Be Sacked 'While I Am Alive,' Governor Says.

Planes of Rebels Drop Manifestos

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 9.—An unofficial but effective armistice tonight halted fighting in the Spanish rebel siege on the government-held coastal city of San Sebastian.

With not a single shot fired by either side in the last 24 hours it was believed the city might surrender to the rebel war lord, Gen. Emilio Mola, without further fighting.

If this surrender should take place the rebel army would be in complete control of the strategic northeast coastal section of Spain contiguous to the French frontier.

Sought Amnesty.

Earlier in the day, with rebel troops manning the heights cradling the city, rebel planes showered manifestos declaring a rebel attack was halted and appealing to Basque nationalists within the city "to do the right thing."

There was no authority for belief that foreign diplomats at St. Jean de Luz in France directly had negotiated the armistice, but the truce followed upon their secret appeal to both belligerents.

Urgent efforts for cessation of fighting had been made ever since the nearby city of Irun had fallen before a rebel attack September 4.

The municipal governor of San Sebastian, Antonio Ortega, dispatched his son, Jose, Tuesday into France to seek a peaceful surrender of the city provided the government defenders were promised amnesty by the rebel war lords.

This offer, made through French intermediaries, was scorned, and anarchists within the city vowed they would burn San Sebastian to the ground rather than surrender.

Fighting between them and other factions of the defenders was reported to have caused Ortega to send the anarchists into the front line trenches.

Tonight the nearest rebel troops were encamped 2½ miles from San Sebastian The Basque Nationalists took control of the city without fighting and sent many anarchists to Bilbao while they negotiated with rebels for a complete surrender of the city.

With the city under military control, Gov. Ortega said, "I disapprove thoroughly of the action of anarchists at Irun. There will be no burning of San Sebastian while I am alive."

Anarchists Opposed.

He referred to the sacking and burning of Irun when it fell before the rebels September 4. It has not been established whether the city was burned more by the fleeing defenders or by the rebel cannonading.

San Sebastian, famous and beautiful water resort, has been under almost continual rebel bombardment from land, sea and air since the outset of the Spanish civil war.

Interest of the foreign diplomats in the ultimate fate of the city was heightened by memories of their own residence there.

Many of the ministers and ambassadors accredited to Madrid maintain summer legations and embassies in San Sebastian which became a sort of unofficial summer seat of the government.

The Basque Nationalists, it became known tonight, made their first decisive step toward taking control of the city Tuesday when they announced that 625 prisoners would be sent to Bilbao.

The anarchists opposed the move, insisting the hostages be held and shot if rebels shelled San Sebastian.

The Basque Nationalists lined the streets between the prison and waterfront, their revolvers drawn, while the hostages were driven in closed trucks to the dock and put aboard a steamer which took them to Bilbao.

This morning 500 armed Basque

MAJ. RAMON FRANCO.

Franco Resigns Embassy Post, District Hears

Brother of Rebels' Chief Says He Is Ready to Join in Revolt.

It was reliably reported last night that Maj. Ramon Franco, air attache at the Spanish Legation and brother to Francisco Franco, rebel commander now battling the Popular Front government of Madrid, had tendered his resignation.

Whether the resignation was voluntary or forced is a matter for conjecture. Last month an order was issued by the War Minister in Madrid removing him from his post. Since he received no official confirmation, however, he continued to associate himself with the staff.

Maj. Franco's action follows closely Saturday's resignation of Ambassador Calderon and Maj. Vidal. The latter was military attache. Both vacated their posts less than 24 hours after the new Caballero government took office in Madrid.

Willing to Enlist.

In a copyrighted story by the Associated Press Maj. Franco later announced his readiness to enlist in the Spanish rebel cause, provided its objectives conform to his own self-styled "Republican liberal" ideas. He intimated that he had already communicated with his brother requesting an expression of the latter's objectives and views but so far he has received no answer to his query.

Commenting on his own political philosophy the Spanish ace was reported to have said:

"I agree," he explained," that a strong dictatorship will be necessary after the fighting is over. But it must be a dictatorship for the welfare of the nation first."

He stated that, in his opinion, such a benevolent rule existed today in Italy and Hitler's Germany.

"Dictatorship Needed."

"It must not be a dictatorship of the aristocracy, the monarchists, the church or the landowners," Franco said. "What Spain needs is a dictatorship of the middle-class to fight big capitalists and the revolutionary working class."

The Associated Press reported Franco as "smarting" under the execution of two brother officers by loyalist firing squads in Madrid. One was Capt. Ruis de Alda, Franco's navigator on his flight

Madrid Continues Mass Executions; Toll Is Now 1,000

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Sept. 9 (by courier to Hendaye, France).—Mass executions of Fascists continue daily in Madrid.

It is estimated the total is well over 1,000 since the civil war began. The death penalty is decreed almost hourly.

The government has done much to stop indiscriminate killing of the well-to-do by bands of Hooligan anarchist gunmen, but death sentences are being imposed by two groups.

They are the peoples' "committee for public safety," housed in the Madrid model jail with Supreme Court President Mariano Gomez as chief magistrate, and the "Cheka." Popular Front committee of vigilance and investigation, with headquarters until recently in the Fine Arts Club.

Figures of the official bulletin of the Madrid Corporation show the average total weekly burials in all the cemeteries in the neighborhood

Acting usually on private denunciation, the tribunals order the arrest of suspects, who are summarily tried and sentenced. Execution squads take the condemned by night to secluded corners on the outskirts of Madrid and shoot them.

Police Break Up Meeting of Fascists

The European Situation.

French labor demanded that the Blum government send arms to aid the Spanish loyalists, at the same time reaffirming its faith in the Socialist premier's regime.

An unofficial armistice abruptly halted the rebel attack on the loyalist-held city of San Sebastian in Spain. Surrender of the city was believed imminent.

A food shortage was beginning to be felt acutely in Madrid as rebel forces continued to hold most of Spain's agricultural belt.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler proclaimed to the "honor congress" of the Nazi Party that Germany plans to regain her colonies. Hitler revealed a four-year economic plan for the nation and bitterly attacked Communists and Jews.

The absence of Portugal dealt a severe blow to the European neutrality body meeting in London for a concerted effort to keep the Spanish war from spreading.

Demands Madrid Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 9.—Organized French labor demanded tonight that France arm the Spanish government.

As a widening wave of strikes fortified the workers' cry of "arms and planes for Spain," the powerful General Confederation of Labor issued a communique insisting the government accede by reconsidering its policy of strict neutrality in the Spanish civil war.

The confederation, which claims 5,000,000 members, urged the "French proletariat" to support the Madrid government and asked the cabinet of Premier Leon Blum to lift the arms embargo "in accord with the British government and other democratic countries."

It coupled its demands, however, with a reaffirmation of its support of the Popular Front government which made it doubtful, authoritative sources believed, that a veiled threat in the communique was intended as an ultimatum.

Claims Power Over Labor.

The confederation "reminded" workers' federations and syndicates it alone was "empowered to decide on the general action of the workers' movement."

Communist leaders subscribed to the pledge of continued support and said they were not trying to torpedo the government, but reserved "liberty of action on a question which is outside the Popular Front program."

Neither the Communists nor the confederation offered to take responsibility for a collapse of the government. Socialist leaders hailed the statements as a victory for Blum, asserting the Communist campaign to drive him from his "hands off" course was powerless unless backed by political threats.

Others ascribed the confederation's "reminder" to the fear of its president, Leon Jouhaux, that the new wave of strikes might continue

Power Meeting Disappointing, Admit Officials

Attendance at Conference Less Than 2,000; 'Big' Banquet Tonight.

By Felix Bruner.

The Third World Power Conference, ballyhooed for months as a major event, has turned out to be "somewhat disappointing," officials in charge admitted yesterday.

Just how "disappointing" it has turned out to be they were unwilling to say, professing inability to make registration figures public because after three days no one had found time to count the cards on which visitors were registered. It was admitted, however, that the total attendance is "less than 2,000."

Tons of white paper and gallons of ink were used during the weeks preceeding the conference to tell the world that 3,000 persons would be present. A huge banquet was planned for tonight, so big, in fact, that the great waiting room of the Union Station was remodeled into a banquet hall, because there was no other place in Washington large enough to feed all of the expected guests.

Statistics Heralded.

Preliminary statistics concerning the banquet told of unbelievable numbers of knives, forks, plates and glasses that would be used. They told of innumerable gallons of ice cream and tons of meat. The redecorated waiting room will seat 3,000 persons. Few more than half that many are expected to be present tonight when Secretary Ickes and Owen D. Young make their speeches. Paying guests are asked to buy tickets at $7.50 each.

The power conference program is split into various sessions, but at no time have more than three been held simultaneously and at no time have many more than 200 persons attended a given session and in many instances the attendance has been smaller. More than 300 papers were prepared for the conference, but none of these are read at the sessions. Most of them were available to delegates and others before the meetings started. With a few exceptions, "discussions" at the sessions have been confined to brief recitals of facts.

Many of the delegates are important figures in the field of science, in public utility operation and in business, but few of these have attended the regular sessions.

They prefer to engage in private discussions. In contrast with the fixed meetings, however, social functions have been well attended.

The conference is being financed partly from public funds and partly from private contributions. Congress appropriated $75,000, public utilities contributed $75,000, and manufacturing industries donated $25,000. Much of this money has been spent for printing and publicity.

Foreign representation was described as up to expectations or better. It was estimated that attendance from other countries will total about 800. Americans, however, have shown a lack of interest. Among the reasons given is the fact that the power conference is essentially a foreign organization and that a number of other scientific meetings are being held in the United States at this time.

The promotion of the conference is being handled through the Interior Department and the Rural Electrification Administration. With the Government actively engaged in the power business and with power a political issue, much of the promotion was designed to make the country "power conscious."

Cooks From New York.

Incidentally, cooks and equipment for the banquet tonight were brought to Washington from New York, in spite of Washington's considerable experience in handling large events.

The first flareup in the conference occurred yesterday when Maurice P. Davidson, representing Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, told a meeting that the only way to reduce electric rates is by threatening public ownership. He said that the State utilities commission which was first thought of as "the people's St. George that would stay the dragon" had found the dragon to be "an octopus which bound the public with its tentacles."

Following Davidson's talk and a similar discussion by Langdon W. Post, New York City housing commissioner, three public utility men who were to be on the program declined to take part in the discussion. They were L. B. Denning, president of the Lone Star Gas Co.; Alexander Forward, managing director of the American Gas Association, and Walter G. Beckford, vice president of the Columbia Gas & Electric Co.

Deplores "Politics."

Following the session, Morris L. Cooke, head of the Rural Electrification Administration, issued a statement deploring the "emergence of politics" in the conference.

"The effort has been made from the beginning, in accordance with the tradition of the World Power Conference," he said, "to keep the discussion on a high, technical plane. I personally deeply regret the occurrence. A cardinal principle of the World Power Conference from its inception has been entire freedom of speech on scientific and technical matters combined with the complete elimination of politics. We have made every effort to carry on this tradition."

Davidson told the conference that "rate control by public competition will not only be more effective, but will eliminate the large costs of valuations and expert testimony."

"The expense of regulatory procedure," he said, "is now being paid by consumers in rates and by the general public in taxes.

"Rate reductions in the past have only been made to the extent that they were acceptable to the companies. They are largely the result of voluntary action on the part of utilities. The threat of public competition produces an immediate and salutary effect on the rate policies of the companies."

Referring to Davidson's talk as a "tirade," John C. Dalton, manager of the County of London Electric Supply Co., urged that governments go slow in invading the power field.

"Let us, at all costs, keep the politicians away from this business of ours," he urged.

Landon Seen Seeking Cleverly to Capitalize "As Maine Goes, So Goes Nation" Slogan.

By Franklyn Waltman

GOV. ALF M. LANDON'S sudden and unexpected decision to hurry to Maine to make an address Saturday night closing the State election campaign was not inspired by any fears regarding the Republican outcome there, but was designed as a smart tactical move.

WALTMAN.

And so it is regarded by most political observers. There appears to be general agreement that the Maine result next Monday will be a Republican victory. Only the size of the Republican gubernatorial candidate's majority and whether Gov. Louis J. Brann, the Democratic senatorial nominee, can squeeze through remain in dispute.

But whatever the extent of Republican victory, Gov. Landon's visit is expected to give emphasis to it in the hope that the result will raise the flagging spirits of his followers, galvanize them into concerted action behind him and attract to his standard the floating or "band-wagon" vote of the Nation. Thus Gov. Landon has everything to win, nothing to lose and demonstrates for the first time that he knows how to take advantage of the breaks.

The slogan "As goes Maine, so goes the Nation"—which had its origin 96 years ago when the Whigs won the Presidency after a surprising victory in the Maine State election—is one of our most historic and firmly intrenched political shibboleths. Generally the Republicans have profited from it and the Democrats have suffered.

Even though the scientific accuracy of the September election in Maine as a barometer of what will happen nationally in November has been severely, and in convincing fashion, challenged by Prof. Claude E. Robinson, of Columbia University, the outcome of this early contest is still regarded in the public mind as having prophetic authority. And this faith has been strengthened by the dual Democratic victory in the Maine State election and in the Nation in 1932—after Prof. Robinson wrote his analysis.

Prof. Robinson reached the conclusion that "the Maine early election is not a sensitive indicator of political trends in the Nation and offers no practical forecasting help that cannot be had by the use of simpler techniques." Nevertheless both the Republican and Democratic strategists have set great value on a victory in Maine next Monday and have expended greater effort and money on achieving that objective than ever before.

The real issue in the eyes of the Republican and Democratic national headquarters is not so much the election of a Governor or United States Senator of their political faith or the local questions involved. Gov. Landon did not decide to race half-way across the continent—abandoning plans he already had made—because he is anxious for Maine to have a Republican Governor. President Roosevelt last month did not rearrange his trip to Canada in order to stop in Maine because he has any love for Gov. Brann—who has been critical of the New Deal, although he is a Democrat.

The President, Gov. Landon and their party headquarters are interested only in the psychological effect of the outcome of the Maine election on their own prospects nationally. They are chiefly concerned with the word that goes out of this barometer State next Monday night—whether the headlines Tuesday read: "Republicans Win Maine," or "Democrats Hold Ground in Maine."

If the Maine State election comes out as most observers believe it will, then the supposedly able Democratic Chairman Farley has made a tactical blunder. He has fought for a Democratic victory there as though he firmly believed it possible and having made the fight he cannot laugh off the defeat.

The Republicans for many years past have made extraordinary efforts in Maine. But the Democrats have not. Only in 1916 and in 1932—both years incidentally marked by national Democratic victories—has that party poured any money into the State. Prof. Robinson in his study found that from 1910 to 1928 at least 215 Republicans—including former Presidents and Vice Presidents, Cabinet officers, Senators and Governors—from outside of Maine have participated in that State's September election campaign; and that 122 similar Democrats in that period have participated in such campaigns.

He further points out that the Republican National Committee normally has contributed from $20,000 to $50,000 to this State campaign. The Democratic National Committee in 1916 made up a $50,000 war chest for the Maine fight, but contributed nothing in the next three Presidential years. In 1928 the Democratic committee gave $7,000 to help the Maine brethren and several times that sum four years ago.

How much money the Democrats and Republicans of the country have poured into Maine this year will not be known for several weeks, if the total is ever revealed. The Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures, in an action smacking of partisanship, has just revealed that the Republican National Committee has contributed $22,800 so far to the Maine fight and that an additional $50,000 has been contributed to help the Republicans by the Du Ponts, Rockefellers, Archbolds, J. P. Morgan and Alfred P. Sloan, jr. The committe's preliminary report showed out-of-State Republican contributions totaling $73,400.

The committee significantly promises to reveal Democratic contributions later on—maybe after the election. But it is clear that Chairman Farley has not let the Maine Democrats want for money. He has sent into the State a score or more of prominent speakers, including an acting Cabinet officer; several Governors of other States, several Senators, an Ambassador and lesser officials.

The Democrats, moreover, this year have gone so far as to assist in the revival of a defunct newspaper—the Portland Evening News—and have placed at its head Norman W. Baxter, an able journalist on the Democratic national committee staff—all for the apparent purpose of having a mouthpiece to win votes for the Democratic candidates.

On the Republican side, preceding Gov. Landon, there have been as many speakers as the Democrats have sent into Maine, including Vice Presidential Candidate Frank Knox, National Chairman John Hamilton, Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Charles P. Taft—the latter two sons of former Presidents, and such bolting Democrats as James A. Reed and Joseph B. Ely.

Chairman Farley has made an extraordinary effort, apparently in the belief that he can repeat his feat of 1932 and 1934 of electing a Democratic Governor in Maine—or at least of bringing the Democratic Gov. Brann to the Senate in order to alloy Republican joy over Maine. If he fails he cannot say, as Al Smith did when the 1928 result was announced to him: "I was never optimistic enough to think Maine would be anything other than Republican."

Farley Calls on Landon to Explain 'Liberty League' Group's Donations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—The Democratic National Committee made public today a report on campaign expenditures in Maine, which, it said, was prepared by the Senate committee on election expenses, showing that upwards of $50,000 has been contributed to the Republican campaign in Maine by members of the du Pont, Rockefeller and other wealthy families.

"The list of contributors to the Maine Republican campaign fund," the Democratic committee's statement said, "shows an almost 100 per cent Liberty League personnel."

At the same time, the Democratic committee made public the following comment by Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington, a member of the Senate committee:

"Apparently Gov. Landon is not the only outsider going into Maine to rededicate the State to the cause of good government. When he arrives there Saturday he will find that the Liberty League has already covered the field. All the Governor has contributed is a speech."

$22,600 From du Ponts.

Pierrie du Pont, $5,000; Lammot du Pont, $5,000; Irenee du Pont, $5,100; Henry du Pont, $2,500; A. Felix du Pont, $5,000; J. P. Morgan, $5,000; John D. Rockefeller, $5,000; John D. Rockefeller, jr., $5,000; Abby A. Rockefeller, $3,000; Alfred P. Sloan, jr., $5,000; John D. Archbold, $2,500; Ann Archbold, $2,500; A. Atwater Kent, $1,000.

Chairman James A. Farley, commenting on the list of contributors, said it was made public in Washington by the Senate committee.

He went on:

"I am sure the voters in Maine would be glad to have Gov. Landon explain in detail the story of the contributions made by the du Ponts, Morgan and Rockefellers and others, as reported by the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures.

"It will be particularly interesting to have his comment in view of the fact that he said he is going to Maine to help rededicate that State to the cause of good government. It is also interesting to note the generous contributions made by the backers of the American Liberty League in view of the fact that a statement was recently issued by that organization indicating their neutrality in this campaign."

Hamilton Answers.

Democratic assertions that the list of contributors showed "an almost 100 per cent Liberty League personnel," drew sharp rejoinder from Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton.

In a statement made in Cleveland and released here, Hamilton said the Senate Committee figures used by the Democrats were "willingly furnished" to "two men who said they were agents for the Senate Committee, and," he said, "it did not take them long to get the information to Mr. Farley."

The Democrats, Hamilton asserted, "failed to list the several thousand persons who were able to give only a dollar or a little bit more so that necessary, legitimate campaign expenses could be met."

"Surely, the people would prefer to have a campaign financed by private individuals out of their own pockets rather than to be obliged to dig deep into taxes to pay for it."

Portland, Me., Sept. 9 (AP).—Maine resounded tonight to the oratory of campaigners as the September 14 election fight neared its climax.

Plans of Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, Republican Presidential candidate, to speak before the closing Republican rally here Saturday night, brought disclosure by the Democrats that Gov. Louis J. Brann, their candidate for United States Senator, would follow Landon on the radio Saturday night.

Traveling up the State from Kittery on the New Hampshire border in company with Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, and F. Harold Dubord, Democratic candidate for Governor, Brann began an intensive speaking tour.

"The Governor of Kansas is seeking to defeat the Governor of Maine," he said. "I wonder if our Maine people are not going to say next Monday that they intend to look out for their own Governor first."

Contributions Announced.

By the Associated Press.

The special Senate campaign expenditures investigating committee in a formal statement yesterday recorded contributions of $25,800 to the Republican election campaign in Maine in addition to those announced in New York by the Democratic National Committee.

The committee's report listed two contributions from Maine's Republican Senators—Wallace H. White and Frederick Hale. White gave $2,000 and Hale $1,000. The regular Republican committees contributed $22,800.

In its statement, the committee said the figures were part of "a preliminary report from its agents who have been conducting a quiet inquiry in Maine, not previously announced."

"The investigation in Maine and those in other States have not been concluded," the committee said. "They will include a full report on all Democratic contributions and expenditures."

The Political Arena

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, will address the National Press Club at noon today while on a brief trip East from party headquarters in Chicago.

Flying to Cleveland yesterday, he held a series of conferences, opening a drive for campaign funds there. He expressed the opinion, the Associated Press said, that Gov. Landon would receive between 65 and 70 per cent of the electoral votes in November.

From Washington he will go to New York to spend most of tomorrow at Eastern headquarters. On Saturday he will address the Indiana Republican Editorial Association at Lake Wawasee, Ind.

"No other extensive trips are planned for Mr. Hamilton during the remainder of the campaign," the party's national committee said in a statement.

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—A group of Maryland Republican women, celebrating the forty-ninth birthday of Gov. Alf M. Landon, Presidential nominee, today heard a representative of the national committee assail the Democratic Administration and place an "importance significance" on the woman's vote.

Miss Ruth Dexter, representing the women's division of the Republican National Committee, asserted in a luncheon address that President Roosevelt's leadership was "impractical and ineffectual."

The guests included Mrs. Harry W. Nice, wife of the Governor; Mrs. Calvin Gabriel, former national committeewoman; Mrs. Lula E. Powell and Mrs. Grace Hartnett, Baltimore police magistrates; Mrs. J. Purdon Wright, former head of the Old Republican Women's Study Club; Mrs. John D'Unger, president of the Federation of Republican Women of Baltimore City, and Mrs. George W. McCreary and Mrs. Ethel Mae Lauterbach, of the State board of welfare.

Topeka, Kans., Sept. 9 (AP).—Howard Payne, chairman of the Democratic State committee speakers' bureau, today announced Senators Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, and George W. Norris, of Nebraska, would participate in the Kansas campaign.

Senator Barkley, keynoter at the Democratic National Convention, is scheduled to speak at Arkansas City at a rally the night of September 25. He will make another speech in Kansas at a time and place to be determined. Norris' schedule is to be announced later.

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the former Democratic Senator from Missouri, today attended the first fall meeting of the executive committee of the Independent Coalition of American Women, an anti-Roosevelt political organization.

She arrived from a tour of Michigan, Maine and Missouri, and said: "It is a curious circumstance, but so much boondoggling has been done in the State of Michigan that even the day laborer has awakened to the fact that money is being wasted right and left by the national administration in order to control votes. As a result, thousands of men and women are turning to Landon as an honest way out."

Cokato, Minn., Sept. 9 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, today declared the dairy industry "has been kicked about like a football for 2½ years."

His address was prepared for delivery at Cokato, the first point in his swing through the Northwest. He said he was instrumental in establishing a co-operative association in New Hampshire after studying similar organizations in Denmark in 1921. He held the United States was too large for the Danish type of co-operative, adding:

"The successful co-operative in America must be built on a single commodity basis and must operate within limits which permit unified co-operative management."

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Charles B. Godspeed, treasurer of the Republican Party, said in a statement today the number "of large subscriptions" received by the party was "considerably less than in previous campaigns."

More are necessary, he said, if "our efforts are to be adequately financed."

Godspeed's statement was issued at Republican national headquarters. It said "Many more individual subscriptions have been received than in any previous campaign, but they are small contributions and the total amount of the subscriptions is entirely inadequate."

Chairman John Hamilton said in an interview that finances were "good—equal to those of any other time this period, and probably a little better."

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—Senator George L. Radcliffe, chairman of the Maryland Democratic campaign committee, today announced Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, keynoter at the national convention, would address a party rally at Ellicott City September 17.

Speakers also will include Senator Millard E. Tydings, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Representative Stephen W. Gambrill and State Senator Joseph L. Donovan.

Howard Bruce, Maryland Democratic national committeeman, will introduce Senator Barkley. William G. Gassaway, president of the Young Men's Deocratic Organization, rally sponsors, will preside. Joshua N. Warfield, chairman of the Democratic State central committee, will be chairman of the reception committee.

Roosevelt's Lead In Maryland Gains

Baltimore, Sept. 9 (AP).—President Roosevelt increased his margin of votes, but Gov. Alf M. Landon gained in percentage today in the Baltimore Sun paper's Presidential poll in Maryland.

Latest returns from the poll the independent Democratic newspapers are taking among the State's registered voters showed:

For Roosevelt, 2,259.

For Landon, 2,630.

The President's lead increased during the day from 529 to 669. With 5,951 votes counted, however, his percentage of the total dropped from 56.88 last night to 55.44 tonight.

Votes for other Presidential candidates named on the ballots were: Norman Thomas, Socialist, 18; Thomas Aiken, Labor, 3; Earl Browder, Communist, 24; William Lemke, Union Party candidate whose name is not on the ballot, received 25 votes.

Horsewoman Kills Self.

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 9 (AP).—Shot through the head, the body of Mrs. Julius Rosenfield, 43, noted horsewoman, was found in her fashionable Chula Vista home last night. Dave Gershon, deputy coroner, said today it was suicide. Rosenfield, formerly general manager of the Agua Caliente resort, is a widely known restaurateur.

Pendleton Opens Its Roundup Today

Pendleton, Oreg., Sept. 9 (AP).—"Show stock" surged in the corrals of Pendleton tonight and all trails led toward the opening tomorrow of the Northwest's twenty-seventh annual roundup.

"Show stock" is mean stock. The summer through, cowmen have combed the prairies and mountainsides for show stock—a particularly intractable horse, a more than usually rebellous steer—for the famous pens of Pendleton.

For 26 years, the best of the weather-beaten, steelmuscled men of the ranges gathered here to outdo one another in the everyday jobs of the ranch—riding, roping and bulldogging.

Vancouver, British Columbia, Sept. 9 (AP).—Police started a search today along the 325 miles between here and Prince George for Pilot Hans Mirow, Nome, Alaska, and Miss Eileen Stangroom, Fairbanks, missing since September 2, en route from Seattle to Nome.

Mirow's plane checked through customs at the Sea Island Airport here and took off again at 4:30 p.m., that day, Mirow allowing about three hours for the flight to Prince George. The search was instituted today when Nome friends became airman and operates an air service They had expected him last Monday. Mirow is a veteran Alaska airman and operates an air srvice at Nome.

French Air Ace Plans To Visit Embassy Here

Los Angeles, Sept. 9 (AP).—Unperturbed by the "Government subsidization" charges which accompanied his spectacular performance, debonair Michel Detroyat, the flying Frenchman who ran away with this year's National Air Race honors, smilingly declared today he'll be back for next year's competition.

Detroyat plans to leave here by plane tomorrow for New York, going from there to Washington as a guest at the French Embassy Saturday and Sunday.

Cleveland Omits Rite In Deference to Canada

Cleveland, Sept. 9 (AP).—Essaying a role of perfect host to visiting Canadians here for the Great Lakes Exposition, Cleveland is going to forget tomorrow a custom of 55 years' standing—the celebration of the anniversary of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry's victory over the British fleet on Lake Erie.

"Things are different this year," said Thomas A. Knight, secretary of the Early Settlers Association of the Western Reserve, today.

"It would be kind of tough for us to welcome Canadians and then turn around and rub it in on them with the victory of 123 years ago."

Hopes of Peace Dim as Portugal Ignores Parley

Neutrality Group Agrees Nations Will Exchange Data on Embargo.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 9.—Absence of Portugal from the European committee to prevent intervention in Spain, authoritative quarters feared tonight, dealt a double-edged blow at peace.

They said Portugal's vacant seat at the opening session today not only threatened the committee's future but also dimmed British hopes of laying a foundation of good will for future Locarno discussions.

Great Britain, it was learned, still is trying desperately to induce Spain's western neighbor to join the committee. The Lisbon government, however, insists it must retain freedom to intervene in Spain should Communist propaganda across its border menace Portugal's own internal security.

Mutiny a Handicap.

The short-lived mutiny on two Portuguese warships yesterday also hampered efforts to win Lisbon's unreserved support, well-informed sources said.

The committee, nevertheless, agreed to exchange information concerning the various nations' steps to isolate the Spanish civil war.

William Morrison, financial secretary of the treasury, was elected chairman of the group which assumed the name, "The International Committee for Application of the Agreement Regarding Non-Intervention in Spain."

He will call the next meeting, for which no date was fixed, when representatives of 24 member nations hope to be able to furnish data on the effectiveness of embargoes.

Viscount Cranborne, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, also represented Great Britain.

Capt. Wickens said he had to take the Romance on its daily voyage.

The charges against Capt. Wickens were that he had crowded the S. S. Steel Pier, another Provincetown excursion vessel; had once ignored a distress signal of the Steel Pier, and had violated pilot rules.

The New York's first radio reporting the collision was the signal for the massing of all available Coast Guard and naval craft at the scene. The Coast Guard cutters Mojave and Paulice put out of Boston Navy Yard with the tug Iwana, while the cutter Harriet Lane sped from Gloucester. Several 128-foot patrol boats and smaller Coast Guard craft also responded.

Vivian Simonds, of Lynn, told this story of the collision:

"We were in the music room. The orchestra had just finished playing the 'Poet and Peasant' overture when there was quite an impact.

"Some of the passengers were knocked down. They fell over chairs. A few women got rather hysterical, but I don't believe they were really hurt.

"We went to the upper deck. A ladder was placed between the Romance and the New York. The deck of the New York was 10 feet above us. We shinnied up the ladder. While some of the passengers were going up, the rail of the Romance broke under their weight. Only two lifeboats were left aboard the Romance when she went down."

Neither Miss Simonds nor her companion—Miss Oliva Lane, of East Lynn—was hurt, and both were inclined to make light of their adventure.

Physicians Tell of Crash.

Dr. Benjamin Banks and Dr. Maurice Abrams, Boston physicians, were passengers aboard the New York and were called to treat the injured.

"We were eating dinner in the saloon at the time of the crash," Dr. Banks related. "The impact was so mild that it didn't even rattle the dishes. The entire rescue was effected in about ten minutes. It was beautifully executed."

Excitement at the scene of the crash was mild compared with that at the gates to the Eastern Steamship Lines wharf. No sooner had word of the collision spread through the city than hundreds of panicky relatives and friends of Romance passengers fairly stormed the pier entrance.

Crowd Is Frantic.

Its way blocked by police and plainclothesmen, the crowd swarmed over Atlantic avenue, pushing and shoving for choice places along a fence through whose chinks they hoped to see the rescue ship dock.

"You'd want to get in, too, if you had children on that boat," cried an over-wrought father who policemen ordered all away from the entrance.

Despite reports that there had been no serious casualties, ambulances stood by.

When the New York, a gaping hole in her bow, docked, the crowd surged toward the pier entrance, but was forced back.

Early reports were that the Romance caught fire after the crash, but later it appeared that steam released from shattered pipes had been mistaken for smoke.

The Romance, cut almost in half, sank in 66 feet of water. Only the top of her superstructure were visible.

Spain's Former Queen May Visit Son in U. S.

Havana, Sept. 9 (AP).—Friends of the former royal family of Spain declared tonight former Queen Victoria would come to the United States "within a matter of days" to see her son, Alfonso, Count of Covadonga, who is ill in New York City.

The count, eldest son of Victoria and former King Alfonso, is a sufferer from hemophila, the disease which causes severe from even minor wounds. It has afflicted other members of the House of Bourmon.

Tells of Arab Raid in Palestine

Bombing of American Tourists By Arabs Is Told by D.C. Woman

Miss Ellen Campbell, Describing Attack on Train, Says Desert Tribes Have Spoiled Palestine as a Holy Land; Saw 'Lovely Ruins' in Egypt.

First of four Washingtonians back from strife-torn Palestine, Miss Ellen Campbell yesterday unpacked her trunks at the Donald Hotel and narrated the story of a bomb attack by Arabs on her party of American tourists.

"I was just sitting by the window of the train looking out when I heard an awful noise and saw sand spouting up out of the desert," she said. "Really, I didn't know what to think. The trip had been so unpleasant, so hot, and everybody was afraid to drink the water. I had often said I'd give a dollar for a glass of iced tea.

"Someone yelled to get on the floor, so we all fell on the floor. The train stopped dead and British soldiers came running through. They got off and began firing into the cactus. I thought the whole place was going under. They said we were being bombed. I was dying to peek out the window.

Fails to See Romance.

"You know, those Arabs always dress in white and are awfully hard to see. One of the soldiers afterward said he saw an Arab. But I don't know. You can't tell about those things. We were all a bit confused. I certainly was frightened, I think we all were."

Miss Campbell did not think the dramatic attack of the marauding Arabs the least bit romantic. In fact, she was very much put out with the Arabs—"We never got to see the River Jordan at all, and the authorities chased us out of Palestine and Nazarus, too! I had wanted to see the ruins. We saw some perfectly lovely ruins in Egypt.

"It happened just as we were nearing the border of Egypt," she continued. "We'd had an airplane flying over the train for protection all the way, but it turned back, and those Arabs—you know how treacherous they are—picked that spot to bomb us.

"They were trying to derail the train. We had seen two buses burned to the frames and two engines overturned. The bomb missed us, but a part of it bounced and put a dent in the engine. Some of us took snapshots of the dent, but I didn't think it was very interesting. But I have a lot of pictures of goats and shepherds."

Others Due Today.

The other Washingtonians—Andrew R. Bird, jr., and his sister, Imogene, children of the Rev. Andrew R. Bird, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, and Miss Teresa Jarrell, daughter of Thomas Jarrell, real estate man—were expected this morning. They stopped off in New York after their ship docked Tuesday.

"I think now it was a pretty close call," declared Miss Campbell, "a bit too strenuous."

Palestine is no longer a Holy Land, in her opinion. Her longings of a lifetime to see the peaceful shepherds and camel caravans of the East were gratified, but she saw them through gun sights. Buses in which the 47 tourists traveled were manned by machine-gunners, with armored cars fore and rear. The 15,000 British troops in Palestine are soon to be increased by 12,000, she said.

"It's all the fault of the Arabs," she declared. "They want to live in Palestine where the Jews lived first. Why don't they go back to Arabia? I just don't know what's going to happen!"

Petition Enters Norris in Race; Senator Silent

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 9.—Senator George W. Norris, independent Nebraska Republican, and frequent New Deal ally, was formally entered as a candidate for re-election today by virtue of a petition filed by a bipartisan group of supporters.

Friends here and at Waupaca, Wis., where the 75-year-old Senator was vacationing at his summer home, announced their confidence that he would bow to the wishes of the 40,504 signers of the petition, and make an active campaign.

Norris, himself, made no immediate reply to a telegram sent him by James E. Lawrence, a Lincoln Democratic editor, who filed the petition as chairman of a bipartisan Norris for Senator committee.

John P. Robertson, his secretary, said only that the Senator planned an active campaign in the Midwest for President Roosevelt.

But under Nebraska law Norris automatically became a candidate with the petition's filing despite his declaration some months ago that he wished to retire. Under the State requirement no acceptance from a candidate is needed—only 1,000 signatures to a petition.

One of the first high Democratic leaders to comment was Chairman James A. Farley, of the national committee. In New York, Farley said he was "very happy" over the filing—which was in line with a recommendation which President Roosevelt made to Nebraska voters some time ago when he had indorsed a move to re-elect the Senator.

Norris, who supported Al Smith in 1928 and Roosevelt in 1932, also has had the support of many Nebraska Democrats in past elections. Last May 7 the party's State convention snubbed the Democratic nominee, Terry Carpenter, of Scotts Bluff, and indorsed Norris.

Carpenter, a former Congressman who claims friendship for Norris, reiterated he would not withdraw and said Lawrence's committee "will wear to their graves the fact that they shoved a grand man against his own wishes to defeat that even they have said cannot be prevented."

The Republican nominee is Robert G. Simmons, of Lincoln.

Kane Bombing Protests by U. S. To Be Renewed

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull indicated yesterday new representations probably will be dispatched to both the Spanish government and rebel command insisting upon a satisfactory explanation of the identity and motives of an unidentified airplane which attempted to bomb the American destroyer Kane on August 30.

Although represented as being convinced the attack on the destroyer was a mistake, Hull plainly intimated at his press conference today this Government did not consider satisfactory the replies to its protests received from either Madrid or the rebel general, Francisco Franco.

Franco informed the American consul at Seville on Tuesday there was a possibility that the Kane's aerial assailant was a rebel airplane, although he had been unable to establish this definitely. The Madrid ministry of state, on the other hand, denied that any loyalist plane was involved.

Earlier in the day, Secretary Swanson told newsmen an officer aboard the Kane had taken moving pictures of the incident.

The pictures are not "official," Swanson added, but will be examined by department authorities before they were released.

He said they had not been received yet in Washington.

English Woman Flier Greeted by LaGuardia

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Flier greeted flier today when Mrs. Beryl Markham, English aviatrix who spanned the Atlantic Ocean, was accorded the city's welcome at city hall by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, pilot of an American bombing plane on the Italian front in the World War.

The only woman to make the east-west crossing of the Atlantic alone waited a half-hour before the mayor could leave a conference with bankers to greet her on the city hall steps.

Approximately 1,000 persons cheered as she thanked the mayor for the hospitality the city had shown her since her arrival here Sunday.

Spanish Capital Is Facing Acute Food Shortage

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Madrid, Sept. 9 (Uncensored via Hendaye, France).—A food shortage is beginning to be felt acutely in this seat of the Spanish government as rebel forces continue to hold most of Spain's agricultural belt.

Tonight in Madrid there are no potatoes, fresh eggs or butter to be had. There is little sugar and a diminishing supply of vegetables. One can buy no fish. Meat is scarce and of poor quality.

Rebel forces hold the principal sources of beet sugar from Zaragoza and Granada. They also hold all the refineries except one in Malaga, another sugar center.

Milk is almost impossible to obtain, and when it is available it is rationed out at one pint per family a day. The bulk of the supply is sent to hospitals.

Olive oil—so necessary to a Spanish cook—is nearly exhausted. The rebels hold Sevilla and Cordoba, principal olive-growing centers.

There is a shortage of canned goods. Supplies were speedily cleared from store shelves when the conflict began. Syndicalist-Socialist-Anarchist committees charged with feeding the militia appropriated reserve supplies from the warehouses.

Flour, coffee and other stocks also are low.

A shortage of coal, caused when the Asturias coal basin was cut off from government-held territory, started a rush of residents for alcohol, kerosene and gasoline for their stoves.

Franco Resigns Embassy Post, District Hears

from Spain to Argentina. The other was Gen. Capez, described by the former air attache as one of the best soldiers in Spain.

"Neither of these men was a rebel," Franco was reported to have said bitterly.

With Franco out of the picture the embassy is now reduced to a skeleton staff of three—the commercial attache, the commercial agent and the agricultural attache.

Born in an obscure village in northwest Spain, the son of a naval officer, Franco joined the army. He studied aviation, mastered it and became a civilian flier.

A daring flight catapulted him to international fame in 1926, when, smashing all records he crossed the South Atlantic from Cadiz to Buenos Aires. On his return to Spain he was given a great ovation and became a national hero.

Two years later, in July, 1929, the young adventurer again made the headlines when he roared down the runway at Cartagena, Spain, on a non-stop flight to New York. Adverse weather conditions forced him down off the Azores. After several days at sea, clinging to his partly-submerged hydroplane, he was rescued by a British airplane carrier.

Events at this time were moving toward a political crisis in Spain. Student strikes and demonstrations had flared up anew and a strong republican voice clamored for an end to the monarchy. Franco joined the revolutionary movement.

Revolt broke out in December, 1930. It centered at Jaca, in the shadow of the Pyrenees, but was easily suppressed. A few days later Franco led a squadron of republican aviators in a leaflet bombardment of Madrid.

With the collapse of the revolt the transatlantic flier was thrown into jail, but he escaped four months later.

Franco fled Spain by air. Months later when the republican flag was raised, he returned.

Later he was appointed military attache at Washington.

Small, dark and taciturn, Franco was never popular with the Embassy staff in the Capital. Disliked by conservative ambassadors because of his radical republican views, he found himself out of sympathy with the Popular Front government. More liberal than his brother, Gen. Francisco Franco, who has monarchistic leanings, the former air attache recently was known to have swung more sharply to the Right.

Nationalists arrived by train from Bilbao and were greeted with open arms by members of the government war commissary who told them they would be sent to the front immediately.

Replied the leader of the Basques: "We do not come to take orders but to give them."

The reinforced Basque Nationalists then relieved the government men acting as police, replaced them with their own men and sent all anarchists and other objectors to Bilbao.

Rebels Counter-Attack.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 9.—Smashing rebel counter-attacks, started in the face of major offensives ordered by the Madrid government on all four fronts, spread a wave of death across bloody Spain tonight.

Intensified aerial and artillery bombardments marked fighting at Toledo, Huesca, Oviedo and Talavera de la Reina, while anarchism increased in areas under government control.

Fragmentary accounts of losses which sifted through the mass of propaganda and claims and counter-claims issued by both sides showed heavy casualties resulting from some of the most vicious fighting of the war.

Neutral observers reported the situation of rebels besieged in Huesca, Oviedo and Toledo as desperate.

Upon rebel capture of San Sebastian depended insurgent hope of relieving the beleaguered garrison at Oviedo. Similarly, rebels besieged in the Alcazar fortress at Toledo held out grimly in hope that Moroccan Moors and Spanish foreign legionnaires would be able to break the Estremadura front and come to their rescue.

Dispatches from Gijon reported the Loyalists took the offensive on all fronts around Oviedo. Artillery bombarded rebels under Col. Aranda, who have withstood six weeks of siege by Loyalist Asturian miners, armed with dynamite. The miners rank as the strongest Anarchists in Spain.

Both the Burgos and Madrid governments claimed victory in the Talavera de la Reina sector.

The Burgos radio asserted a rebel force defeated the loyalist vanguard and advanced toward Toledo and Avila. The rebels claimed they recaptured their former positions in the Asturias sector, permitting a consolidation of troops for a concerted advance on Madrid.

Cordoba Bombarded.

The government broadcast from Valencia that three squadrons of loyalist planes bombarded the rebel-held town of Cordoba.

The Madrid radio station claimed the loyalists captured Olvera in Cadiz Province and continued their advance as far as Ubrique, thereby considerably widening their front line in that region.

Fighting also continued on smaller fronts. Rebels claimed victories at Valladolid, San Pedro and in the Guadarrama Sierras, and the government said it was victorious at Siguenza and in the region about Teruel. Loyalists also reported they had cut off the water supply to Zaragoza and that the population was suffering.

Meanwhile, French newspapermen in Gibraltar claimed rebel military authorities in Seville detained 17 of their colleagues after seizing their passports and threatened to shoot one for photographing a heap of corpses.

Rebels Bomb Toledo.

Toledo, Spain, Sept. 9 (AP).—Three rebel bombing planes, dropping four bombs on this old city in a sudden daylight raid, killed nine persons, injured 30 and destroyed four apartment houses today.

The 200-pound missiles apparently were aimed at the civil governor's office and the headquarters of the Toledo loyalist command in the Cardinal Archbishop's Palace, but all fell wide of their mark.

Women, children and men in the nearby four-storied apartment houses were the victims. One of the old buildings was set on fire, and a pall of yellow smoke rose over the city.

French Labor Demands Blum Arm Loyalists spreading in spite of the organization's stand.

The entire port of Le Havre was tied up when dock workers quit in midafternoon and the great textile region of Lille was crippled by an occupational strike of men and women workers.

About 50,000 workers occupied factories and mills in two large strikes at opposite ends of France.

At Marseille, on the Mediterranean, about 20,000 strikers laid down their tools in factories after demanding France abandon neutrality and grant the 40-hour week voted by Parliament.

At Lille, in the far northwest, the strikers numbered 30,000. The issue was election of workers' delegates and a demand for a 10 per cent wage increase.

The textile shutdown was the largest so far in the new epidemic of "stay-in" strikes except for the one-hour metal workers' demonstration in Paris Monday, when more than 200,000 protested the arms embargo.

Mobile guards patrolled the streets of Clermont-Ferrand to prevent renewed violence as a strike of Leftist workers persisted at the Michelin Tire Factory. Rightest workers, who refused to join the protest, occupied the local prefecture yesterday and were stormed by Leftists.

Throughout the nation smaller groups of strikers occupied factories and mills as the dissension bored even within the Socialists' own ranks.

Police arrested 86 persons tonight in a raid on what officers described as a meeting of the Croix de Feu, veterans' organization, outlawed as a military camp.

They seized two pistols and searched the cafe in which the meeting was held, saying they thought they would find an arms cache.

U. S. Examiner Arrives for P.-I. Hearing Today

Calls Guild Strike 'Very Important Event in American History.'

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Sept. 9.—Edwin S. Smith, trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, arrived from the National Capital today to preside at tomorrow's hearing on the American Newspaper Guild strike, which closed Seattle's only morning newspaper—the Post-Intelligencer—August 13.

He was accompanied by Malcolm Ross, the board's director of publications.

Smith declined to comment on the case, brought by the Seattle Guild Chapter on a complaint that two Post-Intelligencer employes were discharged for guild activity. The Hearst newspaper management contended the men were dismissed for cause.

"The strike is a very important event in American history—I can't amplify that statement," Smith said.

Smith said his findings would be submitted as recommendations to the Labor Relations Board, and if its decision is not observed, the board may act against the non-complying party in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Either party also may appeal to the courts.

Attorneys for the Hearst Publications, Inc., today charged the American Newspaper Guild engaged in a boycott against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer prior to the strike.

The charge was made in the Post-Intelligencer's answer to the guild's complaint before the regional labor relations board.

Swanson Calls Japan's Naval Aims Violation

Questions Power's Right to Exceed Treaty Limit on Submarines.

Japan's announced intention to retain more submarines than is sanctioned under the London Naval Treaty brought the comment, "a violation," yesterday from Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, but the State Department remained silent on what action would be taken by the United States.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull declined to express an opinion on the Japanese note announcing the proposed increase in submarine power, and also refused to say whether formal reply had been made.

Secretary Swanson, back at his ·sk after a long illness, announced ree important decisions as fol·vs:

The United States again will hold its annual maneuvers in North Pacific and Hawaiian waters in May and June of next year. Discounting any significance in the scene of the maneuvers in so far as its proximity to Japan is concerned, Secretary Swanson explained that "we simply want to get well acquainted with those waters."

Plans for two new battleships have been completed and actual construction can be started at a moment's notice. No decision has been reached on whether 14 or 16-inch guns will be carried, pending possible agreement by the Japanese to a 14-inch limitation. President Roosevelt has authority to transfer from the relief funds for battleship construction.

Secretary Swanson declared the Navy does not favor establishment of a European squadron, and said the question had not been discussed with the President. He added that he was opposed to keeping American warships in European waters because "I don't think we ought to get mixed up in European matters."

Swanson's statement that the Japanese are violating the London pact of 1930 by retaining more submarines than the 52,700 tons permitted Great Britain, the United States and Japan revolves around interpretation of the "escalator" clause in the treaty.

Under this clause, any signatory which considers its national defense menaced may retain a specified amount of tonnage in any category of warships.

Naval rivalry in Europe has caused Great Britain to invoke the clause and to announce it would retain sufficient old destroyers to aggregate 40,000 tons. By that action the United States was permitted to retain 40,000 tons and Japan 38,000 tons. The United States has notified London that the American Navy would retain a number of old destroyers.

The Japanese, however, announced that instead of 28,000 tons of destroyers, they intended to retain a number of submarines. It is their right to substitute submarines for destroyers that is questioned by Secretary Swanson.

Swanson Discusses Navy Plans

Underwood & Underwood.

During a press conference yesterday, Secretary of Navy Swanson declared Japanese plans to retain over-age submarines would involve a "violation" of the London naval treaty. He also stated that plans for two proposed battleships were ready and construction could start "at a moment's notice."

Canadian Home Loans Follow New Deal Plan

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (AP).—A plan under which the Dominion government will guarantee lending institutions against losses up to 15 per cent for loans to a maximum of $50,000,000 to home owners for repairs and improvements on dwellings was announced officially tonight.

Encouraged by the outcome of similar provisions made by the United States Government, the administration's intention is to extend the housing act to the extent that personal loans up to $2,000 may be advanced to home owners without indorsement at a maximum of 5 per cent interest for terms up to five years.

Guarantees against losses up to 15 per cent of the total over a given period will be made by the Dominion government. The total maximum liability to be thus assumed will be fixed initially at $7,500,000, covering $50,000,000 worth of loans.

Lawyer Freed To Await Trial In Theft Case

J. J. Laughlin Appears to Answer Charges of 3 Jailed Clients.

Indicted on charges of forgery, embezzlement, and larceny after trust, James J. Laughlin, criminal attorney, yesterday was released on $2,000 bond after he had voluntarily appeared in the District Court to answer the presentment.

Laughlin is said to have received checks for $1,500, $786 and $785 from three of his clients who were being held in the District Jail.

The proceeds of the checks, it was said, were to have been used to free the trio on cash bail. Instead, it was charged, only one, Erma Miller, was released. Her two companions, Walter C. Johnsen and Edward R. Dietrich, were held on orders of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, who said authorities in Florida had asked that they be held here until officers from that State could question them.

Miss Miller, freed on bond of $500, said that Laughlin took the proceeds of the $716 check and gave her $193 cash. Then, it was alleged, he forged a receipt, which was given Miss Miller purporting to be for the money advanced by Johnsen which Laughlin said he had turned over to her after the release of both Johnsen and Dietrich had been refused. The indictments specifically charge Laughlin with forging the receipt and with embzzeling $1,500.

Miss Miller, Johnsen and Dietrich testified before the grand jury, along with a handwriting expert from the Bureau of Standards. The trio have sent their complaint to the greivance committee of the District bar in conjunction with their appearance before the grand jury.

Dutch Hear Juliana Tell of 'Romance'

The Hague, the Netherlands, Sept. 9 (AP).—Dutchmen at their firesides tonight heard their buxom Princess Juliana shyly tell them in her own words about her romance with the tall Prince Bernhard (Benno) Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld.

The heiress to the throne of the Netherlands, blushingly led her future husband to the microphone and said:

"We first met during the winter sports and afterwards several times in Holland. We came to be on very good terms. These present hours wherein we've been shown so much kindness are the finest of our mutual life."

The prince, speaking in Dutch, vowed to strive to win the Dutch people's sympathy.

The date of the royal ceremony tonight was still no more definite than "two or three months."

Dairy Farmers Threaten Bolt To Republicans

May Turn Fight on Marketing Agreement Into Political Battle.

Strong indications that irate farmers would turn the fight on a proposed marketing agreement for milk producers into a political battle were given last night by C. V. Dye, Frederick County (Md.) milk dealer.

A threatened march on Washington by milk producers Tuesday was averted by the intercession of New Deal officials after county Democratic leaders asked Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, to arrange a conference between the marketing agreement foes and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Dye, an independent dealer affiliated with Highland Farms Dairy and representing many farmers in the Frederick district, which supplies the District and Baltimore with most of its milk, said his followers had no objection to the agreement in itself but were against having it "crammed down our throats" by other interests.

The independent dealers, he added, have not had a fair chance to participate in the agreement. Ballots sent out by the AAA Dairy section were received by most farmers in this section on the day they were to be cast. Many, he said, arrived a day late.

Three independent dairies now serving Washington will make up the conference being arranged by Senator Radcliffe to enable the Frederick county farmers to present their opposition to the proposed agreement.

"We will go to the last resort to get a fair hearing," Dye said. "If we have to, we will throw every vote in our power to the Landon machine. Should the marketing agreement go over our heads, its legality will be immediately questioned by our legal representatives."

Ford to Construct Model Farm and Industrial Village

L'Anse, Mich., Sept 9 (AP).—A model farm-industrial village will rise in the forest near here, as a part of Henry Ford's "back to the land" movement, when relocation of a section of highway U. S.-41 is completed.

Tentative plans call for the expenditure of $2,000,000 on a sawmill, which already is in operation, homes and farms for 30 families, and a lake to be fed by Plumbago Creek. The village will be on the banks of the creek.

Residents of the village, to be named Woodlawn, will be chosen from Ford employes in L'Anse, Pequaming and other upper peninsula towns where the Ford Motor Co. has vast lumbering interests. Each will be given an opportunity to purchase 350 acres, partly cleared, on a rental basis.

In the summer, the men will farm their cleared land to supplement their wages from the Ford Co. The remainder of the year they will cut logs selected by Ford timber cruisers and convert them into lumber at the mill. They will be paid for the logs cut on their land.

Envoy Urges Pope Soften Spain Talk

Vatican City, Sept. 9 (AP).—Luis Zulueta, Spanish ambassador to the Holy See, prelates disclosed today, has sought for several days to soften the edges of the speech Pope Pius XI is preparing for ecclesiastical refugees from Spain.

Zulueta, they said, has made repeated visits to Cardinal Pacelli, the papal secretary of state, asking him to intercede.

The Holy Father, when he speaks Monday to the refugees, including several bishops, will read from a prepared text upon which he is now at work. Cardinal Pacelli also will speak.

The prelates disclosed Zulueta, notwithstanding the Vatican's bitterness against the reported slaying of many priests and bishops in Spain, has reasserted his protests against recent articles in Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ.

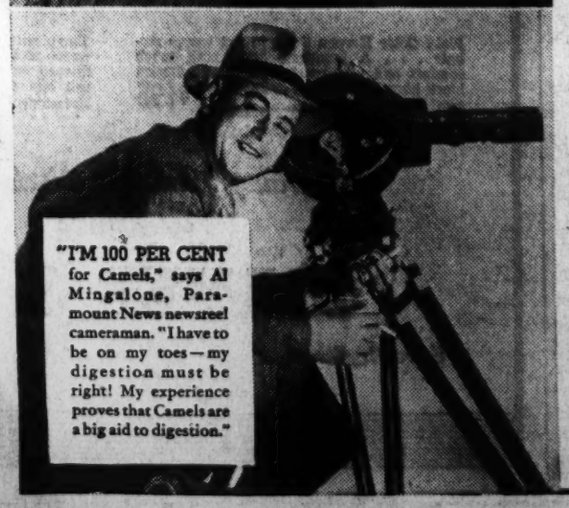

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Commissioners Split on Income Tax for District

Allen Proposes Plan With Hearing Opening Today; Hazen Disagrees.

By James D. Secrest.

With the District Commissioners divided on the best means of raising additional revenue, but united in a demand for curtailment of departmental estimates for 1938, a public hearing on the District budget for the next fiscal year will be opened at 10 a. m. today in the board room of the District Building.

Twenty-nine Washington residents, most of them spokesmen for civic or trade organizations, have been allotted time to speak at the two-day session.

Although the Commissioners will make no recommendation as to new or additional taxes until they learn the size of the Federal contribution proposed by the fiscal relations committee, Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday threw the fat into the fire by announcing he favored a District income tax.

Would Follow U. S. Scale.

While he hasn't worked out the details, Allen said his idea would be to follow rather closely the Federal income tax scale. He estimated that the levy would raise at least $4,000,000. All this, however, would not be new revenue, as the personal property tax on intangibles would be repealed. Last year that amounted to $2,104,767.26.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, immediately disagreed, although he insisted that he was not unalterably opposed to a local income tax.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan will set forth the financial condition of the District government, pointing out that anticipated revenue for the year beginning July 1 will be approximately $40,000,000, or $18,000,000 short of departmental estimates. He will make no recommendations, however, as to new taxes or curtailments, but will solicit proposals from the assembled taxpayers.

The hearing will be recessed this afternoon as the Commissioners and other District officials meet in executive session with J. L. Jacobs, director of the President's fiscal relations inquiry, in the first official conference on the question of what proportion of the District's expenses should be borne by the Federal Government.

The parley will be the first of an official nature since the President's appointment of Jacobs and an advisory committee under authorization of the 1937 District appropriations act.

Although the conference will be confidential, it is expected the Commissioners will present arguments, supported by factual data, for a much larger United States lump sum payment than the $5,000,000 appropriated this year.

Based on 1937 Bill.

Because the results of the inquiry will not be made known until Congress convenes, the Commissioners will be forced to submit a budget based on the 1937 bill, carrying the $5,000,000 contribution, the smallest amount since the establishment of the commission government in 1878.

Other possible taxes which should be given preference, he said, are the inheritance tax, an increase in the gasoline tax, and a motor vehicle weight tax. If this revenue should prove inadequate, he added, then he would favor a study of an income tax and possibly an increase in public utility levies.

Hazen reiterated his proposal that all municipal agencies having to do with traffic or streets might be saddled upon the gasoline tax, thus relieving the general revenue fund of a burden of $600,000 or more.

Attending Dinner of American Institute of Banking

Banking Class Students Hear Reserve Leader

Gov. Broderick Speaks as Certificates Are Given by Institute.

Governor Joseph A. Broderick of the Federal Reserve Board, speaking before members of the American Institute of Banking gathered at the Hotel Willard last night to receive certificates signifying completion of educational courses, asserted that the "old-fashioned banker was still doing business at the old stand" and that the banking profession is a business of service as much as is science or teaching.

Later, the gathering heard a radio broadcast of the governor's commencement speech to 2,200 other graduates of the American Banking Institute's courses in 276 cities throughout the country.

"Understanding Is Aim."

The exercises at the Willard also included speeches by Dr. Harold Stonier, national educational director of the institute; Karl W. Corby, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, and Dr. Elliot H. Thompson, of the local institute faculty.

In Gov. Broderick's formal radio address he proclaimed his faith in the future of the banking business and urged the young men in the profession to continue study in the many fields of the profession.

"The object of education," he said, is to have a broad basic understanding which will enable you to analyze thoroughly, to weigh opinions, arguments, and views before accepting them. Knowledge is power, but the ability to think straight, fairly and clearly is a priceless possession."

Dr. Ionier told the graduates that study in the institute can make the banking business more interesting. Study, he said, gave a broad viewpoint of one's job and enabled the student to be ready to make the most of opportunity when it came.

Corby brought the members of the institute the greetings of the District Bankers Association.

Prizes Awarded.

Prestandard and standard certificates were awarded to 50 members. Prizes were awarded to those attaining the highest averages in each group.

In the standard course, first prize went to Doris E. Strobel, of the Comptroller of the Currency office. Second went to Daniel J. Tyrell, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., and third to G. Crawford Tunbull, of the Morris Plan Bank.

Price winners in hte prestandard course were: First, Frances E. Nagel, of the Riggs National Bank; second, Francis E. Grimes, of Riggs National Bank; third, Wilmer A. Eisenhart, of the Comptroller of the Currency office.

Miss Strobel also was awarded a special prize from the Bank Womens Club given to the girl attaining the highest average in the standard course.

Capitol Officer Is Suspended In House Arrest

Suspect, Seized at Bank, Is Being Held for Investigation.

One Capitol policeman was suspended as investigation into the case of Louis D. Barlonzon continued. Barlonzon was caught Tuesday night trying to enter the House of Representatives Bank, according to police.

The suspension was announced by Capitol Police Capt. William S. Orthman, who, with Postoffice Inspector T. F. Fitch, yesterday questioned Barlonzon in his cell at the First Precinct Station, where he is being held for investigation.

"Still," said Capt. Orthman, "I have serious doubts as to whether the suspended officer was entirely to blame."

Answering House Sergeant-at-Arms Kenneth Romney, who promised sweeping changes in the personnel of the Capitol Police as a result of Barlonzon's entering the House, Capt. Orthman said:

"You can't hold a whole department responsible for one thing like that."

"Charges probably will be brought against him for housebreaking," Capt. Orthman said. "But I think he ought to be sent to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation. He has the mind of an 8-year-old child."

Barlonzon was arrested in the Capitol as he allegedly was reaching through the bars of the House bank.

Police officials thought at first he might be responsible for a series of desk pilferings in the Capitol.

6 French Fliers Killed.

Nancy, France, Sept. 9 (AP).—Six army fliers were killed today in the crash of a bomber in a field at the village of Boncourt, near Lerouville. Peasants working in the field said the plane, flying among low clouds, suddenly appeared to shake to pieces and plunged headlong to the earth.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Sept. 9.

William Anthony McGuire was telling a producer about Eugene Walter, the playwright, who wrote such great hits as "Paid in Full" and "The Easiest Way," and who hasn't a writing job at a studio. The producer admitted they were great successes, but said that he believed that Walter's plays were old-fashioned. The conversation went on to other subjects, and later that evening, McGuire told a story which he thought would be great for pictures. About a boy and girl who are poor, and are afraid to get married. The wealthy man of the town is in love with the girl, but she braves it with the boy and marries him. Things get bad, the boy steals, and he confesses to his wife, telling her that the only person who can save him is the wealthy man who is in love with her. He sends her to this man. This man saves the lad and is a gentleman throughout, because he is really in love with the girl. That's the story in a quick outline. The producer wanted to buy it. McGuire said: "You'll have to talk to that old-fashioned writer, Eugene Walter, for it's his yarn, 'Paid in Full.'"

GEORGE KELLY.

The strangest of the Hollywood preview tales concerns the preview of that great picture, "Cimarron." During the excitement of the preview, they skipped the third reel and forgot to show it. The audience didn't miss it, and the next morning the critics gave the picture rave notices:

Whenever Mervyn LeRoy gets anything less than an "Anthony Adverse" to direct, he complains that he is making a short subject.

• • • •

George Kelly, at a party during the engagement of his play, "Reflected Glory," told a story about himself. Kelly is a shy, modest person, and avoids publicity. He would never take a curtain call when one of his hit plays opened on Broadway. "When the play, 'The Show-Off,' was presented in London," said Kelly, "the manager of the theater told me that I would have to take a curtain call. I told him I never did this. He said that London was different from Broadway, that it was expected of an author here, and insisted upon it. At the end of the play, according to his wishes, I came out on the stage and made a speech. The next day a critic, reviewing the play, wrote: 'The chief show-off of the play was the author.'" Which is why Kelly avoids curtain calls.

After a preview, a producer asked Tom Jenk what he thought of the picture. Jenk answered: "The only way it'll get over is if you release it as an old picture and advertise it: 'Returned by popular demand.'"

Gay White Way Sought.

Greencastle, Pa., Sept. 9.—A movement to install a "white way" lighting system in the business section here was started at a meeting of the Greencastle borough council and a meeting of all citizens of the town has been set for next Tuesday for the purpose of discussing the movement and organizing a committee to solicit funds. Estimates of the cost of the installation are being prepared for presentation at the meeting.

Culbertson on Bridge

Write your bridge troubles and problems to Ely Culbertson, care of this paper, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Every player of experience has seen the beautiful results that may be achieved by correct signaling between defenders. The precise, although subtle, language of signal cards is much better appreciated than it was a few years ago, but there is a concomitant to this that is not nearly as well known. If a thief wants to rob a house in comparative safety, his first step usually is to cut the telephone wires. Far be it from me to suggest that contract players should take pointers from thieves, but it must be admitted that the correct technique to be observed on certain hands might be described as "cutting the wire."

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 heart	Double
1 spade	2 diam.	2 hearts	2 n. t.
Pass	3 n. t.	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the six of hearts, and East's nine was taken by declarer's ace. Declarer now counted the tricks he could run off and found they added up to only eight: five diamonds, two hearts and one spade. Obviously, he could build another spade trick by conceding the king, which probably was in West's hand. But there was a severe danger attendant on the normal play of laying down the ace and another spade. In the first place, it would locate the ace for West's guidance. In other words, he would look to another suit for his partner's high card strength. But even more important than this was the danger of finding West with a six-card suit which would leave his partner with only one. In that event, two rounds of spades would give East a golden opportunity to discard a heart. And the declarer realized that, between expert partners, as East and West were, this signal would shout from the housetops for a discontinuance of heart leads and, consequently, a shift to a new suit. That the new suit would be clubs was only too apparent.

So the declarer simultaneously concealed his spade ace and severed the partnership communications by leading his low spade up to dummy at the second trick.

West hardly can be blamed for falling into the trap. Not knowing but what his partner had the singleton ace of spades, he ducked and dummy's queen held, after which eight tricks promptly were run off. West truly was on a spot, and, even if he had made the correct guess of putting up the spade king, it would have been extremely far-fetched for him to have guessed further that a club shift was vital. For all he could know, East might hold the diamond ace and, in that case, he certainly would want a heart continuation to clear his suit.

The true point of the play is, however, that had declarer laid down the ace and another spade, West's correct defense would have become crystal clear on the discard of a heart by his partner.

Forest Fire Is Checked; Malibu Beach Is Saved

Los Angeles, Sept. 9 (AP).—A 20-mile circle of flames, started by a smoker's discarded match, was checked at least temporarily today at a safe distance from filmdom's exclusive Malibu Beach colony after destroying 3,500 acres of watershed in the Malibu Mountains.

The fire loss was estimated at more than $200,000 by J. R. Pemberton, assistant county fire warden.

THE wide-awake and alert group of carriers who serve Washington Post readers faithfully day in and day out are now beginning their voluntary training course as directed by the national organization of Newspaper Boys of America.

The Newspaper Boys of America, Inc., is a national organization with district chapters sponsored by leading newspaper publishers. The policies and advantages of this association are:

To help the newspaper encourage boys, not only to be more efficient newspaper boys today, but also to be better citizens tomorrow.

It provides a system of teams and ranks, by means of which ambitious boys may progress regularly—from the first rank of "Pledge" or Junior to the rank of Senior member, and finally to be a Team Captain.

It gives each boy an opportunity to secure practical training in all phases of newspaper delivery, collecting and selling. A weekly school of business training provides the best groundwork for future life without cost to the boys.

It offers a series of 4 Merit Seals and 14 Honor Medals for boys who can meet the N. B. A. standards of character, courtesy, service and salesmanship.

It conducts seasonal contests among newspaper boys and awards worthwhile prizes to the winners of district, city, sectional or national honors.

It is establishing an N. B. A. Scholarship Fund, to assist outstanding newspaper boys in obtaining a college education.

It promotes good fellowship and brotherly interest among older newspaper boys, through the N. B. A. Fraternity—The Nu Beta Alpha.

It is helping, through regular publicity, to give the American people a higher appreciation of the boys who deliver their paper so dependably, year in and year out.

PARENTS—If your boy is over 13 years of age and you are desirous of having him secure the practical business training offered through this new, approved plan, write to the Circulation Manager, The Washington Post, for full particulars. Give age, address, phone number and school grade of your boy. There are several routes in various sections of the city now available for the right type of boy.

Chemist Sees Food Creating Super Humans

Revolution in Farming Methods Predicted by British Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 9.—A revolution in the methods of growing foodstuffs, to bring about a race of supermen and women, was forecast today by Dr. E. F. Armstrong, president of the Association of British Chemical Manufacturers, in addressing the American Chemical Society.

At the same time the English chemist criticized the New Deal for what he called its "neglect of scientific principles" in devoting more attention to the farmer because of "his political influence as a voter", than to the land itself.

The new science of food, he declared, may raise the mental levels of the human race and even eliminate the idiot, whose mental defect may be due today to the absence of a tiny amount of iodine in his diet.

"Food is the first of all the weapons of preventive medicine and it must be the function of the agriculturist in the near future to grow complete foods and not mere market produce," Dr. Armstrong declared. "Life is so complex that we have forgotten how entirely food is its foundation and mainstay."

One big problem today, he added, is to discover "what chemical substances in food, if any, can give intelligence, courage and alertness to the inhabitants of a city. "Can we feed to produce nervous strength and mental agility" in the same way we have learned to eat vitamins to prevent scurvy, pellagra, rickets and other diseases," he asked.

Dr. Armstrong spoke on the "Central Day" program of the society, which brought together the entire attendance at the ninety-second annual meeting for the presentation of awards of the Pittsburgh section to Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and his brother, Richard Beatty Mellon, "for outstanding service to chemistry" in establishing the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research.

Hearst Reopens Wire Seizure Fight

By the Associated Press.

William Randolph Hearst yesterday reopened his fight with the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee over seizure of telegrams by committee agents.

Attorneys for the publisher filed an appeal with the United States Court of Appeals from a District court decision which dismissed Hearst's petition for an injunction against the committee on grounds of lack of jurisdiction.

Hearst sought an injunction to restrain the Federal Communications Commission from giving any messages to the Senate committee and to restrain the committee from using messages already received or from receiving others.

The appeal stated the sole question presented was whether the judiciary "has jurisdiction to entertain a suit to enjoin five men, members of the United States Senate, individually or as a Senatorial committee, from violating the rights of a citizen as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States."

The Republican presidential candidate was 49 years old yesterday. Miss Evelyn Ford (left) and Miss Alice Mowry, of the Landon Business League, presented the Governor with the birthday cake. Although he holds a knife in his hand, Landon did not cut the cake, but saved it for his children.

Stamford, Conn., and confer as his special train headed north with party leaders on board.

After his Saturday night speech when the candidate is expected by some to discuss business and its relation to government, Landon planned to remain as a guest of Senator Frederick Hale until he turns westward Monday, Maine election day.

Receives Gifts.

Landon received numerous birthday messages and gifts, including a three-layer cake presented by 26 State "Landon Business Women's Leagues." Mrs. Landon and the Governor's family still were at their summer ranch in Estes Park, Colo.

Jesse Owens, Ohio State colored sprint star and Olympic champion, rallied during the morning and told Landon he would campaign for him if he desired.

His Olympic trip, Owens said in a statement, "brought a very quick awakening of the fact that not only the colored people of the United States, but all minority groups might very easily see their liberty and privilege thrust aside."

"I feel as I never felt before," he added, "the vital issues and the necessity of safeguarding our form of government in this election."

Shoe Shelves Built Around Cat Are 'Unbuilt' to Save Her 9 Lives

Mrs. Moonface, Mother of Two, Sleeps Through Hammering, Nearly Dies in Airless Compartment Before Mewing Brings Rescue.

The nine lives of Mrs. Moonface, mother of two, were saved in a thrilling rescue early yesterday.

Mrs. Moonface is a cat—and a very sound sleeper. So soundly did she sleep Monday night that the hammerings of three carpenters failed to disturb her. And she finally awoke to find herself trapped in a compartment beneath a row of shoe shelves.

Earlier that night, Mrs. Moonface deserted her two kittens and crawled off in the corner of a new shoe store at 5512 Connecticut avenue northwest to snatch 40 winks. While she slept, Louis Thomas, proprietor of the shop, called in some carpenters to erect a new row of shelves.

Intent upon their work, the carpenters failed to observe Mrs. Moonface—a name she acquired because of the size of her head—in the midst of her cat nap. With much hammering, banging and sawing, the workmen boarded up the corner—Mrs. Moonface and all.

And the next day, the carpenters completed the job, erecting a rack of high shelves over the boarded up corner and making Mrs. Moonface's bed chamber almost airtight.

Early yesterday, Thomas was in the store adding final touches for his opening. He heard faint mewings—sounding strangely like Mrs. Moonface. He opened the front door. She wasn't there. He looked in the kittens' basket. She wasn't there. He got down on his hands and knees and scratched on the floor. He called, "Kitty, kitty—here kitty." But no Mrs. Moonface—except her louder "Meou-u-u."

Thomas finally traced the sounds to a panel beneath the shelves. He scratched his head. He consulted the blueprint. He shook his head—it was impossible. Mrs. Moonface just couldn't be behind that shelf.

But there she was and something had to be done. Back came the carpenters and down came the shelves. The wooden base was ripped from the wall and Mrs. Moonface strolled out.

With a haughty glance at the perspiring workmen—who just stood and looked—she sauntered across the shop, stopped once to lick a paw and climbed into the basket with her children.

And while Mrs. Moonface later lapped up a plate of milk, unconcerned at the near loss of her nine lives, the workmen—still perspiring—rebuilt the shelves.

Bay State to Dismiss Aliens From Pay Roll

Boston, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Governor's council today voted to request heads of State institutions to furnish the names of all alien employes, with a view, Councilman James Brennan (Democrat), Somerville, explained, to dismissing those not American citizens. The proposal was put forward by Brennan, who said many aliens are on State pay rolls.

Liberals Called To Make Choice Of Candidate

Leaders Are Summoned by La Follette to Rally in Chicago Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 9.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., tonight said 75 nationally prominent liberals had accepted invitations to meet in Chicago Friday to pool their support behind a common choice for President.

Sources close to the Senator reported that many who backed President Roosevelt four years ago would take part in the conference, scheduled to be called behind closed doors at the Morrison Hotel.

Invitations were sent to 140 liberals scattered over the Nation. Responses were being received at the offices of Senator La Follette, who, with his brother, Gov. Philip F. La Follette, organized the Wisconsin Progressive Party.

The Senator declined to reveal the list of participants until the roll was called at Chicago, but said he was assured those present would include:

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, Republican-Fusionist; United States Senator Elmer Benson and Gov. Hjalmar Petersen, of Minnesota, Farmer-Laborites; Gov. La Follette, Representative Paul Kvale, Farmer-Laborite, Minnesota; three Wisconsin Representatives, George J. Schneider, Harry Sauthoff and Gardner Withrow, Progressives; Allan Bouge, of Parker, S. Dak.; James C. Blauvelt, Ridgewood, N. J.; George T. David, San Francisco; Maurice R. Davidson and Edward K. Kennedy, of New York; Arthur J. Weaver, of Falls City, Nebr., and Col. John G. Maher, of Lincoln, Nebr.

LaGuardia and Benson were among those who joined La Follette in issuing the invitation. The others were Senator George Norris (Republican), Nebraska; Edward Keating, editor of Labor; Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington; A. A. Berle, jr., New York, and Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York State Power Authority.

Railroad Earnings Show Sharp Gain

By the Associated Press.

Interstate Commerce Commission preliminary estimates of August railroad operating revenues yesterday disclosed heavy increases over last year for all regions.

Returns for the Eastern district, 81 per cent complete, forecast total revenues of $120,632,414 for the month, an increase of 20.5 per cent over August of last year.

For the Western district, 29 per cent complete, August operating revenues of $39,553,868 were indicated, an increase of 16 per cent.

Returns from the Southern regions, 58 per cent complete, indicate the month's revenues will be $23,212,072, a gain of 18.7 per cent.

The Pocahontas region returns, 61 per cent complete, indicates total revenues of $13,371,500, a gain of 21 per cent.

Grants by PWA Win Approval Of Roosevelt

First Allotments From Fund of $300,000,000 Total $7,438,338.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the first Public Works Administration allotments from the $300,000,000 fund made available at the last session of Congress. The allotments, for 127 comparatively small projects, totaled $7,438,338 in 45 per cent donations, and $317,000 in loans.

Allotments from the new funds have been delayed because of the President's insistence that all labor on the projects must come from relief rolls. In many communities there is not sufficient skilled relief labor to construct the projects.

Secretary Ickes, head of the PWA, said he believed revisions in relief requirements would make possible the use of the entire $300,000,000. He estimated that yesterday's allotments would make possible public works costing $15,860,075.

At the same time, Corrington Gill, acting Works Progress Administrator, replied to complaints of cotton growers and some Southern civic organizations that because of the relief set-up cotton pickers were not available.

Gill said relief workers were expected to accept private employment.

"This applies," he said, "to agricultural employment such as cotton picking, and when it is definitely known that there is a shortage of labor for such employment in a community, the need for WPA employment in that community necessarily lessens and therefore the reason for operating WPA projects ceases.

"However, a worker is not expected to accept private employment unless it is a full-time job, paying standard or going-rate of wages or when such work would be in conflict with established union relationships."

He added, however, that the WPA would give workers "reasonable opportunity" to accept temporary employment and would give them definite assurance that they would be taken back when such employment ceased.

Chess Expert to Give An Exhibition Tonight

One of the world's great chess masters as well as one of Europe's most distinguished hydraulic engineers, Dr. Milan Vidmar, Yugoslavian delegate to the World Power Conference, here, will give an exhibition at the Capital City Chess Club, in the Gordon Hotel, tonight at 8 o'clock.

The exhibition was arranged by the Yugoslavian Legation. Prospective opponents, who will be charged a nominal fee for jousting with Dr. Vidmar, have been requested, if possible, to furnish their own chessmen and boards.

IT doesn't matter what your brand of politics may be—$10,000.00 will be distributed among the winners of the "American" Party Contest. The first prize alone is $2,500.00—think of that!

And the judges' motto is: ALL ENTRIES ARE CREATED FREE AND EQUAL. You don't even have to be a member of the "American" Party to get a prize.

What is the great "American" Party? They're motorists who pledge loyalty to those two famous "American" products—Amoco-Gas and Orange American Gas.

Now even though politics has nothing to do with the "American" Party, the Contest will. In part it will be based on the November election. You'll be asked to write a political style slogan and to answer some questions about the forthcoming November election. The details, rules of contest, full list of prizes, etc., are all contained in the official entry blank.

So do this: All entries must be made on an official entry blank. These blanks may be obtained free (you don't have to buy anything) from any American Oil Company dealer or station or Lord Baltimore Filling Station.

An Auspicious Beginning.

With the selection of James M. Hepbron as its acting director, the Washington Criminal Justice Association is assured the most competent guidance during its organization period. As managing director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission, Mr. Hepbron has won national recognition. His services there have been so effective in preventing crime and facilitating the administration of justice that his advice is sought almost every time a group of citizens plan an organized drive against crime.

In many respects Baltimore's organized campaign against crime has been the most successful of its kind in any American city. Not only has the commission headed by Mr. Hepbron gained the full confidence of the people; it has also won the respect of law enforcement agencies and the fear of professional criminals. And in large measure that achievement seems to be due to the expert supervision of that agency.

Two simple points in Mr. Hepbron's technique are sufficient to recommend him. First, he acts only on the basis of facts. When he points out a deficiency in any law enforcement machinery, he never relies upon hunches, unproved reports or casual observations. He obtains an accurate view of the situation from detailed study of the actual records. Consequently, he can speak with authority and with full knowledge that he is supported by community opinion.

In the second place, Mr. Hepbron makes it his business to co-operate with law enforcement officials instead of fighting them. In this way it is not difficult to win their confidence and thus to improve the administration of justice through suggestions that may never reach the public. Certainly that is the most effective way of securing results. And any criminal justice agency worthy of the name must be more interested in preventing crime than in obtaining publicity.

These cardinal principles have already been written into the by-laws of the local organization. Mr. Hepbron's association with that agency is the best guarantee that they will be permanently woven into the policy of this civic movement against crime. In short, it appears that the new Criminal Justice Association has been launched under the most favorable circumstances.

Independence For Syria.

In agreeing to give complete independence to Syria, which it has occupied since the end of the World War and held under mandate from the League of Nations since 1923, France is taking a leaf out of Britain's book.

Some years ago Great Britain, with the League's consent, agreed to drop its mandate over Irak and give that Arab nation independence in return for a treaty of alliance designed to safeguard Britain's strategic interests in the Near East. The French decision to follow a similar course in the case of Syria has doubtless been facilitated by the rumblings of Arab nationalism now causing the English anxiety in Palestine.

Following months of negotiation with Arab leaders, France has agreed to permit the establishment of an independent Syrian republic in 1939. During the interim period the various administrative areas into which Syria has been divided—Syria proper, the republic of Lebanon and the governments of Latakia and Jebel Druse—will be reunited and France will progressively divest itself of the authority at present exercised in those regions. When the new treaty goes into full force the only links between Syria and France will be a treaty of alliance and the presence on Syrian soil of a stipulated number of French troops.

From a material viewpoint Syria has been far more of a liability than an asset to France. Its Arab people have never taken kindly to French rule and again and again France has been compelled to employ force to maintain authority. The offer of a treaty of friendship and alliance made to the Syrians by France in November, 1933, was not enough to satisfy the Syrian Nationalists. The native parliament refused to ratify that treaty and was, in turn, suspended by the French high commissioner.

Since then anti-French sentiment in Syria has risen, as witnessed by a recent strike movement which has proved extremely embarrassing to the French authorities. Now France has decided to cut the Gordian knot. The Syrians are to be given opportunity really to govern themselves. But the fact that France will maintain the right to keep French troops in the new republic indicates that it may, at some future time, re-establish its authority if the experiment in self-government proves a failure, or if Syrian independence proves tempting to imperialist powers which, unlike Great Britain, France and the United States, have not grown disillusioned about the alleged benefits of colonies.

Germany Wants Colonies.

Soviet Russia, the land which Hitler hates above all others, but which he does not hesitate to imitate, has plotted its course through a series of five-year plans. At the Nuremberg congress of the Nazi party, the Fuehrer has announced a four-year plan for Germany. As in Russia, the goal is to make the Reich as self-contained as possible. To that end Germany now demands colonies.

This program involves a return to one and the repudiation of another of the original Nazi policies. Autarchy became a watchword soon after Hitler assumed power. Enormous energy was expended to bring it about. As in wartime, Ersatz again became a word familiar to German ears. At the same time the recurrent shortages of essential raw materials and certain types of foodstuffs which Germany does not produce at all, or cannot produce in sufficient quantities to meet the needs of its population, have made it clear that a high price must be paid for even partial self-containment.

It was perhaps the realization that autarchy is a goal impossible of achievement by a nation as deficient in raw materials as is Germany that led, with the passage of time, to the soft-pedaling of the phrase. In recent months less and less has been heard about autarchy and more and more about Germany's needs of larger markets for its surplus products.

It was with the object of securing these markets that a special tax was levied on industry to make possible the subsidization of exports. To the same end Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, has in the course of the present year visited Belgrade and Bucharest, Athens, Paris and other European capitals in the hope of persuading foreign governments to open up their frontiers to a larger influx of German goods. That he has, in part, been successful can hardly be gainsaid. But Germany's foreign trade prospects and its economic situation generally remain parlous.

The apparent return to the autarchic ideal may, therefore, represent an effort to make a virtue out of a necessity. But the demand for colonies is something else again.

In his autobiography Hitler poured scorn on those pre-war German statesmen who had made it their business to build up a colonial domain. He argued that this only got Germany into trouble with Great Britain; that Germany's natural field for expansion was to the east—at the expense of Russia. But he now appears to have been persuaded that it is essential for Germany to have colonies.

The justification is the conventional one that colonies can supply the Reich with those raw materials which it must now buy from abroad. But actually the argument is a specious one, as many students of modern imperialism have pointed out. Not even the British Empire, occupying though it does, a fourth of the earth's surface, not even the United States, is or can become completely self-contained. And if Germany should regain all her pre-war colonies her economic problem would still remain serious.

The real motives behind Germany's demand for colonies are those of prestige and power. What the other great powers have, Germany, too, must acquire to bolster up its self-esteem and prove to itself that it is cutting a mark in the world. But whether any of the colonial powers will voluntarily give up any of their possessions to please the Third Reich is very much open to question. It is equally open to question whether, in view of the attitude displayed by the Fuehrer at the Olympics toward the colored race, the transfer of any colony to the tender mercies of the Third Reich would be in the interests of humanity.

Forests And Power.

At first blush, it would seem an anomaly for the Forest Service to have addressed a pamphlet describing its activities to the scientific gentlemen attending the World Power Conference here now. Yet, the action is entirely appropriate. For electric power has a close relation to trees. Whether electricity is produced by falling water or rising heat, trees or their derivatives govern the volume available. Thus, insofar as the Forest Service has for its responsibility the protection and propagation of trees, its business is of interest to men dedicated to the production and use of electricity.

Silt is the anathema of the hydroelectric engineer. Under continued silting, a dam becomes useless. To prevent this, soil along watercourses must be held in place and for this trees are indispensable. Unfortunately for the engineers, however, trees are profitable when converted into lumber; moreover, the lumbering process brings down sterility on forests through fire. It is to counteract this sterility that the Forest Service works—through education, through fire patrols and through new planting.

The Forest Service manages one acre in every 13 throughout the United States. But its aims are by no means confined to furthering the fortunes of either hydroelectric or lumbering enterprises. It has, in addition, a concern for wild and domestic animal life whose well-being if not continued existence depends on adequate forests. It has, too, an interest in dust and erosion, particularly as shelterbelts and full water basins affect these problems. And the Forest Service has an interest in people. Here again it meets the power engineers for, thanks to the increased leisure made possible by the introduction of electricity into daily life, people have more free time and many of them—17,000,000 in 1935—turn to the forests for recreation.

In sum, the pamphlet concludes that the Forest Service points to the same goals as the Power Conference—human security and comfort and happiness. For > when the oil wells run low and the gas wells are no more than a remembered aroma, when all that is left of the "Coal Measures" is a note or two on the doings of Carboniferous times, when each raindrop is giving an account of itself and the cry is still for more power, then here are forests, gentlemen.

Belated Reorganization Plans.

Reorganization of Federal administrative agencies was an important issue in the 1932 presidential campaign. Mr. Roosevelt, then Governor of New York, accused the Hoover Administration of piling "bureau on bureau, commission on commission" and of retaining bureaucrats at the expense of the taxpayer. At Sioux City he declared that "we are attempting too many functions and we need a simplification of what the Federal Government is giving to the people." In Brooklyn he promised a reduction of expenditures through abolition of useless agencies and consolidation of the Government's many activities.

Interest in these charges and promises is revived by reports that the President is once more contemplating an extensive reorganization plan. No one could reasonably contend that the urgent need for such reform has passed. Indeed, the New Deal has so seriously aggravated the problem that the set-up of the Hoover Administration seems relatively simple by comparison. The current report will be regarded with skepticism only because it comes in the midst of a political campaign.

Undoubtedly some promising work has been done in recent months on the reorganization problem. Senator Byrd of Virginia aroused keen interest in the subject during the last session of Congress and his committee is now diligently working on plans to eliminate duplication of effort, confusion of policy, inefficiency and waste. The President's own committee, composed of experts for the Senate group, is apparently working along the same line. No doubt they will have a carefully worked out program ready for the next session of Congress. But that is by far the easiest part of governmental reorganization.

Several plans to consolidate heterogeneous Federal agencies have been worked out in recent years. Before election day, politicians consider it good strategy to promise savings through modernization of administrative agencies. After election, politics usually preclude the promised reform. In the case of the New Deal, a welter of new agencies has been added to the established departments with little thought of either economy, co-ordinated work or the merit system of selecting personnel. The result is unprecedented confusion, overlapping and inefficiency.

It would be naive indeed to suppose that this record could be wiped out by a series of new promises contingent upon the President's reelection. Instead of outlining new pledges which few will be inclined to take seriously, the President might more effectively use the authority he already possesses to curtail or wipe out useless agencies created without specific Congressional sanction.

The Last Laugh.

Who says this isn't a man's world? The fifteenth of May marks the doffing of their felts for the donning of panamas and the middle of September reverses this procedure. It's as simple as that—no vacillating mid-season for the head of the family, leaving him undecided whether it's too soon to be off with the old, on with the new. It's the woman who prays and prays that she will not be caught either rushing the fall mode or suffering from a hangover of summer cottons.

The stylists, instead of working to relieve this situation, seem to take a sadistic delight in further complicating the matter. Surely there can be nothing clarifying in a fashion announcement which heralds "dark purplish red tweed evening coats made to move incognito through the streets." No less foggy is the news that women's hats will resemble "pixie caps twisted into peaks like confectioner's swirls."

This week two costume pictures are playing in Washington. Feminine audiences are amused at the quaint period robes of Peggy O'Neale and Juliet. Yet there is nothing even in Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors" as funny as the line that in order to be currently chic ladies must wear Ali Baba hats and affect "pockets that look like little bureau drawers."

Cafe Canine.

From the London Daily Mirror.

A restaurant devoted exclusively to dogs is being planned by Lady Herbert Scott, sister-in-law of the Duke of Buccleuch. Lady Scott already runs a dog's beauty parlor in Dorset street. Soup, fish, meat, vegetables and cereals, all calculated with the nicest regard for vitamins, would be listed on the menus. "We intend to call the restaurant Betty Dixon's Dogbites," Lady Herbert Scott explained. "At present, Dogbites is only in its infancy."

Communism Vs. Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. J. E. Gerda to The Post makes communism responsible for the atrocities in Spain. It states: "Communists are at the roots of such ruthlessness and degradation, and not the insurgents."

I ask: Who started the civil war in Spain and with it the atrocities, now equally committed by both sides? Are the Moors, paid by the insurgents and their supporters, mild, tame, harmless children? Four thousand Republicans, men, women and children—the Fascist propaganda calls them Reds—have been slaughtered by the Moors and the outcasts of the Spanish foreign legion.

Do not be influenced by the Fascist propaganda machine! Where is the difference between the cruelties committed by Communists and the Fascists in other countries? Look at Germany. What has become there of religion, justice and liberty? Paganism and race hatred is spread not only throughout Germany but in all countries where Nazi propaganda is carried on. Justice? Hundreds have been killed and jailed and are tortured in concentration camps without trial. Liberty? Censorship, suppression of free opinion, dissolution of labor unions, muzzling of the press.

I have no love for communism and have no love for fascism. But I have unlimited love for justice. Therefore measure both, the Communists and the Fascists, with the same scale!

Alexandrine Lament.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several contributors to this valuable department have expressed jubilation over the defeat of a former Congressman by the name of Thomas L. Blanton. This to me is poor sportsmanship. Blanton was a good "headliner" and made us laugh at his antics. He kept us awake wondering what he would do next. He even woke up some of his colleagues on the Hill who almost decided that he had "gone too far."

I know the teachers, janitors and clerks as well as the school officials will miss him sadly as they will miss their friend, Comptroller McCarl, but they will still continue to sign the little "Red rider" joker every month swearing that they have not during the summer been busy teaching or advocating New Deal or "Communistic" doctrines. This is his legacy; his monument.

Blanton is "gone;" the 17-year locusts are gone; the drought is gone; the depression is gone; business is booming. Things will be just as dull, prosaic and uninteresting as in the good old Coolidge days. We will all be busy again as usual making money and forgetting all about "communism" and other bad bogies that came as nightmares in our depression sleep. Too bad, alas, poor Yorick.

On Trimming Xmas Cards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news item reports Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, sister of Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, as saying at a little party assembled at Senator Tydings' residence that Gov. Landon had personally trimmed 10,000 Christmas cards with a pair of scissors to "cheat" Postmaster General Farley out of $50 in postage; hence Mr. Landon is too small a man to be President of the United States.

Of such statements is the New Deal built up: Spend to save. The more you spend, regardless of cost and utility, the bigger the man you are. The greater the national debt, the sounder is the Nation's credit. Saving pennies is stealing, squandering dollars is political evidence of statesmanship.

As to probability of the truth of the statement of Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, sister of Senator Guffey. Doubtless Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller never heard about printing shop paper cutters which could trim all those 10,000 cards in less than one-half hour at the nominal cost of $1. Probably Mrs. Miller has used scissors to trim coupons from her interest-bearing bonds—and one wonders if she ever trimmed 10,000 coupons?

Christmas cards are usually of very heavy stock. It would take a pretty good pair of scissors to trim 10,000 cards on one side. And if on two, three or four sides—well, the average scissors grinder charges about 25 cents for each time he sharpens scissors. From personal experience with "trimmers" I estimate a pair of scissors would have to be sharpened not less than four times to trim 10,000 cards on four sides, or 40,000 trims. Cost, therefore, for sharpening scissors $1, just equal to the sum the printer would charge for trimming the same number of cards the same number of times. I'm thinking Charley Michelson sent Mrs. Miller the wrong story, or she got it mixed up.

After Seventy Years.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is the voice of 70 remembered years of experience out of the (North Carolina) South. "No man's knowledge, here, can go beyond his experience."

Fifty years ago last May was my first visit in Washington, and I read The Post then, and this morning read it. Skipping over the motor cars death list, forgetting the war in Spain, there were as many constructive features found in this morning's Post as was 50 years ago.

Fifty years ago distance was measured with the yardstick and one's movement motivated by the mile post. Today the same distance is measured by the electric tick. So in this comparison, if there is anything odious, its smell is in the fact that there can no longer be isolation.

Russia left a sore spot on our creed in murdering the Czar and family; Hitler with his "bloody purge" let the blood run out; Mussolini, to save his power, killed the Ethiopians. Are we progressing humanely? Probably before this question was asked it might be well to bring forth the picture where we killed the Indians, and bring into the picture the New England Church advertising that each dollar used in building it was the profit from selling slaves to the South. And, after all, ask the question, was Henry George right in his march from "Progress to Poverty"?

W. D. TROY.

"Covering In."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rush to cover local as well as Federal New Deal activities into civil service gives the public little, if any, protection; as the principal beneficiaries are the employes in these agencies whose positions are thereby given the protection of the civil service.

This is extremely unfortunate, as these employes were not selected on the basis of merit, and the common belief is that many are inefficient. Those once covered into civil service can transfer to other civil service units and will have preference over eligibles on the civil service lists. All these emergency employes should have been required to submit to competitive examinations.

Before the civil service is extended it should be made a true merit system in which only the person at the top of the list of eligibles is certified for a position. This is the procedure in England and elsewhere and is the only fair method.

When the names of three eligibles are certified it opens the way for Congressional influence and defeats the merit system.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Hissing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The merits of hissing were somewhat obscure until I read A. W. Burke's admirable analysis of that practice. My little Webster defines "hissing" as the sound "emitted by an angry goose or snake," but one can, however, easily forget the lofty sentiments, or "emotionalism," concerned when the hisses issue from the more noble human throat.

After all, "the fact is that hissing is a good old American custom," certainly on the same plane as our profanity or our happy familiarity with the jovial fire-water. To say otherwise, to assert that we, a free people, protected in our vested rights by Baldwin's Civil Liberties Union, may not observe the manly practices of yore, to rebuke our loyalty to the ways of our progenitors, the goose and the snake, is not that the intolerable "narrowness of some of our reactionaries?" Why should they presume to set the standards of conduct?

In a democratic country any pedestrian-minded person, like myself, should have access to the public platform. If I, being an emotional type, am unable to restrain myself, everyone should be aware of me and how I feel. Without this right to attract attention, any talk of freedom of speech is a farce.

Let me assure you that hissing is an admirable practice, the prop of democracy, and, deprived of this liberty, the little man would be buried in silence. JOHN VAUGHAN.
Washington, Sept. 8.

The Negro In Sports.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ad the rippling eddies go on and on from the stone cast on the surface of a placid pond, so do the reverberations of the scintillating victories of America's dark-skinned athletes in the recent Olympics. In vast Russia, in far-off India, in Hitlerland and even in our own South-land, the social and political significance of the sportsmanship, and the neuro-muscular abilities of Owens, Williams, Woodruff, Luvalle, Johnson, Metcalf, Albritton, Robinson, et. al., has been far-reaching.

America, in many commendable ways, is setting the lead in overcoming race prejudice and adopting inspiring tolerance for the rest of the world.

The moving picture audiences in many American cities have applauded the film appearance of Jesse Owens. Even in Alabama, many hundreds refer to Owens as "our boy." In South Africa, Britishers will democratize sport to a larger degree for the next Olympiad, and will welcome dark-skinned boys; Japanese will coach and encourage more Koreans.

Out of the recognition of human physical abilities, a new deal in the extension of educational, political and economic opportunities to the underprivileged will take place in many lands. It is to be hoped that play, athletic competitions, and education for the Negro in our American South-land will become less segregated, and more in keeping with our vaunted theoretical democracy.

Right here in Washington, it ought to be possible for a Jesse Owens, or a city-wide marble champion, or a Joe Louis to come up through the lists and tournaments. When will the Capital of the Nation meet this challenge of democracy

Why To Reelect Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My version of why Roosevelt should be returned to the White House is brief. He should be elected to enable him to unravel what he has knit in the last four years.

I fear if his opponent is elected he will find many difficult snarls, tangles and knots to be untied and it will be hard to solve the many problems he may become enmeshed in. M. V. DOYLE.

The Post Impressionist

Assault And Flattery.

Post Office, Thursday.

MOST people like to see their names in print: any sort of print except some flagrantly unflattering kind.

But there is a small group to whom all personal publicity is genuinely unpleasant.

Roscoe belongs to this group. That is one reason the Column will call him "Roscoe"—Roscoe not being his name. Another reason is the columnist's desire to avoid Roscoe's enmity.

Roscoe, when the Post-Impressionist first knew him, was a bootlegger. (Our acquaintance, it must be hurriedly explained, was unprofessional.) However, he wasn't what was known, in the early Prohibition days, as a gilt-edged bootlegger; although he frequently got an edge on, it was generally purple.

So his success was small.

Still, he did have some degree of success.

After Repeal "came in," Roscoe attempted many kinds of work, all over the the District. They merely gulped down his precariously earned savings without giving him anything in return—except jail sentences.

He tried to get a liquor license. The law exhumed his record, denied his application, dug up some old and unsettled controversy or other and sent him to Occoquan.

He tried the ponies, for he had cultivated so many credulous customers as a bootlegger that he had himself contracted a case of chronic credulity. He lost on every tip.

He tried running an independent numbers racket—only to make enemies of the plain-clothes men on the one hand and to find, on the other, that free competition had been left no territory by proud monopoly.

He complained that Repeal had ruined Washington.

He said the police had it in for him. Even if there were no truth in the allegation, he was "picked up" pretty frequently. The police may not have had it for him, but they had him in, time and again. He brooded, and people began to whisper that he had persecution-mania.

This is the story of how he cured himself.

"They think it's funny," he confided to your columnist, along about the end of July, when he came to the municipal surface for a brief breath of freedom: "Especially one guy."

Roscoe named the guy—who her shall be nameless.

"It's always him that pinches me," said Roscoe. "And I don't believe he ever pinches anybody else—he wouldn't have time. He specializes in me.

"Know him? He's a little guy—Roscoe is a large one—"with a bum lamp. He always pretends politeness when he picks me up. That's what makes it so hell-and-all. He grins and says: 'Why, if it ain't my old pal Roscoe. You're certainly the slick article, Roscoe. Took me all week to get you.' Flattery—and he knows I know it is.

"Sometime I'm going to show that guy something."

The exhibition seems to have occurred three weeks or so ago.

"He'd pulled his stuff just once too often," Roscoe declared, "and I told him so. When I came out, I hung around a while and asked some quiet questions, and one night I went to a roadhouse over the Maryland line. Sure enough, pretty soon in comes this guy with his girl.

"Well, I walks over to their table and lets him have my schooner of beer right in the face.

"'Now,' I says, 'come on—if you've got the nerve! Here we are in Maryland, where my standing's as good as yours is—you haven't got a warrant, and I've got 50 pounds on you.'

"I don't believe he'd have tried anything if it hadn't been for the girl. But she was yelling her fool head off, so, of course, he had to make a bluff at making good . . .

"Still, it didn't last more'n a second. I was on my way back to Washington before the roadhouse strong-arm men woke up to it.

"I told the guy I'd get him. And I got him."

"And that's all?" inquired the Post-Impressionist.

Roscoe said: "Sure it's all."

"The guy hasn't bothered you again?"

"How do you mean—'bothered?'"

"I mean picked you up, when he has got a warrant or two—in the District."

* * *

"Oh, that!" Roscoe dismissed it with a shrug. No hint of persecution-mania now. "Sure he has. I'm just out. And he'll keep on worse and more'n ever."

"But you think the fight was worth it?"

"Worth it?" echoed Roscoe. "Man, it was a bargain! It was worth a five-year sentence if it was worth a day!"

Fair Enough

Father Coughlin

Bishop Gallagher's declaration that the voice of Father Coughlin is the voice of God is a debatable utterance. It appears to me that an objection should be entered in the record on behalf of those who disagree.

There are many of us who do not admit that Father Coughlin's voice is God's voice and who will be shocked by the action of a cleric who claims for another human being the attributes of God. I understand that all clergymen purport to interpret God's Word but stop short of claiming that they hold His power of attorney. That would bespeak infallibility, and Father Coughlin has been known to recant. Moreover, in the event that Father Coughlin has been singled out by God Himself for this grave and distinguished responsibility, that would mean that all members of the cloth who disagree with him are either fakers or victims of honest but terrible error.

Certainly the bishop's announcement will come as a shock to many Americans who are neither money changers nor Communists and who are just as honest and decent in all respects as the good father. There are millions of Americans who have reason to regard him as an implacable enemy of the American form of government. Father Coughlin is a dictator, calling himself the leader, like Mussolini and Hitler, and reserving to himself absolute control of an organization which aspires to political domination of the country without assuming either the form or the responsibilities of a political party. In the Cleveland convention of his union Father Coughlin obtained a blanket indorsement of all his future acts and decisions, which is contrary to the spirit of popular government.

The millions of Americans who intend to vote for Mr. Roosevet in November will challenge the proposition that it was the voice of God which called the President of the United States a liar and a double-crosser and then delivered an apology. God does not apologize at all, and a shyster apology is worse than none. Many other citizens who respect the office of the President, even though they oppose the policies of the incumbent, will reject the proposition with equal skepticism, not to say patriotic resentment. To be sure, Father Coughlin did attempt belatedly to distinguish between Mr. Roosevelt the President and Mr. Roosevelt the politician, but he himself has learned from personal experience that the man and the office are inseparable. In his own case it has been impossible to disassociate the Rev. Father Coughlin, the priest administering the sacraments, from Charles E. Coughlin, the political demagogue.

One fact which is commonly ignored is the liberty of Americans to acknowledge no God and reject all religion without impairment of their rights. The assumption is becoming more and more aggressive that persons of no religious belief are necessarily bad and have no standing in the community. Yet when it is claimed, with all the prestige of the office which Bishop Gallagher holds, that God speaks through Father Coughlin some of us are forced to seek another answer, for he does not conform to our poor mortal vision of the Creator. He seems ill-tempered, intemperate and so evasive and sly that it is impossible to adore the God who is said to speak directly through him. That lets us out if the bishop is correctly informed.

I do not think it would be a good thing for the country that a man who is said to speak for God should become the dictator above the President. Presidents, as Father Coughlin has pointed out, often are obedient to the desire of those who put them in office. Whether it be the Wall Street bankers, the Communists or the ecclesiastical politicians, a man authorized by his ecclesiastical superior to believe that he speaks for God might introduce some novelties into our Government through a White House stooge which would cause serious inconvenience, not to say turbulence, in the land.

There must be a lot of us groping, wistful human beings who believe in all sincerity that Father Coughlin has no more authority to speak for God and does not know God any more intimately than ourselves.

Portugal to Oust Rebel Ships' Crews

Lisbon, Portugal, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Lisbon government tonight ended its "state of precaution," after the Lisbon ministerial emergency council voted to discharge all sailors from two warships on which revolts were quelled Tuesday.

Whether guilty or innocent of mutiny, all sailors aboard the ships—the Dao and the Alfonso de Alburque—will be discharged.

The commanding officers will be pensioned off and other officers discharged, but may be re-engaged if they can prove they attempted to quell the insurbordination.

Those found guilty of participating in the attempted revolt will be shipped off to penal colonies, the council decided.

Twelve mutineers were killed and 20 wounded before government land batteries shelled the ships into submission.

Camp Bennett to Close Third Season Next Week

Camp Bennett, the summer unit of the Children's Emergency Home, sponsored by the Central Union Mission, will end its third season next week. More than 3,000 children have spent their vacations at the camp since its opening.

Plans for next season call for the inauguration of summer courses in domestic science and manual training. Only elementary courses will be given next year. Eventually, however, it is hoped that facilities for more advanced training will be provided.

Europe's Uncertain Alliances

Restless Pawns Make Scene Different From 1914.

By Barnet Nover.

NOT THE LEAST significant aspect of the international situation in Europe today is its extreme fluidity. In this respect it is in marked contrast with the situation that obtained in the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the World War.

Diplomatic activity in the period between 1910 and 1914, as the published archives clearly show, was no less feverish than it is today. There was the same interminable round of visits by heads of state, premiers and foreign ministers; the same jockeying for position; the same search for allies and satellites; the same race in armaments.

But by 1910, if not sooner, the basic diplomatic combinations were already firmly established. On the one side were Germany and Austria, allies since 1879, with Italy their nominal partner. On the other side were France and Russia, with Great Britain friendly to both.

The Franco-Russian combination had withstood innumerable changes of government at Paris; Russia's refusal to support France at Fashoda; the weakness and inefficiency displayed by the Czarist regime in its war with Japan; the Kaiser's persistent pressure on the Czar and the improvement in Russo-German relations that took place around 1910.

Austro-German Entente Held Obstinately Firm.

THE AUSTRO-GERMAN combination had withstood Bismarck's flirtations with Russia and a succession of Balkan crises. It had held firm dispite Austria's very lukewarm support of Germany at the Algeciras conference and Germany's irritation with its partner in the course of the Bosnian crisis when Austria, under the aggressive Arenthal, took the bit into its teeth and annexed Bosnia-Herzegovina without even consulting its ally.

While Italy, since 1902, kept a foot in both camps it remained, nominally at least, a loyal member of the Triple Alliance. Nor did Great Britain really enjoy the freedom of action by which presumably it set such great store. Although a sincere friend of peace, and eager for good relations with all the other powers, Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, never failed to make a distinction between Britain's friends—France and Russia—and the nations outside the charmed circle of the Triple Entente.

This does not mean that the partners in these respective combinations enjoyed entirely harmonious relations with each other. They did not. Certainly from 1908 on the Wilhelmstrasse was more than a little suspicious of the policies being pursued by the Ballhausplatz; the British never entirely got over their feeling that Russia, with whom they had made an entente in 1907, was still the "Bear That Walks Like a Man," and Russia's policy in Persia, which St. Petersburg and London had made the sacrificial goat on the altar of Anglo-Russian friendship, was viewed with ill-concealed suspicion in Downing street.

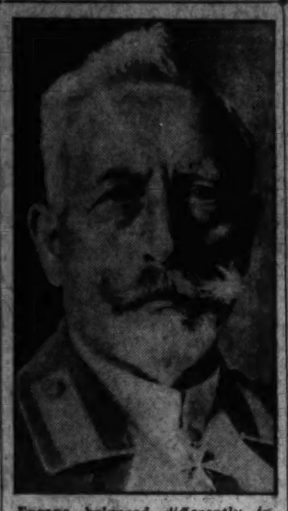

Nor does it mean that efforts were not made by one camp to break up the opposing coalition. There were many of these all the way from Kaiser Wilhelm's attempts to create a continental coalition of the Dual and Triple Alliances against Great Britain, to France's persistent and not unsuccessful wooing of Italy and Germany's efforts to reach a naval modus vivendi with Great Britain. Nonetheless the combinations held.

Franco-Czech Alliance Only Permanence Today.

BUT WHAT do we find today? With the possible exception of the Franco-Czechoslovak alliance there is hardly a diplomatic combination that has come into being since the end of the World War that has not been subjected to such terrific stresses and strains as to constitute a very uncertain quantity in the balance of power. Repeatedly fevered imaginations have conjured up now this continental alignment, now that. But in a few brief months the picture that has been drawn has been so completely changed as to be unrecognizable.

Not so long ago, for instance, it was being taken for granted that Poland had permanently been lost to France as an ally, that it had succumbed completely to the blandishments of Hitler and was prepared to join in an attack on the Soviet Union. Today, both in Warsaw and Paris there is jubilation at the restoration in pristine form of the Franco-Polish alliance of 1921.

The never wholly quenched suspicions of Nazi Germany's ultimate aims and the financial assistance which Poland so desperately needs and which France alone can provide has apparently caused the Polish Republic to return to its old diplomatic moorings. No doubt this will cause chagrin in Berlin. But it is not unlikely that the Bolsheviks, too, will greet the news with wry faces. For with Poland back in the French camp Russia is no longer France's No. 1 ally in eastern Europe. By the same token, it is not unlikely that France, in the future, particularly if M. Blum's Popular Front government gives way to one more dependent on the Center, may be less interested in safeguarding Russia's security than it has been. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, in visiting Paris in search of trade and friendship, knew what he was about.

Relations Of Germany And Italy Boil Steadily.

THE SUCCESSIVE changes in German-Italian relations have been even more kaleidoscopic. When the Fuehrer decided to broaden his knowledge of the world by going to Venice, where he paid his respects to the Duce, this meeting of disciple and master was immediately hailed as marking the establishment of a coalition of dissatisfied powers stretching across Europe from the North Sea to the Adriatic and the Mediterranean.

The headlines forecasting this event might have been kept permanently in type. The same statement has been made whenever German-Italian relations have shown a tendency to improve. What must be remembered, however, is that the Berlin-Rome roulette wheel has turned up black as often as red during these years since Hitler came into power.

The Venice meeting was followed, not many months later,

Mountain Climbing

By William Lyon Phelps.

Mont Blanc.

From my friend, Bernhard Ragner, in Paris, I learn that it is exactly 150 years ago this summer that Mont Blanc was first climbed. It is the highest mountain in France and the highest mountain in Europe. Many Americans do not know that it is in France. It rises 15,782 feet; Pike's Peak 14,108. There two mountains are not nearly so high as many others, but they are more famous than many that excel them in stature. Mount McKinley, in Alaska, is 20,300 feet, and stands up higher from the country surrounding it than any other mountain on earth. It is a pity that it is so difficult even to see it. Aconcagua, in South America, is 23,000.

* * * *

I am very glad that so many brave and ambitious men are willing to climb big mountains and write about them, for I enjoy their books much more than I should enjoy accompanying them. I have always liked the remark of G. K. Chesterton: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, but I will not lift up my carcass thither."

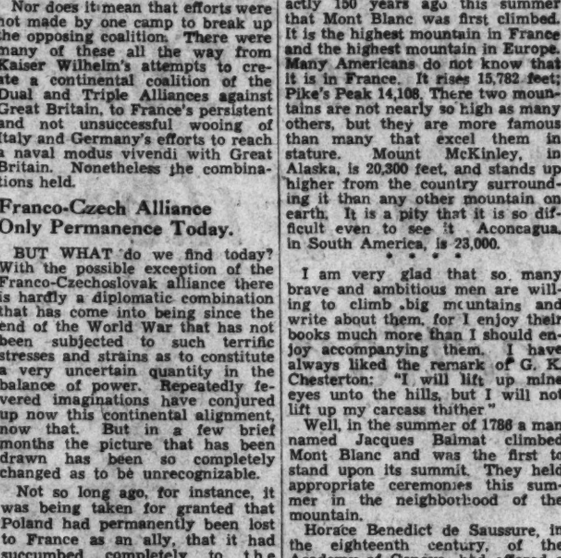

Well, in the summer of 1786 a man named Jacques Balmat climbed Mont Blanc and was the first to stand upon its summit. They held appropriate ceremonies this summer in the neighborhood of the mountain.

Horace Benedict de Saussure, in the eighteenth century, of the Academy of Geneva, had offered a reward to the first man who succeeded. For years the natives of Chamonix tried to discover a way to the summit and failed. Finally three men set out; they were followed by Balmat, but not wishing the company to be increased they purposely eluded him, and he went on alone. He stayed all night on the mountain, returned to the village, and kept his mouth shut. Later he told a young doctor, Paccard, that he thought he knew the way up.

Off the Record.

By Ed Reed

"Pardon me for snooping—I thought you might be someone I knew!"

Diplomats Feverishly Trying To Outdo Each Other.

by the massing of Italian troops along the Brenner Pass in warning to Germany that any attempt to come to the aid of the Nazi putschists at Vienna would meet with the armed resistance of Italy. More recently, in consequence of Hitler's apparent capitulation on the Austrian question (the second in three years) champagne is again flowing at banquets presumably signalizing the restoration of German-Italian amity.

But one may well ask how long it will last this time. Certainly France has not permanently abandoned its hope of winning Italy to the anti-German camp. Not for nothing did Pierre Laval visit Rome and Leon Blum agree to the abandonment of sanctions. Not for nothing is Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general of the League, but also a French citizen, in conference with Count Ciano, Mussolini's foreign minister and son-in-law.

"Sacro egoismo" is a concept that was not thrown out of the window by the Duce, together with free speech and civil liberties. If there is anything to be gained by keeping a foot in both camps or in joining forces anew with the Latin brother of the north, it can be taken for granted that he will not hesitate to change the direction of his policy.

For the moment, to be sure, a new tie binds Germany and Italy. Since a victory for the Popular Front government in Spain would be a blow to fascism everywhere, Italy and Germany have both been giving aid to the rebels. But such co-operation is essentially negative. The victory of the Spanish rebels would mean the addition of one more Fascist state to the already long list. It would mean ennanced prestige for Mussolini and Hitler. But dictators, like prima donnas, want the center of the stage for themselves. Permanent co-operation between Fuehrer and Duce could only be made possible if one or the other agreed to pursue a static policy in his international dealings, which is inconceivable, or if there was enough loot for them to divide. But however much he may be prepared to use a threatened German-Italian alliance as a club with which to beat France and Great Britain into making concessions, Mussolini realizes that in the long run anything that involves the strengthening of Germany, the increase of its prestige or the expansion of its domain constitutes a threat to Italy.

Even Little Powers Reveal General Unrest.

BUT THE little nations too, those nations marked out as pawns on the diplomatic chessboard, have refused to play their assigned roles. Rumania is a much less certain ally of France, with Titulescu out, than it was some months ago. But there is no certainty that, should it decide to move closer to Germany, it will long remain in that camp either.

Yugoslavia's love for France goes back at least to the 1927 treaty of alliance and has been kept blooming by a golden shower. But the nearer France moves to Italy, the greater the tendency at Belgrade to fall into the altogether willing arms of Berlin. Even little Belgium, geographically as essential a part of the French defense system, is restive.

And so all along the line. The only permanent thing about the European diplomatic situation these days is its impermanence. And if that only tends to make the individual nations more intent on building up their own defenses, at whatever cost, it constitutes an element making for the continuance of peace, though an uncertain peace. For no nation is prepared to launch a war that may become general without allies upon whom it can depend. And the history of post-war Europe makes clear that few, if any, allies can be depended on. Even an uncertain peace is better than none.

Garofalo to Head Catholics' Forum

The Catholic Forum, sponsored annually by the Fourth Degree of the Knights of Columbus, will this year be under the direction of Past Faithful Navigator Carmine Garofalo, it was announced yesterday. The program will comprise a series of five Sunday lectures on various phases of Catholicism.

Other appointments announced yesterday include that of Past State Deputy George E. Herring as chairman of the membership committee, Thomas F. Carlin as chairman of the sick committee and Rossa F. Downing as chairman of the Manresa Retreat movement.

Newly elected officers for 1936-37 will be installed at the first meeting of the year, to be held at the Hotel Mayflower September 21. The new officers are: Navigator, Francis J. Rafterry; captain, Alfred A. McGarraghy; pilot, Thomas F. Carlin; admiral, Francis J. Hillyard; comptroller, J. Fred Brady; scribe, Michael J. Racioppi; inner sentinel, Augustus Neale; outer sentinel, John Grambo; purser, Thomas K. Gallaher.

Film Holds Key To Spy Charges

Davenport, Iowa, Sept. 9 (AP).—A strip of film found in their camera may result in Federal action toward a young Japanese couple detained after snapping pictures near the United States arsenal at Rock Island, Ill., according to United States Commissioner Albert Block.

Nobzana Tsunura and Miss Toniye were arrested today by Davenport police directly across the Mississippi River from the armament plant. Tsunura said his camera was focused on a boat in the river.

France to End Mandate In Syria, Signs Treaty

Paris, Sept. 9 (AP).—France set Syria on its way to independence today by signing a treaty providing for termination of the French mandate there.

A month of negotiation between Syrian Nationalists and the French government came to fruition with the signatures of Pierre Vienot, undersecretary for North Africa, and Hachem Bey El Atasso, head of the Syrian delegation, sealing the accord.

Hitler Demand Strikes At Last Allied 'Shackle'

Bid For Colonies' Return Follows Long Campaign Of Defiance.

("Give us back our colonies!" Dictator Hitler said, in effect, in his striking proclamation of German independence and ambitions at Nurnberg. The chief of the Associated Press foreign service tells in the following story how Germany has steadily whittled away the provisions of the Versailles treaty until today the chancellor now moves definitely for the return of the colonies.—Editor's note.)

By John Evans.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—Adolf Hitler struck at the last of "the shackles of the Versailles treaty" today.

He reached overseas in a definite move to take back Germany's colonies wrested from her by the Allies in 1918.

The Nazi dictator formally proclaimed his intent to make his country "independent" of the world at the opening of the fourth annual Nazi convention at Nurnberg where 600,000 party troops cheered the defiant words which Der Fuehrer can back with one of the world's great war machines.

Germany, stripped of colonies, broken in finances, beaten in spirit a generation ago, rises today a power that repeatedly has defied her conquerors. Germans feel the worst of their struggle for "freedom" is over.

Three Steps Remain.

Apparently there remain three steps in Hitler's program:

1. Return of the colonies, several times the area of Germany.

2. Enlargement of the Reich to include all German-speaking peoples. This might take in Austria, part of Czechoslovakia, Eupen and Malmedy, the Polish corridor.

3. Expansion to make Germany strong economically. This might comprise the addition of Russia's Ukraine, the great granery, Alsace and Lorraine, iron and coal riches, and even the grain, livestock and oil country of Yugoslavia, Rumania and Hungary.

This is not an offical program, but the dream of many Germans and the fear of her neighbors.

Republican Germany spent 15 years, from 1918 to 1932, "nibbling" at the peace treaty, contesting clauses and defaulting on reparations she argued she could not pay. Hitler's Nazis in four years put Germany on the map.

The republicans whittled down treaty terms, successively sought "understandings" with France and eventually defaulted on the war-debt payments. They paved the way for the more striking acts of Hitler.

Won Saar Vote.

Hitler won the Saar plebiscite in January, 1935, getting back those vast coal fields.

On June 18, 1935, England, alarmed by Germany's supposed intent to rebuild her navy, signed a separate agreement recognizing Hitler's right to a sea fleet one-third that of Great Britain.

May 21, 1935, Hitler defied France and her allies by restoring conscription. There followed the announcement, long forseen, that Germany already had built army equipment and a great air fleet.

March 7, 1936, Hitler's troops reoccupied the Rhineland and August 2 the one-year conscription was increased to two years.

Hitler's announcement Germany wants her colonies back is his second official one. He proclaimed that plan March 28, 1939, but left the date vague. It remained vague today.

German colonies, taken by the allies for their own or under mandate, have an area of 1,032,757 square miles. They are:
German East Africa, 370,000 sq. miles, Belgian and British mandate.
German Southwest Africa, 322,400 sq. miles, Union of South Africa mandate.
Cameroons in Africa, 305,000 sq. miles, French and British mandate.
Togoland in Africa, 34,439 sq. miles, French and British mandate.
Kiaochow in Shantung, China, 200 sq. miles, Japanese mandate.

Railroad Station Bombed in Vienna

Vienna, Sept. 9 (AP).—Two bombs exploded in traveling bags at Vienna's west station and in a railway coach near Semmering today, but officials scoffed at rumors they were set off by Communists as a demonstration against the presence in Vienna of King Edward of England.

There was no damage at the station, but an employe was injured in the coach.

At the time, the King was attending the Vienna Fair, displaying keen interest in the exhibits. Later he spent 70 minutes with the ear specialist, Prof Heinrich Neumann, who X-rayed the King's ear and gave him a light treatment.

The monarch planned to see the specialist again tomorrow.

Before the examination, the King's Adjutant and Mrs. Ernest Simpson, of Baltimore, one of the King's holiday party, visited Dr. Neumann.

Two Suspected of Plot Are Absolved by Soviet

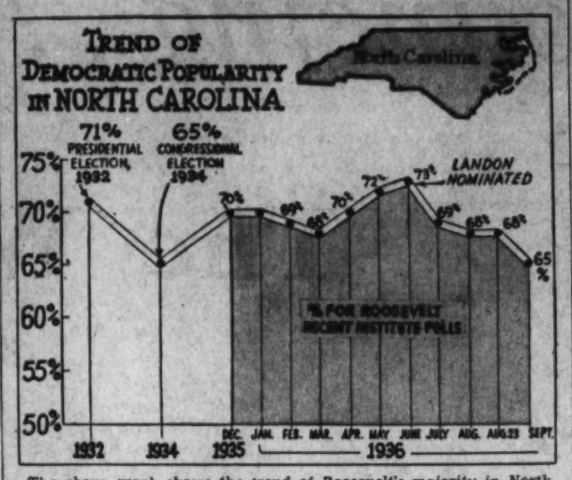

Moscow, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Soviet government tonight dropped its investigatoin of Nicolai Burkharin, editor, and Alexei Rykoff, commissar of posts and telegraphs, and absolved them of counter-revolutionary activity.

The pair had been under investigation since their names were mentioned during the trial of 16 counter-revolutionary plotters executed for attempting to overthrow the Soviet regime and assassinate Dictator Josef Stalin.

Well, They Left the Dog.

Salt Lake City, Sept. 9 (AP).—Berdie Hines bought a shepherd dog to attend to the burglars who have been calling at his home. Last night, he told police, he came home to discover that two suits of clothing, three quilts and all of his chickens were missing. The dog, he said, was chewing a $25 Government check the visitors had overlooked.

Poll Indicates Roosevelt Slipping a Bit in South

The above graph shows the trend of Roosevelt's majority in North Carolina in successive Institute of Public Opinion polls. Note that although the State is approximately two to one for Roosevelt today, his popularity has declined since Landon's nomination.

May Be President's Reason for Attending Seven-State Rally Today at Charlotte, N. C.; Georgia Dips 13 Points.

Today in Charlotte, N. C., Southern Democrats will hold a political pep rally of seven States. The sponsors have frankly declared that the purpose of the jamboree is "to make the Solid South more solid for Roosevelt." The following analysis by the Institute of Public Opinion shows where Roosevelt is strongest, and weakest, in the South today.

By George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 9.—One possible reason why President Roosevelt plans to appear personally at the rally of Southern Democrats in Charlotte, N. C., Thursday is indicated in the latest Institute of Public Opinion poll. Although his popular majority in North Carolina is large today, it is lower than in any of the other Southern States along the Atlantic seaboard, the poll shows.

The President polls 65 per cent of the major party vote in North Carolina today to Landon's 35 per cent. Although this is a Democratic margin of approximately 2 to 1, the President's popularity has declined eight points since Landon was nominated in June. That month the Institute showed Roosevelt polling 73 per cent in North Carolina.

Today's figure is also six points lower than in 1932, when Roosevelt carried the State with 71 per cent of the major party vote.

The only Southern areas where Roosevelt polls less than in North Carolina are three "inland" States, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Kentucky. But even in these three weakest links in the Southern Democratic chain the President polls 60 per cent or more.

Miss.	96%	91%	92%	— 4
S. C.	98	91	88	—10
Ala.	86	81	80	— 6
Ark.	87	76	80	— 7
Texas	89	80	80	— 9
Ga.	92	86	79	—13
La.	93	79	76	—17
Fla.	75	72	67	— 8
Va.	70	66	67	— 3
N. C.	71	73	65	— 6
Tenn.	67	66	63	— 4
Okla.	73	61	60	—13
Ky.	60	62	60	0
All South	76	73	69	— 7

The States which will send delegates to the rally in Charlotte, which is being held for the purpose of making the "solid South more solid for Roosevelt," are the two Carolinas, Virginia, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama and Georgia. The above table shows that among these seven States the President has lost most popularity in Georgia since 1932, the drop being 13 points.

Talmadge a Factor.

Some of the decline has undoubtedly been caused by Gov. Eugene Talmadge's persistent attacks on the New Deal.

Mississippi continues to be the most Democratic State both in the South and in the Nation, with approximately nine out of every ten major party voters favoring Roosevelt. But its next-door neighbor, Louisiana, holds the distinction of being the State with the second greatest defection from Roosevelt since 1932, the Democratic vote being 17 points under that of four years ago. Greatest defection, 19 points, has come in South Dakota.

Lemke and Thomas, leading third party candidates, poll but a tiny fraction of the vote in the South. The Southern vote for all parties in the Institute poll is as follows:

Roosevelt	67.9%
Landon	29.9
Lemke	1.4
Thomas	.5
Others	.3
	100.0%

Hitler Tells Aim To Spur Trade, Regain Colonies

have laughed at me as a crazy man. The national leadership has worked a miracle.

"Today Germany, in her public leadership and military defense, stands more secure than ever before.

"Even the Jewish scribes can no longer lie about us. What we have achieved, we have done at nobody's expense. If other nations had attended to their own business, there would be a stronger community of interest in Europe today."

Tying up this lack of "community interest," the proclamation struck at communism.

"Bad times reign all about us," he said:

"Communist wire pullers we never have feared. We have always warned others against them.

"We feel ourselves bound to all countries which follow the same impulses as ours."

Returning to the economic phases of the Nazi regime, the proclamation said that because of the density of Germany's population and the restricted domestic area, the outside world does not fully comprehend the difficulties confronting the Reich economically.

"Germany is compelled," Hitler's manifesto said, "to obtain raw materials by the sale of industrial goods abroad. It is regrettable that the world does not understand this.

"To buy one unit of fat, several units of German products must be exported. We must export at all costs.

"It shows a lamentable lack of understanding of our position when we are criticized for low export prices.

"Had Germany not lost her colonies, we could master our difficulties more easily. A state leadership like that in Germany today would know how to convert colonies into economic success."

With all this, Hitler said, Germany's standard of living has risen to a relatively high level.

The civil war in Spain, where Fascist rebels are fighting Socialist-Communist government forces, came in for excoriation in the speech by Julius Streicher which preceded the Hitler proclamation.

Streicher, Nurnberg district chief, a leader in anti-Semitic movements, said:

"Germany is determined not to tolerate the organized and systematic destruction of civilization."

Singling out a group of Italian Fascists who are officially attending the convention, Streicher greeted them with special words of praise and declared that Germany "year after year has raised its voice" against bolshevism.

(Nurnberg throughout the convention has been placarded with signs labeling bolshevism "World Enemy No. 1.")

France was not mentioned by name in the earlier speeches, but Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio, in his keynote address declared governments "already are unable among their own people to enforce the neutrality (toward Spain) which was suggested by themselves."

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 9.—Whitehall heard a new German demand for colonies in silence today, but informed persons said the door was not officially shut on the question.

Under Versailles mandates, the United Kingdom holds more than 840,000 square miles of former German colonial possessions.

It was recalled that Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain, on last April 6, told Parliament the government was not entertaining the transfer of any mandates entrusted to it by the League of Nations, however.

As for the South African viewpoint, J. H. Hofmeyr, South African minister of the interior, said at Dar-es-Salaam:

"There is no justification for handing over African communities just as if they were bales of goods or articles of commercial exchange.

"If Africans are to be treated as pawns in the European game, then it is right for us as fellow Africans to stand together and say: 'Hands off Africa.'"

France "Won't Yield."

Paris, Sept. 9 (AP).—Informed sources said today that France, in the face of Adolf Hitler's demand for Germany's lost colonies, would refuse to yield her share in Africa under the menace of the growing German army.

Officials previously had taken the attitude that France would keep Togo and Cameroons (Kamerun), mandated jointly to France and Great Britain, at any price. But there was no immediate official comment on Hitler's proclamation today.

League Awaits Parleys.

Geneva, Sept. 9 (AP).—League of Nations officials said today the return of Germany's colonies can come only as a result of negotiations with the mandate powers, mainly Great Britain and France.

Economic Nationalism Hit.

Vatican City, Sept. 9 (AP).—A front page article in Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, today attacked economic nationalism as a source of war.

The article was written before Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler proclaimed a four-year economic program at Nurnberg to make Germany independent of the rest of the world.

that time was an 800,000-bale cut in September, 1927.

Cotton trade reaction varied from claims that the estimates were too low even in the drought area west of the Mississippi, to suggestions that the report indicated error in the August 12 estimate of 12,481,000 bales, which was above the highest private reports. The September 1 report, on the other hand, is far below most private estimates.

At the Agriculture Department, it was denied changes in some of the officials charged with compiling crop reports could have been reflected in the estimates. The last important change, when Joseph A. Becker became chairman, was more than a year ago, it was pointed out. Officials said it is a practice to rotate the experts making the cotton estimates.

The Commodity Credit Corporation entered the cotton picture as a farmer relief agency under an executive order in October, 1933. It acquired the original bloc of its cotton by 12-cent loans to farmers, with cotton as collateral. This had the effect of assuring the farmer 12 cents a pound for his cotton. The corporation borrowed the money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation at 3 per cent, and loaned it to the farmer at 4 per cent. Last year it made some loans to farmers on a 10-cent basis, and still has 32,869 bales of this 10-cent cotton. Commodity Corporation officials conceded the price might go high enough for the farmer to realize sufficiently on his crop to pay off his indebtedness on these 32,869 bales in the next few months.

The Commodity Corporation has committed itself not to release any cotton from the loan stocks during the months of September, October, November and December, except upon payment of the full loan price plus interest and carrying charges. This policy was adopted to assure no interference with the new crop market.

Expected to Resume Release.

After January 1, it is expected to resume the release of large blocks of the loan cotton, begun in April of this year. Altogether 1,404,892 bales of the cotton was released to farmers mostly upon terms that assured repayment by farmers of a minimum of 11¼ cents a pound on the 12-cent loan cotton, and 10¼ cents a pound on its 11-cent loan cotton.

The Commodity Corporation has not yet computed its losses on this transactfon, but officials said it was probably around $10 a bale. This would give a loss on transactions to date of about $14,000,000. If the same terms were specified on release of cotton still held, the corporation's total losses on loans would run to around $44,000,000.

Ludke Children Again Barred From Schools

Six Will Not Salute Flag; Family Attorney Maps Appeal to Courts.

Two more children of August A. Ludke, 40-year-old member of the sect of Jehovah's Witnesses, were barred from Prince Georges County schools yesterday after four Ludke youngsters were refused attendance at schools in Oxon Hill for their refusal to salute the American flag.

Anticipating a refusal to allow the children to enter, Edmund D. Campbell, Washington lawyer representing the family, announced he would either file a mandamus proceedings in the Circuit Court of Appeals or make a direct appeal to the State Board of Education.

Should a court order be obtained, it would rescind the decree of the county board of education prohibiting the children from attending county schools.

The board's order has been interpreted as affecting only the four younger children, elementary school students, until yesterday.

Prior to the year's opening exercises, Ludke brought his four boys and two girls before Principal William T. Jobe. The children reaffirmed their decision "not to put the American flag before God" without prompting from their father.

As he herded his children into an automobile for their return home, Ludke said he would confer later with Superintendent of Schools Nicholas Orem.

He added he would seek permission to keep the youngsters in school at Oxon Hill pending litigation for appeal to the State board.

F. A. Carter Rites Will Be Saturday

Funeral services for Fred A. Carter, 48, real estate broker and veteran of the World War, who died Tuesday at his residence, 2943 Fenton street, will be held at his residence at 10 a. m. Saturday, followed by burial in Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

A native of Marion, Kans., Carter had lived in Washington for the last 15 years. During the war he served with the Artillery and Courier service in France, holding the rank of captain. On his return to the United States he was made a major, and for a time after the war he was superintendent of cadets at Kentucky Military Institute, in Louisville. Throughout his residence here he had been in the real estate business.

Carter was a member of the Masons, Almas Temple, National Sojourners, Army-Navy Country Club, Army and Navy Club and Heroes of '76.

Surviving him are his wife, Russelle C. Carter, daughter of the late Col. George Russell Cecil, and a stepson, Alfred E Burch, both of Washington, and a brother, Col. Arthur H. Carter, of New York.

Mrs. Mayhard Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Warner Mayhard, 84, author of "Birds of Washington and Vicinity," who died at her home, 2844 Wisconsin avenue, Tuesday after a lingering illness, will be held at her family estate at Rockville, Md., at 11 a. m. today, followed by private burial there.

Mrs. Mayhard was famous as a student of birds. Once she sent a list of all the birds seen here to President Theodore Roosevelt. This list now is kept in the Roosevelt Museum, in New York.

She was a native of Great Bend, Pa., where she lived for more than 50 years. She was a former president of the Eistophos Science Club, and held membership in the Audubon Society and the Twentieth Century Club.

Surviving her are a son, George M. Mayhard, and a sister, Mrs. Harriett Warner, of Montrose, Pa. She was the widow of George C. Mayhard.

Ranchers to Share In AAA Benefits

By the Associated Press.

A "range improvement program," permitting thousands of Western ranchers to share in the $470,000,000 of benefit payments which the AAA will distribute this year under the soil conservation act, was announced yesterday at the Department of Agriculture.

The program will apply during the four remaining months of this year. Approved by Secretary Wallace, it will be open to any producers of livestock on privately owned or privately controlled land.

Unlike the cultivated land program already in operation, the range-building program will not involve retirement or shift of certain acreage, officials said.

Instead, it was explained, ranchmen will be paid for range-building practices, described as regrassing lands, digging wells, developing water reservoirs and similar projects.

WHAT PHYSICAL AND MENTAL FATIGUE DOES TO MEN PAST 40

Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.

This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Ze-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by all modern druggists. Ze-ak is the formula of a distinguished American physician who has written a booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," a copy of which will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Ze-ak Co., 58 W. 45th St., N. Y.

TO PHYSICIANS: Samples, professional literature and clinical data on Ze-ak will be sent gratis if requested on your letterhead or card.

Hydrocarbons Put Scientists Step Nearer Riddle of Growth

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 9.—Hydrocarbons are the "speedometers" that time and regulate the formation of brains, eyes and all the other parts in the prenatal development that begins with conception.

This much of the riddle of growth was reported as solved at the Harvard tercentenary conference of arts and sciences today. Hydrocarbons are most commonly met with in petroleum and coal, but they also are vital fractions of some of the body's secretions, and have known abilities to speed up normal growth into cancer.

They were identified by Hans Spemann, Nobel prize winner and zoology professor of the University of Freiburg, who spoke on the "mode of operation of the organizer." "Organizer" is the technical term used by biologists to describe substances of puzzling chemical composition which have the ability to cause the growth of each organ in turn in embryonic life.

Sees Oriental Ascendancy.

In the symposia on man, which carry through this last week of the tercentenary, Corrado Gini, professor of statistics and sociology, University of Rome, traced a cycle in which he found government authority now tending to supplant democracy. He predicted that the yellow race might carry forward civilization if the whites failed.

"It is certain that in the better known periods of history we may recognize some definite tendencies, dynamic in character, in the relations between authority and the individual," he said.

"In the field of political authority, a cycle has long been perceived: The power concentrated at one time in one or few hands gradually becomes more fractional and diffused until reaching a regime of Democracy, from which more or less suddenly an autocratic regime is built.

"In the internal economic field, there has been a distinct transition from corporatism to individualism, and now we observe the contrary movement toward a corporative or syndicalist state."

He said that Russia of all countries was the one in which "the Bolshevist ideal might consistently take root." This he attributed to "traits of docility, discipline and passive submission which seem prevalent in Russia."

"Dark Ages" Unlikely.

He said a return to the "Dark Ages" was unlikely but that he was not sure the white races would be the ones always to carry civilization ahead.

Edward B. Bailey, University of Glasgow; Andrew C. Lawson, University of California, and Norman L. Bowen, Carnegie Institution of Washington, all geologists, described the origins and structure of mountains.

Dr. Bowen answered a geological puzzle 30 years old—why so many different kinds of rocks are formed by upheavals of volcanic activity. In the laboratory he has melted minerals and sands to reproduce these "magmas" in miniature. He showed that these molten rocks crystallize as they cool; that the outer portions crystallize first, leaving the interior liquid.

The new crystals are squeezed out, like grape skins and seeds in a wine press, by the pressure of the surrounding earth. They form one kind of rock. The remaining molten rock after their loss is different in structure and as it cools forms a different type of crystalline rock.

Couple Seized In $10,000 D.C. Gem Robberies

Man and Woman Detained in Series of Vacation Housebreakings.

An anonymous informer's tip yesterday led to the arrest of James Solomon, colored, 50, of the 1300 block Q street northwest, in connection with the theft of more than $10,000 worth of jewels and valuables from homes in the northwest section while owners were on vacation.

Also held was Mary Brown, 44, colored, 1300 block T street northwest. Both were detained for investigaiton. Detectives said most of the loot had been recovered.

Burglaries the police claim have been solved by the arrests are those of the homes of Charles B. Peck, 1909 Twenty-third street northwest; Edwin P. Raymond, 2320 Tracy place northwest; Mrs. Mary Rafyer, 2014 Wyoming avenue northwest, and Rear Admiral Sumner Kittelle, 2229 California street northwest.

The police also hold Soloman responsible for attempting to break into the home of Mrs. Duncan Cameron, 2539 Massachusetts avenue northwest, where a prowler was frightened away by a burglar alarm.

Henry Fonda Is Engaged To N. Y. Society Matron

New York, Sept. 8 (AP).—A marriage license was issued at the municipal building today to Henry James Fonda, the stage and screen actor, and Mrs. Frances Ford Brokaw, prominent in New York Society.

They plan a church wedding here Sunday.

They arrived here together last Friday from England, where Fonda said he became engaged to Mrs. Brokaw while he was making a picture.

Proof Asked in Corwin Attacks On Supreme Court Panelings

Princeton Professor's Challenge of Accuracy of Two Paintings in New Building Brings Quick Replies From Architects.

If Dr. Edward Samuel Corwin, professor of jurisprudence at Princeton University, wishes to carry on his criticisms of two historical panelings in the new Supreme Corrt Building, he will have to prove that King John of England couldn't write his name.

In an address before members of the Harvard Tercentenary Conference of Arts and Sciences yesterday, it was reported by the Associated Press, the Princetonian said that a panel depicting King John signing the Magna Charta was not accurate because that monarch "probably could not read or write, and, at any rate, the Great Seal, affixed by the chancellor, was thought to serve such occasions very adequatey."

"Let Prof. Corwin prove that King John couldn't write."

About anothre panel Corwin said:

A door panel of the new Supreme Court Building pictures Chief Justice Marshall handing to Justice Story the former's opinion in Marbury versus Madison, although this opinion was rendered some nine years prior to Story's appointment on the bench."

To this Gilbert said:

"The panel pictures Marshall and Story together, and they served together on the bench. It has nothing to do with Marbury versus Madison."

David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, had this to add:

"It is merely a tribute to two great justices. The decision was not considered when the panel was made. The criticism is unjustified."

Prof. Corwin also toofl a shot at "Senator Borah's speech last February 22, in which Washington is represented as delivering the farewell address in the new Capital named for him some four years before the Capital was open for business."

As Senator Borah was out of the city, no statement was forthcoming from him on that statement.

German Plane Flying To U. S. From Azores

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The German Lufthansa plane Zephyr started a projected transatlantic flight to Port Washington, Long Island, at 7:10 p. m. (Eastern standard time) when catapulted from a base ship at Horta, the Azores, Flight Capt. J. Blankenbrg reported to the Pan-American Airways here.

Blankenburg said it was dark and cloudy at the start of the flight and head winds were reported along two-thirds of the 2,390-mile direct route. The Zephyr is expected to reach Port Washington about 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

A sister ship, the Aeolus, was catapulted last night from the Schwabenland, a base ship, but was forced to turn back after it had completed 600 miles of the flight.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Ponders Advisability of Trying for Job in Home State Versus Looking for One Here.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school graduate 25 years old. Six months ago my father died and mother and I came here to live with my married sister. Grief and financial loss have broken mother's health. Seeing her slip a little each day without being able to help in any way is a terrible worry to us.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, I think it would be best for mother if we went back to a small town in Ohio where we lived for many years, and where mother has many friends. But my biggest problem is to find work there. About a month ago I put in my application for a job with the Ohio Home for Epileptics, located there. So that my name won't be kept on a waiting list, I am wondering if there is someone with influence who might help me get the job. My parents lived in that State for 20 years. Would our Representative or Senator be able to help?

* * * *

My sister says if I got work here, and mother saw me happy and getting ahead, that her condition would improve. But it seems impossible to find a job here. We formerly lived inside the District of Columbia, and I held a temporary job for a while. But now we live in Maryland and while I answer all classified advertisements of jobs the minute I read them, I get no response. Could you give me the name of some employment office where I could pay and be assured of a job? I have had two years' experience as a billing clerk, and can do general office work. I have thought of apprenticing myself to a dressmaker, if I could make a small salary while learning. What do you think of such a plan? Anything you can suggest will be appreciated.

DISCONTENTED.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR DISCONTENTED: Your Representative and your Senator are the only persons in a position to say whether or not they would be able to help you get a position with the State Home for Epileptics. I suggest you make a personal call at their offices on Capitol Hill and submit your problem to them or their secretarial representatives. If you could get letters of introduction from friends back home it would help in getting their ear.

* * * *

Your sister is probably right in saying your mother would take a turn for the better if she saw you gainfully occupied and contented here. I cannot recommend one commercial employment office above another; but I suggest you make application at the United States Employment Service, Indiana avenue, and also contact the placement bureaus of the larger secretarial schools here, in order to learn what fields of office work for women are least crowded.

* * * *

If you have a talent for dressmaking, and would be happy doing such work, by all means look into the possibility of apprenticing yourself into that profession. Necessity is the mother of invention, and in this emergency if you haven't enough initiative to set about helping yourself, there isn't much help anyone else can give you.

M. H.

Wants "Highbrow" Job

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there such a thing in Washington as a "highbrow" employment agency? I want a position, but not one as just a stenographer, typist, secretary and the type of job that is usually advertised in classified columns and offered by various employment agencies in town. I have gotten jobs that way and worked at them, but never anything that was particularly interesting or offered any challenge to a person's intelligence and originality.

* * * *

Washington being the Capital of the United States and a cultural center as well, I know there are discriminating employers there who have interesting positions they wish filled with persons who are more than a machine. And if you can suggest a way to get in contact with them I would like to find it out. I am 28, a college graduate, have worked in advertising, newspapers, business offices, so you can see I'm not just a vague yearner for things out of my reach. Sincerly yours,

AMBITIOUS.

* * * *

DEAR AMBITIOUS: If there is one employment agency in Washington more "highbrow" than another I do not know of it. The mental and physical laziness which prompts such a question causes me to wonder if, after all, the questioner has any great intelligence, originality and initiative to bring to a challenging job. The thing to do is to make the rounds of employment offices and decide for yourself if there is one highbrow enough to supply your wants.

* * * *

Have you tried advertising your unique capabilities in the smart magazines and weeklies which regularly devote a column to "situations wanted"? These advertisements are sometimes scrutinized by discriminating employers who are in search of an employe who is "more than a machine." And sometimes the advertiser gets a job that way. If you have looks, style, personality and brains, you might make personal visits to the offices of heads of advertising, publishing and business concerns in Washington, soliciting the kind of work you feel qualified to handle. Many a good job has been landed by the Scriptural method of ask and receive.

* * * *

Incidentally, are you a member of the American Association of University Women, which has headquarters and clubhouse here? Good social contacts are an invaluable asset in looking for a job.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Thrift Lessons, If Harsh, Likely To Lose Value

Learning to save is valuable experience for the child, but it cannot be taught by main force. A child must appreciate the value of thrift before he is willing or able to be thrifty.

Arbitrarily to take his money and put it in the bank teaches him nothing. It is more than likely to give him a lifelong aversion to saving, since it rouses such resentment as to undo the value of the lesson.

Before a child learns to save, he must learn to spend. His wishes are for the most part immediate, since he has not yet begun to look ahead and plan for the needs of the future.

The moment to cultivate the habit of saving is when he feels the need or wish which requires more money than he is likely to have on hand at one time. If he wants the camera or bicycle, or whatever it may be, enough, he will save his money in order to get it.

If a child is to learn how to use money, he must have money of his own. Whatever he earns or receives in the form of an allowance or gifts should be regarded as his. It cannot be taken from him, nor can he be forced to use it as his parents think best.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

AN ENGAGED GIRL who's getting married this autumn was in to select the wallpapers for her new home the other day. She just went into ecstacies over some of the new designs.

"And do you know, it's the funniest thing, but my mother just loathes wallpaper," she said. "I guess it's because she got her fill of it when it was so gaudy back in the nineties . . . and the first part of this century too, wasn't it? You couldn't hire her to have anything but ivory walls on a bet. And I'm tired to death of them, so there you are!

"I'm getting the floweriest old-timiest papers ever . . . I adore them. My furniture will be colonial mahogany all over the house, and for the living room paper I'm having white with a delft blue pattern which I'll use with a plain blue rug of textured weave. The sofa is henna and the chairs will all have slip covers of bright yellow. At the windows I'm using white glass curtains with plain yellow draperies. The woodwork is painted white, including the mantel, and to go over it, I have some big copper plates to stand in a row.

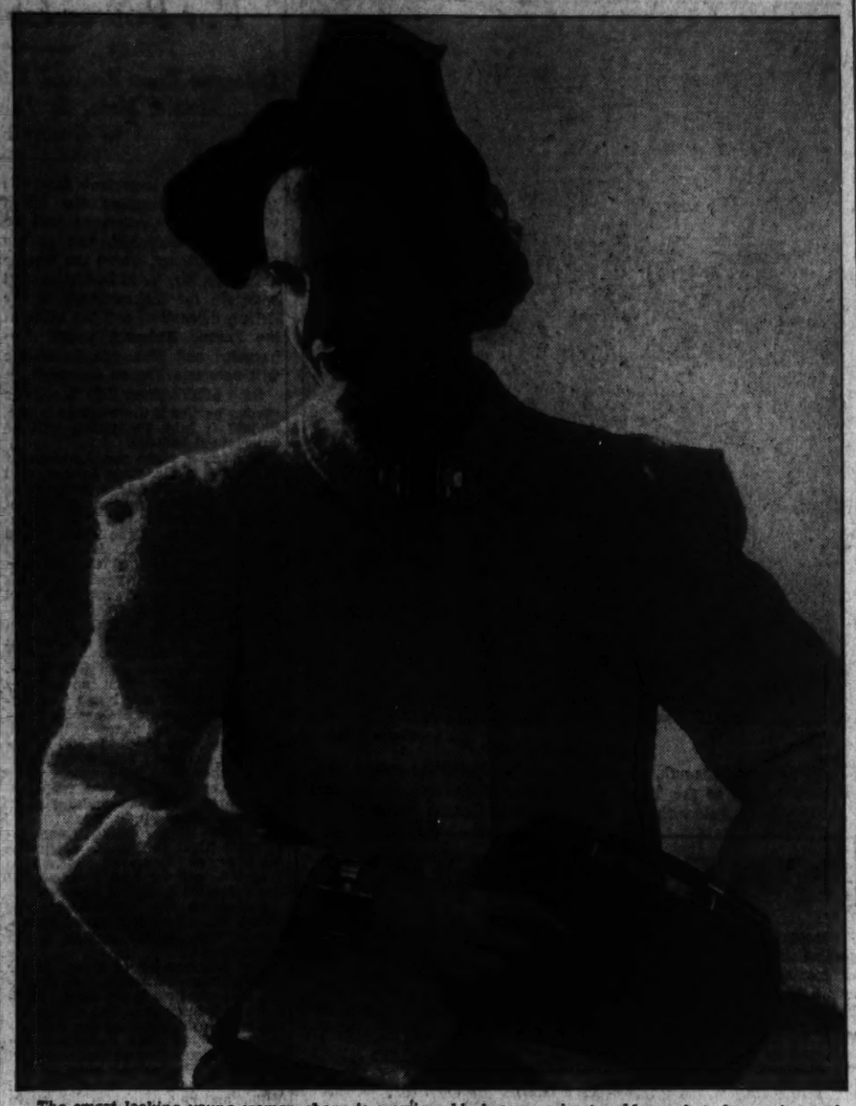

"In my bedroom the paper is an idyllic shade of lavender with white flowers . . . I'm going to have peach-point d'esprit for the curtains, bedspread and dressing table skirt and a mauve carpet. I think it will be darling and such a good background for my mahogany furniture.

"I'm trying to keep the accessories throughout the house in harmony . . . there'll be quite a bit of crystal and white porcelain, and downstairs a few pieces of copper in the living room and dining room. My dishes are all white with an all-over design in blue and the glass is cobalt blue . . . I'll have the dining room papered and carpeted the same as the living room—same draperies, too. Then yellow linen doilies and napkins.

Influenced By Regency.

Paris (AP).—The days of the regency inspired many a romantic costume included in the present Paris collections, all derived, however, from men's dress of the period. Creed showed a brocade jacket, lace frilled at neck and wrist, under a regency coat of black velvet having the long revers and high turn-down collar of the period.

Accessories Dramatize Fall Costume

The smart looking young woman above is wearin g black accessories to add swank to her costume of gray wool. Bag and gloves are of dull black, jewelry and hat are black with a shiny surface. The black catalin and silver metal bracelet and pin are repeated in material and design on the handle of the clever handbag. These accessories would be equally striking with wine, green or the new pecan beige.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Work of The Nose.

We ordinarily think of the mouth as a rather clean area of the body. It may look well enough when we peer within it, although there may be some grayish fur on the tongue. The mucous membrane usually appears smooth and glistening, or normal red shade, and free from ulcers or fungus growths.

Nevertheless, a moment's thought will convince us that the oral cavity is the merry-go-round for the activities of countless organisms. Eating utensils may be clean and sterile, and our food well washed and cooked, but most of us are guilty of introducing bacteria via fingers, pencils, pipestems, relighted cigars and numerous other objects. And then when we draw air or dust into the mouth we add to the microbe population.

But if the mouth is contaminated, what about the nose? It is doubtful if there is as soiled an organ in the body. It receives each hour millions of dust particles. Whenever we detect a foul odor, that very fact proves that minute bits of a putrefied substance have found their way into the nasal passages.

Somewhere along our ancestral life the nose was used chiefly as an organ of smell. Nowadays the mucous membrane is engaged in moistening, warming and filtering the air that we breathe. Furthermore, it is secreting constantly a thin fluid which evaporates rapidly or slowly, depending upon the amount of humidity in the outside air. In this way the mucous lining produces more than a pint of water each day.

Air should enter the lungs via the nostrils, and this occurs routinely provided there is no hindrance in the passage due to a deflected septum, to overgrowth of the turbinate bones, or to inflammatory processes.

In the majority of instances the common cold begins with an excess secretion of mucous, accompanied by sneezing and throat irritation. The inflammation usually extends into the sinuses, sometimes to the eyes and to the middle ear, reaching the latter area through the Eustachian tube. More commonly the spread is downward to the trachea and the bronchi. Occasionally a cold is an index of the resistance of the body, and those who have frequent attacks should make certain that the food contains a plentiful supply of vitamins A and D.

A profuse mucous discharge is far more common in children than it is in adults, and frequently it is an indication that there is an obstruction somewhere in the air passages. Some people have the habit of constantly blowing the nose, even though little or no secretion is in evidence. Repeating this process is about an unhygenic as failing to clear the nostrils if they become plugged, and every one knows that the pocket handkerchief is about as insanitary a toilet article as can be devised. The use of squares of soft paper tissue that can be burned will dispose of infected material completely.

Accessories Give Newness To Old Gowns

By Ethel Ehlen.

By The Post Fashion Editor.

FOR that wilted frock that must serve a few more weeks, or last season's costume which upon inspection, does not measure up to this fall's standards, try adding some of the latest smart accessories. They stimulate every angle of the frock or suit and lend an air of newness. With co-ordination, one of the important trends of the present mode, it is an easy matter now to assemble costume accents.

Hats, bags and gloves in smart contrast with the outfit is sponsored by fashion, as a delightful change from the first rule of the mode which deems it smarter to be in monotone. This can be achieved by either color or materials; unique color contrasts, and shiny surfaces complementing those of dull finish.

Costume jewelry motifs repeated in bag decorative schemes; hats and bags matching in fabric and trimming; belts, very important in this fall's styling, harmonizing or contrasting with the other accessories, are some of the accepted methods of lending swank to both old and new costumes.

With so many exciting accessories from which to make a choice this fall, it should prove an interesting pastime. This assembling of costume accents to achieve distinctive and individual touches—which mark the wearer as both fastidious and ingenious.

Conversational 'Don't' Listed For the Diner

Opinionated Person Must Avoid Laying Down the Law to His Neighbor.

By Margaret Wallace.

SOCIAL fortunes are made and unmade and friendship cemented about the dinner tables of Washington. The importance of being a good dinner partner and knowing how to carry on a light and interesting dinner conversation is a great asset to anyone who wishes to succeed in any circle of Washington life.

There are many conversational pitfalls at a formal dinner. The clever hostess or guest will avoid introducing subjects that might cause embarrassment. However, in Washington, where there is such a general interest in political and economic subjects, guests are bound to have varying opinions. But the well-bred person never gets acrimonious nor displays violent disagreement with another guest's views.

The greatest problem of the hostess is keeping the conversation constantly running along and avoiding awkward pauses. At a formal dinner the hostess manages the conversation by the turn of her own conversation. General talk is not as a rule possible and the guests are expected to talk to those next to them.

The hostess should talk to the gentleman on her right for a brief period, ten or fifteen minutes. The other guests follow suit. When the hostess turns to the man on her left, the guests should change conversational partners. But of course they should not make the mistake of a Washington debutante who had been coached in dinner deportment to such a degree that she kept one eye constantly on the hostess and broke off her conversation in the middle of a sentence with her dinner partner in order to talk to the gentleman on her left only to find that he was engrossed in conversation with his own partner. There can be no hard and fast and time-clock rule for dinner conversation. Its value is its easy pleasant character.

Don't lay down the law or be opinionated.

Don't correct other persons' statements or pronunciation.

Don't monopolize the conversation.

Don't interrupt the telling of an anecdote because you have heard it before.

Don't in your zeal to be a good listener fail to help carry along the conversation.

Don't bring personalities or gossip into the conversation.

Don't make your conversation a series of questions that make your partner feel like a witness in a courtroom.

QUERY—Does a woman at a dinner party in a private house take the arm of her dinner partner when they go into dinner? My dining room is connected with my drawing room and it is only a few steps to the dinner table.

Answer—It is proper for the man to offer his right arm to his dinner partner when they go to dinner. Or the host could simply bow to the woman he is to take in and say "shall we go into dinner?" Then walk by her side without offering his arm. The other men would follow suit. In your small house this would not be bad form.

Pantaloons Preferred.

Paris (AP).—House dresses at Lanvin are really house trousers with full Turkish pants of chiffon banded in at the ankle. Two tones of chiffon are used for these gowns which are made with high-necked bodices, girdled waists and no sleeves. A lavish use of sequins adds formality to the gowns which are used for dining at home.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NOW AND THEN a woman turns up in our frantic midst who leads an amazing life out of range of the public eye, and who is only brought into it at all by the swooping of reporters such as a poor wretch. Such a one suddenly crossed my line of vision in the handsome person of Clara Livingston, a bachelor girl in the 30s who has been in town shopping for a new airplane! Clara Livingston is the daughter of a family and a name famed in the annals of New York State. Even now she owns a large hunk of the fine old town of Jamestown. But most of her life is lived in a huge old house on a 1,600-acre plantation in Puerto Rico, some 25 miles from the city of San Juan.

FAY GILLIS.

Clara lives there alone save for the house servants, some of whom have been with the family as long as 35 years. Mornings, dressed in white riding breeches, she rides around her land, overseeing the work of hundreds of laborers. Afternoons she flies her own plane from her own airport, or reads the latest books and magazines. This is her life for nine months of the year. In the summer she comes north to the States, leaving the plantation to the help, who at once go to sleep in a body.

* * * *

This has been her life for years. She says she is never lonely, always busy. For company she has two big dogs. Clothes, social life—nothing presents a problem. Some day she will leave a huge fortune—but to whom? Meanwhile there are her fields to ride, her books to read and her plane to fly. Only the habit of years could accustom a girl to the life of Clara Livingston!

* * * *

The horsey set of Long Island is now whirling round and round, as shouts of "Tantivy!" and "Yoicks!" are being heard in our Home Counties, as they are in the Home Counties of dear ole Lunnon! The mad riding Argentines are hard at the International Polo with our own gilded youths. The annual North Shore Horse Show drew 800 sleek equine entries, and the affair was made official by a bad spill, with Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and her mount, Firenze Brumanna, doing a double somersault — and Mrs. G. getting up with a busted collar-bone.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Fay Gillis, one of the first of American aviatiers, and her journalist husband, Linton Wells, are back from three months in the West Indies, where Lint went to write a tome about his newspaper experiences. "Snooks," the young leopard they brought back from Ethiopia, is now a big girl a year old, and very beautiful. She is living quietly with them at the old Chelsea Hotel, down on West Twenty-third street—plays with a rubber ball like a kitten, and sleeps on a high bookshelf instead of a tree. Another six months, however, and "Snooks" will probably have to go to a zoo.

Parisian Chic Is Declared Over-Rated

Mme. Michel Says Gowns of Women Here Rate With French.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

PARISIAN CHIC has been vastly over-rated.

Many an American woman who never has seen a foreign dressmaker has as smart a wardrobe as any turned out by famous French fashionists. But the stylish Parisienne probably will hold the spotlight against all contenders until the average American learns to select her hats, shoes, gloves and purses as carefully as her dresses.

That, anyway, is the opinion of a woman who was born in this country, but has lived in France a number of years. She is the bride of Paul Michel, president of a French powder company, who is here to attend the current World Power Conference. Mme. Cichel is the former Edith Forbes, of Boston.

Yesterday morning at the Shoreham she looked very much the fashionable Parisienne in her brown and rose beige crepe and her smart brown straw hat with other accessories to match. Even her fingernails blended with her costume. Their unusual shade was the result of putting silver polish over copper, she explained.

Mme. Michel's wardrobe, which has attracted so much favorable attention since she has been in Washington, was purchased in this country, she said, "because buying things here is so much simpler than in Paris. You see a dress you want, you try it on, and you decide whether you want it. This is much more satisfactory than having to wait until it is made."

If the French woman considers any one part of her ensemble more important than any other, it is the hat, according to Mme. Michel.

"Aux Paris hats are, I believe, a bit smarter than the ones you find here," she went on. "Possibly the ideal arrangement would be to buy one's hats in Paris and everything else in America."

In Mme. Michel's belief, the stylish Parisienne has won acclaim as "the best-dressed woman in the world" because:

1. She wears dark colors on the street and is generally most conventional in her attire.

2. Every detail of her costume is selected with regard to the effect as a whole. Hat, gloves, purse, shoes and dress harmonize in color and cut.

3. She carefully selects her attire to suit the occasion. She never wears sport clothes on the street, nor street clothes to the beach.

4. She never appears hatless or gloveless on the street. And she never wears flat-heeled shoes, except with a complete sports costume.

But despite the fashionable French woman's adherence to all these rules, Mme. Michel doubts she is any better dressed than the stylish American woman. "Parisian chic," she repeated, "has been vastly overrated."

Underwood & Underwood.

MME. PAUL MICHEL,

Wife of a French delegate to the current World Power Conference, believes the American woman who plans her wardrobe with as much attention to accessories as gowns is just as well dressed as the fashionable Parisienne.

Start Rock Garden Now

"OH, HOW LOVELY!" people always exclaim when they see Jill's rock garden.

It's a little bit of perfection.

Background of spreading juniper and rhododendron. (She might have used laurel, yew, dwarf pine or yucca, also.) Rock gardens need some such background to set them off.

Every stone is set in firmly so Jill can step around on them.

These days she's setting out slips of those drought resisters, the sedums, which include live-forever and stonecrop. They will make good root growth during damp fall weather.

She will also put in some scilla, tulip, crocus and snowdrop bulbs to bloom next spring where poppies now flourish. During her vacation she gathered seeds of juniper, cedar, hemlock, fir and spruce. She covers each seed with four times its thickness of soil. Next spring the place will be full of tiny trees, small but cute as can be. And later they can be pinched and pruned into interesting shapes.

Fall is a good time to start a rock garden. The rocks and soil will settle over the winter, all ready for spring.

Just what to plant in sun and shade and scores of other practical garden tips are offered in our 40-page booklet, "Gardening Made Easy." All about planting vines and shrubs, making a fine perennial border, combating pests, planning, budgeting, color schemes. A treasure for amateur or expert.

WOMAN'S
Black Frock Of Distinguished Simplicity

A frock full of exciting news from the gentle flare of the skirt to the broad shoulder effect created by a novel sleeve top. The soft fullness released by those inverted tucks typifies the new casual cut. In a new Crepe weave, as supple as Silk Jersey but with none of the "stretch," with the waist studded with steel beads and a decidedly new and exceedingly smart neckline finished with an antique-looking silver brooch. Impossible to wear this dress without feeling slender, chic, and gay.

Dumbarton Oaks Scene Of Party for Delegates

Home of Former Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Bliss Opened for Reception to Power Rally Envoys; Many Europeans Attend.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Dumbarton Oaks, considered among the most beautiful estates in this country, was opened yesterday afternoon for a garden party in honor of the delegates to the Third World Power Conference. The former Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who are now at their home in Santa Barbara, Calif., extended the hospitality of their Washington residence to the visitors.

In the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, the guests were received by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Llewellyn Cooke. Secretary and Mrs. Hull were there for a short time only in the early part of the afternoon and were then replaced by the Secretary and Mrs. Roper, who welcomed the guests with Mr. and Mrs. Cooke.

They stood in the cool conservatory of the house, where great fern fronds, palms, vines and tropical plants formed the setting. The guests passed through the conservatory and into the garden, where they had the choice of countless paths all leading into beautiful places. The walk directly down from the conservatory led them between box hedges through formal rose gardens, and down stone steps with overhanging vines on either side, from terrace to terrace.

Band Plays on Lawn.

Another way led to a clear swimming pool, reflecting the blue sky and the great willow trees along the side; other paths took the visitors through wrought-iron gates to more remote gardens or to shaded arbors. The band played on the lawn beyond the swimming pool in the rear of the house, and in front, refreshments were served.

"How like home this is," was the comment of visitors from the European countries, charmed with its Old World atmosphere. Mme. G. F. Lemaitre, wife of one of the delegates from Geneva, remarked upon this fact as they stood at the top of one of the terraces in the rose garden and looked on the fountains below. With them were Mr. and Mrs. Foster Hannaford, of Winnetka, Ill. (for all States of the Union, as well as foreign countries were represented), and Mme. L. de Verebely, of Budapest, Hungary).

Mme. Lemaitre wore a striking costume, a Puritan hat of black felt, a dress with a short tunic of black and white and a green kerchief tucked in at the high neck, a black skirt and black accessories. Mme. de Verbely wore a powder blue print dress and a gray hat the shade of her gray hair.

Little Mme. Simon Yang, of Nanking, China, was there with her husband and was a center of interest because of her native costume. She wore a pearl-white gown of Chinese silk mesh with a close, stand-up collar and made with the utmost simplicity, straight from neck to hem and slit part way up the narrow skirt at the sides to permit freedom in walking. She wore long sapphire earrings.

Mme. Yang and her husband came to Washington from New York, where they have been for a year, while he has been at Columbia University, with a scholarship from the Rockefeller Foundation. With them was Mr. Chich-yu-Lo, also from Nanking.

Mme. Yanagihara Attends.

Mme. Hiromitsu Yanagihara, wife of one of the Japanese delegates, wore an afternoon gown of black velvet made with a high yoke of black chiffon and brightened with two red poppies as a corsage in front. Her large black hat had a touch of yellow at the crown.

"We have come to the New World, but find it like the Old," said Mr. Thomas Hardie, one of the English delegates, who was accompanied by Mrs. Hardie. With them were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lee, also from England. All agreed Dumbarton Oaks was like an English estate.

Another English visitor was Mrs. Doris Griffiths, the first woman to take a master of commerce degree in England and director of a large English firm. She wore a white embroidered linen dress with a navy blue belt and navy blue hat.

Mme. Alfaro, wife of the former Minister of Panama, was one of the guests. She was in a periwinkle blue dress and hat and was with Mrs. Parker West, who wore yellow.

A guest from Holland, Mrs. G. J. Bakker, commented with pleasure on the news of the engagement of Princess Juliana to Bernard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld, the German prince. Mrs. Bakker wore a white silk print figured in yellow and made with a hip-length cape, edged with fur. With her was Mrs. Ernst Steiner, wife of Dr. Steiner, of Geneva, who was fascinated by the fireflies, which appeared as dusk came and the party was ending. In Switzerland glow worms are not unusual, but fireflies are seldom seen, she explained after she was told what the moving bits of light were. Among the delegates from Sweden were Mr. Harry Nystrom, with his attractive blonde wife, and Mr. Erik G. J. Upmark.

The party yesterday was essentially for the delegates and most of the residents of the Capital who were present were assisting on the committee of hosts and hostesses. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, under whose direction all of the social functions for the entertainment of the visitors have been arranged, stood at the door of the conservatory and bid good-bye to the guests as they departed. She wore a gown of black net over a white figured print, a large white hat with black dots and a corsage of orchids.

Lieut. E. H. Hale And Miss Wolfe Wed at Miami

Couple Will Live in Coral Gables, Leave on Trip in October.

Miss Elizabeth Jean Wolfe, daughter of Dr. Allan Scott Wolfe, of this city, and the late Mrs. Wolfe, was married on Tuesday to First Lieut. Elkins Hamilton Hale of the Air Reserve. The ceremony took place at the First Christian Church, Miami, in the presence of a small group of intimate friends.

The bride, who gas given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crepe and a corsage of orchids.

Lieut. Hale is the son of Maj. and Mrs. Edgar Hamilton Hale, of Washington. He was graduated from Cornell University, class of 1930, and is a member of Delta Tau Delta. After graduation he received his training in the U. S. Army Air Corps at Randolph and Mitchell Fields. Since that time he has joined the staff of Pan American Airways and now is stationed at Miami.

Lieut. and Mrs. Hale will reside at 344 Mendoza avenue, Coral Gables, Fla., until about October 1, when they will go to Trinidad, Rio de Janeiro and San Francisco, where Lieut Hale will be assigned as a co-pilot on clipper ships of the Pan American Airways.

Mrs. C. J. Watts Doing Murals And Stage Sets

Well-known in two countries as a designer of textiles, Mrs. Charles J. Watts, of this city, is now doing mural paintings and the creating of stage sets. She recently returned to her Washington home from Provincetown, Mass., where she spent the summer hard at work doing designing for productions of the Wharf Players.

During her stay in Provincetown, Cape Cod center for intellectuals, artists and writers, and former home of Eugene O'Neill, Mrs. Watts designed the set for a production of "Charley's Aunt." For this success a generation ago, she created a Victorian set exact to the most minute detail.

Mrs. Watts intends this winter to concentrate on mural paintings. She has already done several for commercial purposes, and hopes to have a joint exhibition of her work with other Washington artists sometime this season.

From working on linoleum blocks, Mrs. Watts progressed to the designing of textiles. She had much success with this work in England, and reproductions of her designs appeared in a British art magazine there.

Two Embassies Will Entertain For Power Conference Visitors

Delegates From England Will Be Guests of Mr. V. A. L. Mallet; Mme. de Laboulaye to Be Hostess to Group From France.

Two of the important functions for groups attending the Third World Power Conference will be given this afternoon, one at the British Embassy, where the Charge d'Affaires, Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, will entertain for the members of the British delegation, and the other at the French Embassy, where Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye will entertain French delegates.

Both affairs, from 5 to 7, will be garden parties if the weather is fair. Should it rain, the guests will be entertained indoors.

Tomorrow night the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, will be host at dinner to a party of 40 at the embassy. The guests of honor will include Mr. William Durand, chairman of the Third World Power Conference; Herr Julius Dorpmuller, head of the German railways and acting president of the World Power Conference; Herr Carl Krecke, head of the German delegation, and Gen. Franz Ritter von Epp, governor general of Bavaria and honorary delegate.

The Ambassador also will entertain on Sunday with an all-day party at his summer home in Bluemont for the entire German delegation. The members will leave Wardman Park Hotel at 10:15 in the morning and will return to Washington about 6 in the evening. They will leave Sunday night for New York preparatory to making their post-conference study tours.

Another dinner being given tomorrow night is that at which the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted, will be host in honor of the delegates from his country.

Yesterday the Ambassador of China, Mr. Alfred Sze, gave a luncheon for the Chinese visitors to the conference.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, also was host to the Cuban delegates at a luncheon. The guests included the daughter of the Ambassador, Senorita Olga Patterson; the Minister Counselor of Embassy and Senora de Baron; the head of the Cuban delegation, Senor Miguel Villa, and his daughter, Senorita Villa; Senor Ricardo Moreira and Senora de Moreira; Senor Dr. Garcia Bango, Senora de Bango and Senorita Bango, Senor Francisco Gaston and Senora de Gaston, and Senor Enrique Menendez, all of the delegation.

Also, Senorita Rebeca Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile; the First Secretary of Embassy Senor Dr. Carlos Blanco; the Second Secretary of Embassy and Senora de Muxo; the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Ernest Schlatter; the Third Secretary of Embassy and Senora de Patterson; Senor Dr. J. Patterson, brother of the Ambassador, and Senor Don Jose Maria de Lasa, attache of the embassy.

Another luncheon yesterday was that given by the Minister of The Netherlands, Jonkheer H. M. van Haersma de With, who entertained in the Louis Seize Room at the Shoreham.

The Commercial Counselor of the Legation and Mme. Molekamp were among the guests. Others included Mr. Wouter Cool, the official delegate to the conference, and Mrs. Cool; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. van Staveren, Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Bakker, Mr. G. Y. Fels, Mr. E. A. Frowein, Mr. Jan Slooves and Mr. F. K. van Iterson.

Mrs. Morris Llewllyn Cooke also entertained at the Sulgrave Club for wives of the French delegation. Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France, was the ranking guest.

The hostess was assisted by the Misses Mary and Helen Patten, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Miss Merrill, of New York, and Miss Eleanor Davis, of Philadelphia.

Dr. Roscoe R. Hill, of the National Archives Building, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Raleigh for members of the delegations from South America. Also at the luncheon were Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist of the United States; Mr. Willard L. Beaulac, of the State Department; Mr. J. S. Carson and Mr. Joel Wolfsohn.

From South America were Senores Rodolfo E. Ballester, Ricardo J. Rally Officials Will See Movie

Delegates to the third World Power Conference are among those who have received invitations to the premiere showing of "Anthony Adverse" at the Earle Theater tonight.

Since the hero of the film was a great traveler, and is seen on the screen in many different countries, diplomatic representatives of those countries also have been invited to attend the premiere. Among those expected to be present are the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui; the Charge d'Affaires of Italy and the Marchioness Rossi Longhi; the Minister of the Union of South Africa, Mr. Ralph William Close, and the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis.

Among the delegates who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. A. S. MacMillan, of Canada; Senator Leon Perrier, of France; Mr. and Mrs. Adolfo Orive Alba, of Mexico, and Sir Archibald Page, of England.

British Girl Begins Rule At Festival

Miss Eve Mark-Wardlow Queen at South Boston Tobacco Rites.

To Receive Her Crown Tomorrow at Hands of Rep. Burch.

Miss Eve Mark-Wardlaw, blonde daughter of the Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw, began today her three-day reign over the second national tobacco festival now in progress at South Boston, Va. Miss Mark-Wardlaw returned to Washington with her parents from Delabrooke, their summer home on the Patuxent, was chosen queen of the festivities.

The young queen, according to an Associated Press dispatch, arrived in South Boston last evening escorted by a corps of highway officers and accompanied by the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart and Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director of the State Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Mark-Wardlaw is the guest of Mrs. Ira Vaughan at her home, Grand Oaks, in Halifax. She will receive her crown from the hands of Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Virginia, at an elaborate ceremony tomorrow evening. On this evening a pageant called "The Miracle of Tobacco" will be presented, and there will be a bicycle and miniature float parade, a fiddlers' contest and a large square dance.

Mr. Henderson, Miss Offutt Wed In Washington

Rockville Couple Will Be at Home Following a Trip to New York.

The wedding of Miss Margaret E. Offutt, of Rockville, Md., to Mr. Walter Gilbert Henderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Henderson, of Rockville, took place yesterday at 9 p. m. at the Church of Our Lady of Victory in Washington. The Rev. Louis Miltenberger performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

The church was decorated with white gladiolas and pink and yellow dahlias. The bride wore a gown of white lace over satin with a long train. Her tulle veil was held in place with orange blossoms and she carried a white satin prayer book, from which hung a ribbon of white satin and a spray of lilies of the valley.

Miss Catherine Offutt, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and Miss Melvina Henderson, the bridegroom's sister, and Miss Cornelia Offutt, another sister of the bride, were bridesmaids. The maid of honor wore a frock of blue organdie over satin, with a picture hat to match. Miss Henderson wore a frock of green organdie and Miss Cornelia Offutt wore a similar gown of yellow. Both wore matching picure hats.

Mr. Albert Anderson served as his brother's best man, and the ushers were Mr. George Lechleider and Mr. John Conroy.

Mrs. James Hamilton, of Warrenton; Hugh Glascock, of Upperville, to Decide Hunter Competition; R. O. Hall, of Keswick, Draft Classes.

Mrs. James Hamilton, of Warrenton, the former Miss Peggy Keith, widely known horsewoman, and Mr. Hugh Glascock, of Upperville, will act as judges of the hunter classes at the fourth annual exhibition of the Farmington Hunt Club Horse Show, to be held in the new ring on the grounds of the Farmington Country Club near Charlottesville, September 19. The draft classes will be judged by Mr. Richard O. Hall, of Keswick, former president of the Virginia Fox Hunters Association.

Entries for the show, which close on Saturday of this week, are in charge of Mr. Rodger R. Rinehart, chairman of the horse show committee. Exhibitors are expected from Ohio, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia, as well as from many sections of the Old Dominion.

Trophies will be awarded first-place winners in 9 of the 21 classes on the day's program, and trophies also will go to second-place winners in the event for hunter hacks and that for parent and child.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Rinehart, of White Gables, are donors of the trophy offered in the class for yearlings, suitable to become hunters, and the winner of the class for 2-year-olds, suitable to become hunters, will receive the plate offered by Mr. and Mrs. Russell Mott, of Oakenpins.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Galban, of Gallson Hall, near Farmington, have donated the trophy offered in the children's saddle class, horsemanship only to count; and the best hunter hack in the show will win the trophy offered by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Rinehart, of Kenridge.

An innovation this year will be the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals event. In this class children who have not reached their seventeenth birthday are to ride over eight jumps not over 3 feet high; to be judged on performance over the fences and on seat and hands; guidance and control of horse throughout the whole course, jumping faults not to be counted.

First prize in this event is donated by Mr. Whitney Stone, of New York and Lanark, near Charlottesville, and the winner will be eligible to compete in the championship A. S. P. C. A. horsemanship class at the National Horse Show in 1936.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Cushman, who came from Chicago and purchased a home at Farmington, which they call Farmoor, are donors of the silver plate offered in the event for hunters shown under saddle.

Mr. Harry A. George, of Charlottesville, has offered a challenge trophy in the Corinthian class which must be won for two years before becoming the property of the exhibitor.

Other donors of trophies are Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Chipley, of Clifton, near Shadwell, and the Keswick Hunt Club. The former will go to the winner in the class for hunt teams, and the latter to the victors in the parent and child event, in which performance and manners only will count.

To Become Bride of Charles Sebastian, Jr., Oct. 6.

Miss Winifred Kohler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Kohler, has selected October 6 as the day of her wedding to Mr. Charles Sebastian, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sebastian, of Washington. The ceremony will take place at the Elbrook Church.

Mrs. Wilbur Balderson will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Elizabeth Brooks, Miss Rosamund Hunt, Mrs. Ben Dyer and Mrs. James McClathery.

Mr. Allan Berts will be best man, and Mr. Sebastian has chosen as ushers Mr. Ralph Graves, Mr. Wilbur Balderson, Mr. Elmer Gladmon and Mr. Ben Dyer.

The bride-to-be was entertained recently at a kitchen shower given by Mrs. Elmer Gladmon.

Miss Stine Sets Nov. 17 As Her Marriage Date

Miss Irene Stine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Stine, of Washington, has selected November 17 as the date of her wedding to Mr. Carl Gochenour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther B. Gochenour, of this city. The ceremony will take place at the Metropolitan Baptist Church.

The engagement of Miss Stine to Mr. Gochenour was announced several weeks ago. They plan to reside in Washington after their marriage.

Two Dougherty Girls in Debuts In Chattanooga

By Marylyn Reeve.

While the debutantes of Washington are still making plans, and many of them yet undecided whether to bow or not, the Misses Alice and Virginia Dougherty, daughters of Col. and Mrs. Clarence Dougherty, have been formally presented to society in Chattanooga. They were popular members of the younger set here until this summer, when a change of station took them from the Capital to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Mrs. Dougherty and her daughters made their home in Washington for several years while the colonel was on transport duty between New York, Panama, the West Coast, Hawaii and the Philippines.

When the daughters' studies at George Washington permitted they would be off for a week-end at Annapolis, with boating, strolls about Crabtown, and the inevitable hop in Dahlgren Hall. Then they would heed the call of West Point and its hops and parades. Miss Alice, who is very blonde, is an accomplished equestrienne. She took part in the society circuses at Fort Myer.

There had been some mention of debuts for the girls but nothing definite while they were here. Perhaps the Southern atmosphere and the difference in debutante parties had effective persuasive powers. At any rate the sisters made their decisions and then their bows at the Cotton Ball. The ball ushers in the autumn season in Chattanooga and is the outstanding social event of the year. It is at this ball that the debutantes of Chattanooga and nearby cities are formally presented to society as maids of honor to the Queen of Cotton.

The Misses Dougherty were attired in dainty frocks of the same style of white shadow patterned organdy, fashioned with full flaring skirts which swept into fan-shaped trains. They carried large bouquets of white cotton balls and ferns tied with green streamers, as did all of the court attendants.

Rally Delegates To Attend Concert At Pan American

One of the most colorful of the summer concerts to which the Pan American Union has invited guests this season is expected to be that this evening, which will be attended not only by Washingtonians, but also by the visitors here for the Third World Power Conference.

The program of Latin-American music will be presented by the Marine Band and Senor Francisco Tortolero, Mexican tenor.

Visitor From London.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mendel, of London, England, are visiting Washington as part of their trip to the United States and are stopping at the Raleigh. They will leave tomorrow for New York and will sail shortly for Europe.

Regular Airway Across Pacific To Open Soon

Roper States Clipper Ships Will Get Permits; Trans-Atlantic Line 'Sure.'

By the Associated Press.

Word that passenger-carrying flights from California to Manila soon will become a reality and that transatlantic air line service is assured, came yesterday from the Commerce Department.

Secretary Roper told his press conference the Bureau of Air Commerce would permit transportation of passengers from Oakland, Calif., to Manila in Pan-American Airway clipper ships "within the next 30 to 60 days."

Coincidentallly, J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, told reporters details of transatlantic plane service to be undertaken jointly by Pan-American Airways and British Imperial Airways are nearing competion.

"The arrangements are in fine shape—the service is assured," he said, adding that "only details of minor importance remain to be adjusted."

Johnson said Imperial Airways may start experimental flights this fall and that Pan-American also is making plans for experimental transatlantic flight.

Weekly Trips Likely.

Asked whether English demand for a large share of the transatlantic service had served to delay arrangements, Johnson replied negatively, adding, "they want their share and we want ours."

He added that notes regarding details of the projetced service recently had been received from both Canada and Great Britain and that these now are under study by the Postoffice Department.

The Pacific service, which was launched experimentally some time ago, probably will provide weekly passenger schedules, Roper said.

The clipper ships can carry seven passengers and 800 pounds of freight on the long California-Hawaii hop and about 14 passengers for the remainder of the route. Heavy gasoline supplies on the first leg serve to hold the passenger list down.

Existing scheduled air line operations, meanwhile, were reported by the Bureau of Air Commerce to have gained during the first half of this year.

In this period, the bureau said, 33,523,075 miles were flown, and 483,712 passengers carried, as compared with 28,729,128 miles and 377,339 passengers for the similar 1935 period.

Boy Rides Bicycle Into River, Drowns

An unidentified colored youth rode his bicycle off the end of the Seventh street wharf yesterday and drowned.

The boy, about 17, was racing with companions when the wheel of his bicycle struck a log at its end. He catapulted into the air and plunged into the Potomac. The body and the bicycle were recovered by J. A. Faunce and Anthony Reeve.

Proof of Ney Identity Claimed in Salisbury

Salisbury, N. C., Sept. 9 (AP).—Proof that a North Carolina schoolmaster who died in 1846 was in reality Marshal Ney, of France, was claimed here today by C. W. Allison, of Charlotte, sponsor of a proposal to exhume the remains of the teacher.

Allison said "the opening of the grave is not necessary in view of information that has been received recently.

"The information proves beyond any doubt that the French soldier buried in Rowan County under the name of Peter Stuart Ney is the marshal, but it cannot be divulged at present."

Historians record the death of Ney before a French firing squad late in 1815. The North Carolina tradition is that the execution was faked, and that Napoleon's marshal escaped to this country and lived out his life as a teacher.

Extortion Plot Involving City Contract Laid to 2

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Two men were held without bail today on charges of conspiring to extort money from Walter Klaur, Dubuque (Iowa) manufacturer, in connection with a $1,250,000 New York City contract for snow removal equipment.

The prisoners, accused in Dubuque of promising Klauer they would "go downtown" for him in consideration of 10 per cent of the contract, described themselves as Laurence Timn, 30, Bronxville (N. Y.) attorney, and Arthur R. Von Keller, 57, Jamaica (Queens) salesman.

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers." If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

As Georgia Senatorial Candidates Closed Their Political Shows

Associated Press Photos.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge hoisted to the shoulders of members of his crowd and carried off in triumph as he closed his colorful campaign with a speech at Gainesville. Senator Richard B. Russell, jr. (right), a Roosevelt supporter and bitter opponent of Gov. Talmadge, who is asking an "indorsement" term and according to latest reports was leading in the early primary returns.

Russell Appears Sure of Victory Over Talmadge

were renominated without opposition.

Russell based his campaign for renomination on loyalty to the Democratic Party and support of the Roosevelt Administration. He charged Talmadge "deserted the party and went over to the Republicans."

The 38-year-old bachelor Senator said the main issue in the race was whether the people would "slap President Roosevelt in the face by electing his bitterest enemy."

Talmadge, who succeeded Russell when the latter went to the Senate in 1932, campaigned on a 10-point platform which included reduction of the national budget to $1,000,000,000 annually, opposition to old-age pension provision of the national security act and repeal of the Federal income tax, which power, he said, should be delegated to individual States.

The Governor charged Russell was a "rubber stamp" for all New Deal legislation.

Talmadge said he was a Democrat and would support the party, but that he would take issue with the Administration when his views did not agree with those of the President.

Returns in Alaska.

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 9 (AP).—Returns from yesterday's general election came in slowly today, but indicated the Democratic ticket carried by a large majority.

Congressional delegate Anthony Dimond, Democrat, appeared assured of re-election by about 3 to 1 over his Republican opponent, Lester O. Gore, Ketchikan. Unofficial returns indicated Dimond carried all three precincts in Gore's home town.

Glassford Trails.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 9 (AP).—John R. Murdock, self-styled "Conservative Liberal," maintained a small lead tonight for the Democratic nomination for Arizona's lone Congressional seat, being vacated by Isabella Greenway.

In yesterday's primary election Murdock had a lead of about 1,100 votes over M. T. Phelps, Townsendite, in a field of 11 candidates.

Martin Ahead.

Seattle, Sept. 9 (AP).—Returns from yesterday's primary election tonight showed the three Democratic House members from Washington seeking renomination were successful.

Gov. Clarence D. Martin, seeking Democratic renomination, polled 120,234 votes in 2,103 out of 2,836 precincts to head John C. Stevenson, production-for-use advocate, who had 92,166 ballots.

Former Gov. Roland H. Hartley, seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination, outdistanced three other contenders.

The primary brought victory to one production-for-use candidate, Warren G. Magnuson, who won the First District Democratic Congressional nomination. Frederick J. Wettrick led in the Republican race, in which a Townsendite, James Malone, trailed. This was the district of the late Representative Marion A. Zioncheck.

In the Second District, Representative Monrad Wallgren, Democrat, was renominated. Payson Peterson, Townsend candidate, led the Republican contest.

Representative Martin F. Smith, Townsendite Democrat, was unopposed in the Third District. Herbert Seiler, Townsend indorsee, won on the Republican side.

Democratic Representative Knute Hill, having Townsend approval, was unopposed in the Fourth. Former Representative John W. Summers, Townsend supporter, won the Republican contest.

Charles H. Leavy, Townsendite, won the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District. A. J. Hutton was leading for the Republican nomination.

In the Sixth, where there was no Townsend candidate, Dr. Leland S. Whetstone, Democrat, and Paul Preus, Republican, were ahead.

Townsendites Lead.

Denver, Colo. Sept. 9 (AP).—Townsend-indorsed Republicans seemed assured of two Congressional nominations tonight in incomplete returns from yesterday's State primary elections which saw Gov. D. C. Johnson win a bitterly contested Democratic Senatorial nomination from former Gov. William E. Sweet.

J. Arthur Phelps, of Pueblo, Townsend-supported Republican, led for the Third District Congressional nomination.

In the Fourth District, J. S. Woody, Glenwood Springs, who also had Townsend support, was unopposed for the Republican nomination.

In the First District (Denver) Harry Zimmerhackel, a lawyer, led William H. Heppe, Townsend candidate, 10,823 to 9,264.

W. J. Evans, State Townsend Club manager, lagged behind George H. Bradfield in the Second District. Returns from 417 out of 459 precincts gave Evans 12,841, Bradfield 14,780.

Teller Ammons, Denver State Senator, held a long lead for the Democratic nomination for Governor over Lieut. Gov. Ray H. Talbot and Moses E. Smith, speaker of the State House of Representatives.

State Treasurer Charles M. Armstrong was the only Republican aspirant for the governorship.

All the four Democratic Congressmen from Colorado will seek re-election in November. Representatives Edward T. Taylor, Fred Cummings and John A Martin were unopposed in the primary. The fourth, Representative Lawrence Lewis, of Denver, was far ahead.

Inquiry Asked In 2d Jail Death At Hyattsville

Widow Makes Demand as Result of Autopsy on Prisoner's Body.

The widow of Charles C. Martin, who died recently in the Hyattsville Jail, yesterday demanded an investigation of the circumstances surrounding her husband's death. Dr. Oscar Lavine, after performing an autopsy said that his heart and brain were sound.

This is the second death in the same jail within one week. William Confrey, down from Connecticut visiting his brother in Berwyn, died of pleurisy Sunday night.

Martin was arrested on the Baltimore Boulevard Sunday morning on a charge of driving while drunk. In default of bond he was placed in jail.

Dr. Lavine said that it would be impossible to say definitely what had caused his death until after his stomach had been examined by a chemist.

Jeremiah J. Crowley, chief of the Prince Georges County police, said that there was nothing unusual about the death.

Martin was formerly a gas station attendant in the District, but about a month ago moved to Hyattsville hoping that he could obtain a job at Greenbelt.

Recommendations for a paid physician to treat those in the jails has already been made to the county commissioners of Prince Georges County, but had been refused because of the expense, it was said.

Temporary Lodges

A resolution demanding that temporary lodges of the A. F. G. E. be permitted to seat delegates at the convention is to be introduced at Detroit.

The resolution is to be adopted on behalf of all temporary lodges throughout the country at a caucus of temporary lodge representatives before the convention opens. The resolution is to be introduced, either by the temporary lodge representatives, or by some sympathetic delegate from a permanent lodge.

That a bitter fight on the resolution will result is certain. The August 28 issue of the Government Standard listed 79 temporary lodges. Since most of them resent the national executive council's method of handling temporary charters should any or all of them be seated it would prove a serious blow to the conservatives. One of the primary issues on which the "progressive" lodges are seeking the recall of the four Washington members of the temporary charter device.

How many of the temporary lodges will send delegates is impossible to say, but efforts have been made to obtain as large a turnout as possible. Bernard Fishman and Louis Levine will represent Social Security Board, Sol Rabkin, Farm Credit Administration and Janet Gaines, of Resettlement Administration, will have the proxy for SEC.

Jessica Buck and Edward Cox, of the Railroad Retirement Board, will wage a credential fight of their own, demanding seats as delegates on the ground that the executive council voted the Board Lodge a permanent charter.

President E. Claude Babcock may not be a candidate for reelection, according to his own statement, but he was the first to file a reply to the questionnaire sent out by the Veterans' Administration Lodge to all "prospective candidates."

Razor Sharpener

The latest solution to that ever-perplexing problem of what to do with dull razor blades is a new honing stone invented by Charles G. Barrett, of the Navy's Bureau of Engineering.

When the ordinary honing stone is used for sharpening, Barrett explained, the pressure of the fingers runing the blade across the concave stone deflects parts of the blade's edge, making for uneven sharpening. Barrett, to remedy that, has worked out a stone with a deep slot cut into the middle. The blade holder of the safety razor is fitted over the blade and into the slot. The stone is then shuffled slightly in one hand, the blade sliding through the slot automatically. The blade holder on top of the blade insures even pressure and a smooth sharpening.

Barrett, who has been with the Navy for two years, has been shaving daily for the last two months with the same razor blade, kept sharp by his new honing stone. He already has a patent on the stone and hopes to sell the idea to some business concern.

Guns

If you want proof of the ingenuity with which men plot to kill one another, you might drop in at the Federal Bureau of Investigation Laboratory and see the bureau's collection of pistols, rifles and machine guns.

There are 311 different kinds of firearms, ranging from a small .25-caliber automatic that can be slipped into one's vest pocket or woman's purse to a huge Browning machine gun that was taken from Clyde Barrow and Bonny Parker, with a shooting range of slightly less than 4 miles.

All the standard makes of firearms, both European and American, are in the collection and also more curious weapons, such as the "cane gun," around which so many mystery stories have been written, or the cylinder gun, which is fired by the push of the thumb. Both the cane and cylinder gun are European, but there is an even more unique gun in the collection that is distinctly American. It is the .45 automatic that Dillinger remodeled into a small Thompson machine gun.

Included in the collection also are the guns taken from "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Harry Campbell, Harvey Bailey, "Mahcine Gun" Kelly, Alvin Karpis and "Baby Face" Nelson.

Drs. Joseph A. LeClerc and D. J. Price and William J. Morse will attend the American Soy Bean Association conference next week at Ames, Iowa. Dr. LeClerc will read a paper on soy bean flours, Dr. Price on dust explosions in soy bean mills and Morse on the economics of soy beans in this country.

A New and Brighter Dawn Breaks Over London Court

Army Approves Improvements To D.C. Airport

No Objections Raised to 2-Foot Fill Across Military Road.

Col. J. W. Wainwright, commanding officer at Fort Myer, has notified Samuel J. Soloman, manager of the Washington Airport, that the Army will raise no objections to improvements at the airport, which will include a 2-foot fill across Military road.

It had been thought the Army might object to the fill for a runway—part of a $100,000 improvement program at the field—as it involved the right of way of a military road.

"The War Department feels it has no right to object or authorize the proposed construction of runways, even though the right of way of a military road is involved," Wainwright said. "The matter has been referred to the Department of Commerce."

No objection to the modernizing program expressed by Commerce Department officials, who said they felt the improvement work commendable and a necessary improvement to air transport safety.

Installation of traffic lights and barriers across Military road last spring caused a controversy that threatened to close the airport. Intervention by the late Representative John J. McSwain, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, averted the dispute long enough to enable Congress to pass legislation transfering responsibility for policing the road to the Commerce Department.

Grading machinery and preliminary work to laying foundations for the asphalt runways was begun yesterday. Material for filling in Military road already has been dumped in piles along the highway. Actual construction of the runways is expected to be begun next week.

Aunt Vanishes, Girl Asks Aid of Police

Red-haired Betty Rough, 16, hitch-hiker from South Fork, Pa., was held at the Receiving Home last night as the police tried to locate her aunt, from whom she became separated on Eighth street.

First Slum Clearance Project In District Will Be Ready Oct. 1

The bang of hammers in London Courts yesterday heralded the opening soon of the city's first alley reclamation project, first urged in 1934 by The Washington Post.

London Courts, a brisk and bright little community of 23 low-cost homes, nestles in a grimy setting of oil tanks and coal tipples at L street and Thirteenth southeast. The neighborhood is not typical of most Washington sore spots because the section is industrial.

The four-room units, smelling of turpentine and fresh plaster, will be ready for occupancy about October 1, completely equipped with steam heat, hot water, electricity—and baths.

Baths were unknown in the area until the Alley Dwelling Authority for the District of Columbia marched in early this summer and with sledge and pick demolished a festering slum which John Ihlder, agency head, describes as "one of the rottenest spot sin town." On the heels of the wreckers marched builders from the Thurm Construction Co., which was granted the job on contract after competitive bidding, bringing bathtubs by the truckload.

London courts will be rented to colored laborers at $15.50 a month. More than 100 applications have come to the Authority offices in a corner of the Farm Credit Administration, on Pennsylvania avenue. Eight vacancies remain out of 23 units.

Neighborhood Shows Interest.

Colored residents of the neighborhood are intensely interested in the project and prowl through the clean new buildings by the dozen, exclaiming Ohs! and Ahs! to Henry Henson, white-wooled watchman. "And everybody what's got one of the new houses is glad, yas sah!" said Henson yesterday.

Urged by The Post in 1934, the Government appropriated $500,000 for slum clearance, to which was added $200,000 of WPA money by executive order last December.

All of this money has been committed, with ten years to complete the jobs.

The task given the Authority was to rid Washington of its many hidden slum communities, whose existence even today remain unsuspected by residents of nearby streets. They have been described as breeding spots of crime and disease.

"Our job is to eliminate slums, but at the same time to develop them to the purpose they are best suited for," said Ihlder. "We have attacked 200 squares in Washington which are unfit for human habitation. Some of these will be converted into parking lots, some into garages or other small business buildings, and some will be rebuilt with low-cost houses."

Done in Chicago, New York.

Many housing experts have advocated tearing down slums and cleaning them off the map. This was done in Chicago and New York, Ihlder said, but the property on which they stood now is idle. He stated there were scores of vacant lots in Chicago, after its purge, which are useless. The same is true of a large district cleared in the lower East Side of New York. No building followed.

In Washington the attempt has been made to utilize slum sites to their best advantage. The first project completed by the Alley Dwelling Authority was a small garage in Ruppert Court, between First and Second avenues northeast, within shouting distance of the Capitol.

London Courts is the first residential project. The rooms in the new red brick tenements are light and airy, with four windows in each room. Apartments face on a central lawn or plaza, which is to be beautified with shrubs and trees. Work is going on apace, and the contractor is sure he will finish ahead of his deadline. Some tenants may find it possible to move in the latter part of this month.

Eleven of the group were remodeled old houses, which were painted, refloored, plastered, and equipped with plumbing These houses formerly rented for $12.50 a month. The tenants all say they are delighted to pay $3 extra for hot water, steam heat, electricity, and other modern equipment they never enjoyed before. Most of them come from the poorest, unskilled laboring classes.

It is not necessary that an applicant be employed. Some of those accepted are not. Ihlder said his sole test is that they be "good, steady people who will make good neighbors."

Pay From Relief Checks.

Asked how they could pay rent if unemployed, he said:

"They'll pay it out of their relief checks. They're already paying rent out of relief money. It's no loss to the Government to get it back again, and at the same time there is a saving to the taxpayer by cutting down crime, health and other costs incidental to maintaining slums."

Asked if private landowners did not object to the Federal Government's wholesale invasion of the local real estate field, he answered:

"We tell private enterprise that if it will provide for these people, fine! But if you don't, we'll do it! For years and years there has been talk about doing something about slums in Washington and nothing happened. Then we decided to go ahead. At last something is beginning to happen."

Ihlder has been a prime force in organizing the 200 local projects. A housing expert in many cities, he came to Washington in 1920. He has kept his staff small. There are only twelve men in the little corner office, carrying on all the work of buying options, drafting plans and purchasing materials.

Homer J. Smith is chief architect. His theme has been "good, pleasant dwellings as inexpensively as possible." Average cost of each house will not exceed $3,500.

HepbronTalk Begins Drive Of Crime Unit

Association Program to Curb Lawlessness in City Outlined.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Prepared first to attack and ultimately to control Washington's organized crime forces by molding public opinion toward swift and certain justice, the Washington Criminal Justice Association yesterday launched a comprehensive program of action, when James M. Hepbron, acting director of the organization, spoke before the Soroptimist Club at a meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Appealing for public support, Hepbron described the crime group as a "fact-finding research body," unofficial in its functions, but working in co-operation with District law enforcement and administering agencies.

And it is only through co-operation between these agencies and the public that crime and criminals can be wiped out, Hepbron said. He cited the difficult problem of law enforcement which now confronts the Metropolitan Police Department and urged "every Washington citizen" to back the police to the limit.

In addition to routine crime detection and prevention, District officials must cope with one of the greatest transient problems in the East, Hepbron pointed out. Transients and lawlessness go hand in hand, he said, to present authorities with a dangerous element which must be controlled.

Traffic Offers Problem.

Washington's unusual traffic problem also requires constant attention from both enforcement and judicial powers, Hepbron said, adding that he and his organization intend to make a tireless search for a remedy.

Hepbron, authority on crime and its control, was recently named acting director of the Criminal Justice group, pending selection and appointment of a permanent personnel.

He was introduced at yesterday's meeting by Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post and president of the organization. Meyer told of Hepbron's work with the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission and lauded him as a man "who has spent many years of his life in public service."

Hepbron will assist in preliminary work leading to final establishment of a permanent crime group here.

Describing the problem which must be solved, Hepbron cited figures showing that there is more crime in one county in the United States than in the whole of Canada. During years of research, he said, it was found that an average of only one criminal in every ten received punishment for his offense.

"But a crime commission or association is not a cure-all," Hepbron declared. "Such an organization is essentially for community betterment. It needs—and must have—the support of every citizen and civic organization to succeed."

Since organization of the Baltimore Crime Commisson, he continued, 52 per cent of all crimes now committed in that city are solved and the offenders brought to justice.

He described crime as an organized business.

"The criminal does not operate in haphazard fashion," Hepbron declared. "Rather, he plans his work as does any business executive. He works methodically—not with the fear of punishment in his mind, but wondering at his chances to succeed."

But like any business, the crime expert went on, when the profit is taken away, the entire set-up collapses. And to take the profit from crime, the fear of apprehension and punishment must be taught the criminal, he said.

Striking at a sore spot in Washington's law enforcement system, Hepbron condemned housing facilities of the Metropolitan Police Department. He said conditions were deplorable in the building which houses police headquarters.

"You can't expect efficient work from men who must operate in such surroundings," he said. "Large sums have apparently been spent in this city to house papers, files and records. But those who protect your lives and property are forced to work under severe handicaps."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and his assistant, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, were praised by Hepbron. He said they were doing the "best they can under conditions" and urged Washingtonians to support efforts of these officials.

Tells Work Plan.

In describing his fact-finding work toward criminal justice, Hepbron said his search would begin at the time a criminal is arrested and continue until ultimate disposition of the case.

"That means," he said, "that we must first start with the police department where the arrest is made. The next step is police court, where charges are given a preliminary hearing. And then comes the grand jury. From there we trace the case through the district attorney's office and into trial court. Next is the penal institution and finally the probation or parole system."

By tracing each step and gathering facts, the commission may approach the proper agencies with concrete information and the remedy is a matter of co-operation, Hepbron declared. But without the facts and by blind guessing from personal reactions, the task is hopeless, he added.

Explaining he was an advocate of probation or parole, Hepbron pointed out the dangers which may arise from maladministration of this system.

"Properly administered, probation is the right arm of justice," he said. "But improperly administered, this system of dealing with crime may prove extremely dangerous. Each case should be carefully and comprehensively investigated before aciton is taken."

Citizens who shy at jury duty were assailed by the crime authority as he appealed for co-operation from Washington residents.

"Those who shirk their duty by attempting to avoid jury service have no place in our set-up," he said. "By foul means or fair, they plead to be released from service—but they're the first ones to complain at a miscarriage of justice."

In concluding his talk, Hepbron explained that the Washington Criminal Justice Association is in no way a detective agency.

"We are not working against authorities, but with them. And we need not only their co-operation but the support of public opinion."

Yesterday's meeting, the first in a series at which Hepbron is scheduled to speak, was attended by Washington civic and business leaders.

Pedestrian Curbs Again Urged As Van Duzer Cites Accidents

As Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, whose latest request for a jaywalking ban was turned down this week by the District Commissioners, reiterated his recommendation in an annual report, citing the record for the last fiscal year to substantiate a statement that "the pedestrian situation is still our most acute problem, the Traffic Bureau announced the suspension of 65 driving permits, automobile tags, or both.

The suspensions were from July 1 to August 31, inclusive. Sixty-one of them were for driving under the influence of liquor and four because of judgements against drivers.

Van Duzer pointed out that 72.5 per cent of the fatalities in Washington were pedestrians, as compared with 67.5 per cent in 1935. Despite a gain in accidents in the year ending July 1, Van Duzer noted an encouraging decrease in traffic casualties.

"The principal faults of pedestrians which resulted in injuries and death were (1) crossing not at a crosswalk, (2) walking or playing in the streets, (3) stepping from behind a parked or passing car, (4) crossing against a signal, (5) intoxication.

Principal faults of drivers which led to accidents, the director stated, are (1) reckless driving, (2) failure to yield right of way, (3) intoxication, (4) speeding, (5) failure to obey stop signs and traffic signals, (6) defective eqipupment.

The Traffic Bureau announced that the following motorists had their permits or tags, or both, suspended for driving while intoxicated:

Board Gives 4 Educators New Positions

Dr. Haworth and Brewer Named to Vacancies; Two Promoted.

Baston Is Reinstated; 2 Are Recommended for Central Job.

Two District public school educators received appointments to vacant positions and two others received promotions by direction of the Board of Education yesterday, when the school trustees met for the first time since the summer recess.

Dr. Ellis Haworth, active in many school activities, head of the department of science in Washington's white schools since 1931, was appointed professor of natural sciences at Wilson Teachers' College, a position which carries a $4,000 a year salary.

The other appointee was W. M. Brewer, who was taken from the rank of history teacher at Miner Teachers' College, to become head of the history department of colored schools.

Promoted were Miss A. F. Garrels, Wilson Teachers College teacher, who was advanced to the rank of assistant professor of social studies in the same school, and Miss I. A. Craig, a teacher in Miner Teachers College, who becomes assistant professor of education in that institution.

Batson Reinstated.

The board reinstated T. E. Batson, who has been on leave of absence to assume duties in the United States Office of Education, in his former position as teacher in Terrell Junior High School.

Dr. Haworth, whose prominence in local public school affairs led to several requests from civic organizations last spring that he be appointed to one of the unfilled assistant superintendents, has already done considerable work at Wilson Teachers College.

While still head of the department of science for all junior and senior high schools of the white divisions, he served last year as acting head of the division of science and mathematics at Wilson.

His appointment to the new position was originally recommended by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintnedent of schools, although the recommendation was brought before the board yesterday by Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, chairman of the personnel committee.

Central Vacancy Unfilled.

Outside of the personnel committee meeting, which took place before the meeting of the whole board, there was no discussion yesterday of the appointment of a new principal at Central High School. A vacancy exists there as the result of the promotion of Dr. Harvey A. Smith, principal last year, to the office of assistant superintendent of schools.

Two men were recommended for the position in requests from civic groups and the faculty at Central read before the board. A communication from the Central faculty indorsed Lawrence G. Hoover, assistant principal of Central, for the position, and the executive board of the Central P.-T. A., in another letter, asked that the appointment go either to Hoover or to Lester T. alter, principal of Powell Junior High School.

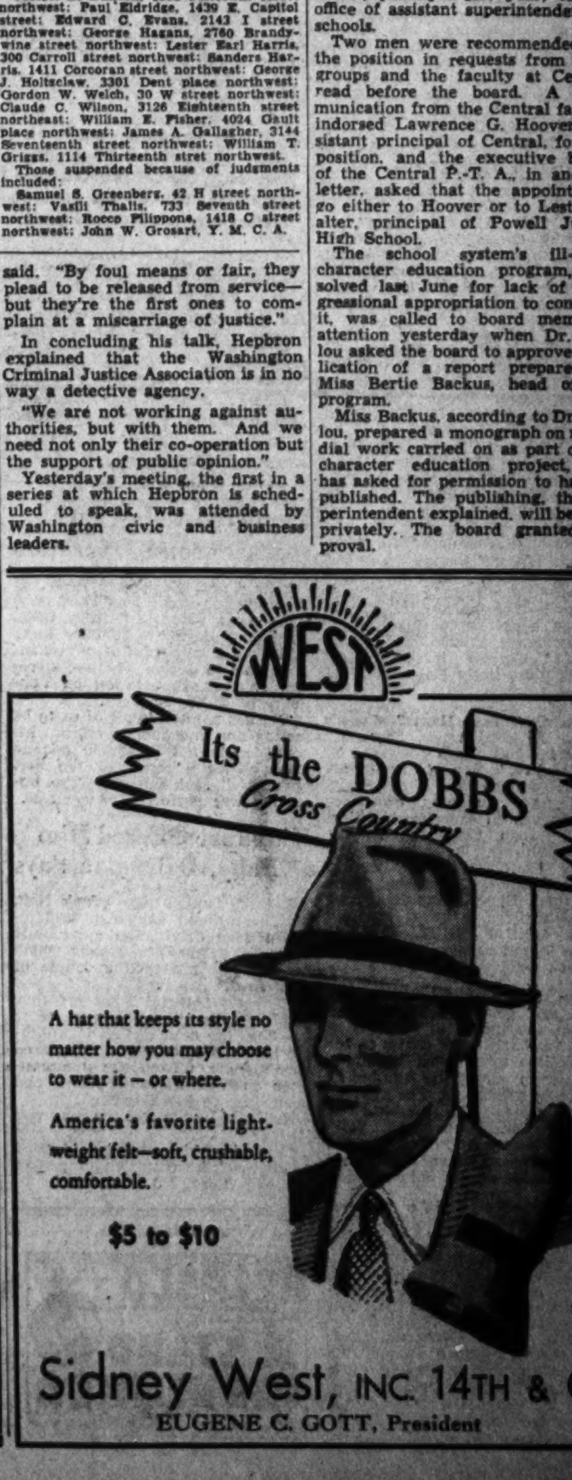

The school system's ill-fated character education program, dissolved last June for lack of Congressional appropriation to continue it, was called to board members' attention yesterday when Dr. Ballou asked the board to approve publication of a report prepared by Miss Bertie Backus, head of the program.

Miss Backus, according to Dr. Ballou, prepared a monograph on remedial work carried on as part of the character education project, and has asked for permission to have it published. The publishing, the superintendent explained, will be done privately. The board granted approval.

Worthy Choices Offered in New Week's Feature

'Anthony Adverse' Arrives; Shakespeare Rates a Second Week.

"Anthony Adverse"—Earle. The filmization of Hervey Allen's lengthy tale of a romantic rover will have a gala premiere at 11:15 o'clock tonight, with regular performances scheduled daily beginning 9:15 a. m tomorrow. Because the feature picture runs well over two hours, it will be accompanied by no vaudeville presentation. Fredric March has the title role and Olivia de Havilland is the feminine lead. Steffi Duna is cast as Neleta, black-and-white sweetheart of Anthony at the time he is a slave trader in Africa. Anthony's mother, compelled by her father to marry a Spanish nobleman and who dies at the birth of her son, is portrayed by Anita Louise. Claude Rains is the Spanish grandee who slays his wife's lover (Louis Hayward) in a duel. Others in support include Donald Woods, Edmund Gwenn, Gale Sondergaard, Billy Mauch, Fritz Leiber, Pedro de Cordoba and Henry O'Neill, not to mention a formidable ensemble of extras.

"Swing Time"—RKO-Keith's. It is hardly news that this latest of the Astaire-Rogers terpischorean treats embarks upon its second week in the Capital tomorrow, for a mere seven days is wholly inadequate to accomodate Fred's and Ginger's large and still growing public. Manager Hardie Meakin does hasten to add, however, that a new attraction on the coming week's bill is the latest issue of "March of Time," narrating in its own individual way the stories of the Rev. Gerald Smith, heir presumptive of the late Huey P. Long's social schemes; the purification of milk, and the moot Passamaquoddy tidal power project. And last, but far from least, a visit to Keith's may bring you a Packard car, a cash prize or a batch of guest tickets. Details will be supplied by the box-office.

"A Son Comes Home"—Loew's Columbia. Mary Boland, who has been given one light comedy role after another since she deserted Broadway for Hollywood several years ago, goes in for strong drama in this feature which opens a week's engagement tomorrow. It tells of a mother who awaits word of a son who ran away 15 years before the story opens. A youth arrested on suspicion of murder claims he is the prodigal one. Though the mother feels he is an impostor, thoughts of her own son impel her to help clear this lad. Her investigation reveals her true son as the murderer, forcing her to choose between sending him to his death or allowing the innocent imposter, whom she has learned to love, to be falsely convicted.

"Romeo and Juliet"—National. Continuing for a second week, beginning Sunday, is this latest and most opulent manifestation of the best known love story in English literature. Leslie Howard is Romeo, Norma Shearer the equally tragic Juliet and a veritable who's who among the screen's top notchers essay the important roles of Mercutio (John Barrymore), Tybalt (Basil Rathbone), and the nurse (Edna May Oliver). And among others you will find Ralph Forbes, Conway Tearle, Reginald Denny, Andy Devine, C. Aubrey Smith, Henry Kolker, Robert Warwick and Katherine de Mille. This, don't forget, is a road show, two-a-day attraction, performances beginning at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m.

"Give Us This Night"—Belasco. This long awaited co-starring vehicle of Jan Keipura and Gladys Swarthout will make its debut in Layfayette Square Saturday, following "I Stand Condemned," which opened the Belasco's 1936-37 season. The Paramount operetta is peopled by Phillip Merivale, Benny Baker, Michelette Burani, William Collier, sr., Sidney Toler, Charles Judels and others, as well as by the two singers who are the stars. With the locale in Sorrento and Naples, "Give Us This Night" has lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II and music by Dr. Erich Wolfgang Korngold. The screen play, by Edwin Justus Mayer and Lynn Starling, is based on a story by Jacques Bachrach.

"The Last of the Mohicans"—Loew's Capitol. Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Bruce Cabot and others are featured in this adventure story based on the novel by James Fenimore Cooper. Outstanding among the film's many exciting sequences are the defense of Fort William Henry against the French onslaught; Cora's death leap from the heights of Lover's Cliff; the eleventh-hour rescue of Hawkeye from the Hurons' torture stake and the hand-to-hand tomahawk duel between the renegade half-breed and the last of the Mohicans. Hal Sherman, eccentric comedian, headlines the stage portion, which also presents Jeanette Hackett, Carl Emmy's Pets, Dolly Kay and Elida Dancers.

"The Gorgeous Hussy"—Loew's Palace. A third week, beginning tomorrow, has been earned by Metro's picturization of the Samuel Hopkins Adams story of Peggy O'Neale, her romances, escapades and influence on American political history. Joan Crawford, as the gorgeous hussy, is supported by Melvyn Douglas, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore, Franchot Tone and Beulah Bondi. Supplementing the feature are a novel two-reel subject entitled "Killer Dog," a Mickey Mouse cartoon and a fresh newsreel.

"State Fair"—Metropolitan. His mortal self gone but his memory fresh in the minds of millions of admirers, Will Rogers comes to the Metropolitan for a week beginning tomorrow in one of the funniest of his screen successes. The revived picture boasts the presence of Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory, as well as its beloved star.

"Arizona"—Roadside Theater. One week of this melodrama, which the same company played earlier in its summer season, and the Roadsiders will be ready to call it quits for the year. The return engagement commences Monday night.

"Beauty Parade"—Gayety. Featuring the well-known dancer, Ann Corio, this burlesque attraction gets under way Sunday. Principals include, besides Miss Corio, the blonde Bee Keller and Manny Bling, chief comedian.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald G. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

THE picture which will follow Miss Crawford's hussy into the Palace has a real sock. And we make haste to add that the sock referred to is not the one Gary Cooper delivers flush upon the jaw of Madeleine Carroll. Pushing ladies on the chin ceased being a novelty not long after Jimmy Cagney started the screen fad by letting Alice White have one on her surprised beezer. (And what ever became, by the way, of Jimmy Cagney and Alice White?)

"LUCKY" O'HARA.

No, "The General Dies at Dawn" definitely does not rely on the aforementioned Mr. Cooper's poke at the aforementioned Miss Carroll to make it a truly distinctive bit of movie diversion. Indeed, you may come away without even remembering the incident. Your forgetfulness may be due to the fact that (1) when a man pops a woman it's not news, or (2) that "The General Dies at Dawn" has ever so many other qualities to thrill to and enjoy.

It had local drama desks biting their fingernails yesterday at a preview screening in the Fox Film Exchange. It's got the thrills and chills and suspense of a 15-part serial about pioneers waiting for the Fourth Cavalry to save them from the Indians. It has a Gary Cooper who was never better, camera treatment as artistic as those old German releases that starred Emil Jannings, story interest that never wavers, even if a great part of it is sheer hokum.

Yes, sir, you may be assured that Paramount's latest starring vehicle for Gary Cooper has more than one sock. It has many, many pairs of socks.

And not the least of them is the delightfully different manner in which this tale of a Chinese war lord and an American soldier of fortune gets under way. For the first five minutes or so not a line is spoken. Instead, there are pictures, pictures of junks and refugees and buildings, pictures informing one that this is a China seething with unrest and misery.

Nor is this early pictorial excellence a flash in the pan, something to be jettisoned when the story, after some delay, swings into action. Photographically and in every other technical detail, "The General Dies at Dawn" is first-grade.

But, of course, the producers don't expect to sell their output on the strength of mere mechanical perfection. "The General" would get nowhere if its greatest boast was keen pictures and authentic settings. Graced with a dare-devil performance by Lucky O'Hara (Cooper), a fast-moving script which, incidentally, was written by Clifford Odets of "Waiting for Lefty" fame, and some of the tootinest shootin' imaginable, it is destined to be sure-fire to male audiences especially and to those ladies who can take their action and like it, too.

While much blood is spilt on the Chinese landscape, there is no paucity of humor. The love interest, while there, is de-emphasized, which is a good thing for the picture, even if it does make Tillie and Dot pout.

The scene-stealing General Yang (he's the fellow who dies at dawn) alone will be worth the admission fee. The role is played by Akim Tamiroff.

Having spent the Labor Day week-end in New York, Fred Astaire left the other night for Hollywood to prepare for his next picture, tentatively titled "Stepping Toes." (Could that be an unoriginal composite of "Stepping Stones" and "On Your Toes"?) During his short stay in Manhattan—Fred returned to the States only last Friday after a three-week visit with his sister, Adele, Lady Cavendish, in London—Fred dropped in Radio City Musir Hall to see himself in "Swing Time." George and Ira Gershwin already have completed four musical numbers for "Stepping Toes," which will be based on an original story by Lee Loeb and Harold Buchman.

Steered by Carter Barron and Ray Bell, of the Loew forces, into the Variety Club yesterday, we had the pleasure of clinking beer mugs with Senia Solomonoff, celebrated Russian dancer who has just opened his own studios at No. 1 Thomas Circle.

It was he who taught the great Argentina, tutored Edna Wallace Hopper, appeared for several years as a solo dancer at the Metropolitan Opera House and who, only recently, went to Italy to direct the dances for that nation's famous Ba-Ta-Clan.

In 1935, Solomonoff was engaged by St. Petersburg, Fla., to direct the Municipal Civic Ballet. Nine years ago he helped fashion the Theater Chmaps Elysees program in Paris honoring the successful transatlantic flight of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Microphones, flash bulbs, top hats and bright lights promise to make tonight's premiere of "Anthony Adverse" at the Earle something to be remembered. John J. Payette, Warner's zone manager, has corralled representatives of more than 40 countries to be his guests. They are in Washington for the Third World Power Conference.

He has received invitation acceptances from officials of Great Britain, Peru, Italy, Mexico, France, Chile, Cuba, Japan, Finland, Austria, Irish Free State, Venezuela, Denmark, Canada, Netherlands, Bulgaria, El Salvador, Union of South Africa, Lithuania and Australia.

If that doesn't bring Geneva to Thirteenth street, we'd like to know how it's done.

Tickets for the second week of "Romeo and Juliet" go on sale today at the National box office, hours being from 9 to 9 daily. Incidentally, Mrs. Henry Gratian Doyle, president of the Board of Education, will discuss Hollywood's handling of the Bard's most famous love story at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow over Station WJSV.

Miscellany: Loew's Capitol celebrates its ninth anniversary the week of September 18 by presenting "The Road to Glory" on the screen and a vaudeville program headlined by Dancers Florence and Alvarez . . . the Pepconians, dramatic club of the Potomac Electric Power Co., will present "The Bride Elect" as their first offering of the fall season . . . speaking of anniversaries, Mickey Mouse reaches the 8-mark in a few weeks and the event will be celebrated with a birthday party at Loew's Palace . . . a cactus plant from out West which failed to arrive in time to be used as a "prop" in the Roadsiders' production of "Arizona" earlier in the season will make its debut when the melodrama is revived next week out Maryland way.

Pendergast May Face A Second Operation

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—W. E. Burnett, son-in-law of Thomas J. Pendergast, Kansas City (Mo.) Democratic leader, said today there will be a consultation of physicians tomorrow to decide whether a second abdominal operation on Pendergast will be necessary.

"He has seemed to all of us to be feeling fine and doing well, but his condition is not what the doctors expected as a result of the first operation," said Burnett. The operation was performed August 25.

Kidnaper Offered Him Baby, Dairyman Says

Detroit, Sept. 9 (AP).—Frank Neff, a Milan (Mich.) dairyman, said today a man driving an automobile had tried to give him a baby which he said he "kidnaped a couple of days ago."

Neff told Marshal Tom Goderich, of Milan, that the baby appeared to be about the same age as 20-month-old Harry Browne, who disappeared here Saturday from the perambulator in which his brothers had taken him to Clark Park.

Neff said he thought the man was joking.

Neff asked him what he intended to do with the child, and the man replied: "Lord, I don't know."

The Red Pavilion

By Pauline Stiles

SYNOPSIS.

Shortly after the World War Roger Mallard, handsome young Englishman, is embittered by the loss of hearing in one ear from a war injury. Mal has been raised by his godfather, William Grimwold, an actor. Grimmy persuades Mal to attend a New Year's Eve party, where he meets lovely Pamella Wyeth, though he forsets her on meeting Zelda Manners. A month later Mal marries Zelda. After two years the marriage ends disastrously. In a rage at his failure to make a living on the stage, Zelda flings a mirror at Mal and unknowingly destroys the hearing in his other ear. Fourteen years later, under Grimmy's tutelage, Mal has become a great success in pictures, hiding his affliction from his public. Zelda has refused him a divorce. Pamella Wyeth has a home in Pasadena. David Barkley, son of an old friend, boards with her. At the premiere of Mal's latest film David meets Ellen Greet, and invites her to a New Year's Eve party at the hotel where Mallard lives, and asks Pamella along as chaperon. Mal is mourning the sudden death of Grimmy. He writes a letter of resignation to his producer. David, as a joke on Ellen, has a boy page her with a message that Roger Mallard wants to meet her. Mal, skillful at lip reading, is sitting at the next table. Attracted by Pamella, Mal introduces himself and asks to join their party.

CHAPTER 10.

Ditched.

The dinner now progressed on a tone of excitement constantly augmented with the aid of Mal's champagne. He noted that Mr. Barkley was downing glass after glass in the most reckless manner. To hold the center of the stage, was far from Mal's habit, but he insisted on doing it now. Judging from the delighted looks on their faces, even Miss Wyeth's, whose delight was also mixed with a sort of puzzled wonder, he allowed himself to believe that they didn't grudge him his spot light. He led the talk, tossing it skillfully about. He took pains to toss it most frequently in the direction of Miss Pamella Wyeth.

"Accent on the second syllable, please, Mr. Mallard," she corrected him.

"Thank you," Mal murmured.

"Rather a silly name—my great grandmother's," Pam gazed at him intently.

"A beautiful name," Mal returned her intent gaze, "because it's yours."

A crash of music broke into Mal's contemplation of Miss Wyeth. He could feel the vibration of the drums and horns and cymbals on the floor. Even the air pulsated with rhythm. Couples were leaving the tables and moving out into the center of the dance floor.

Mal turned with an eager smile to Miss Wyeth, who smiled back at him. Her smile was charming, though it denied him and nooded him on to Ellen. Before Mr. Barkley could do so, Mal stood and bowed over the girl.

"Would you care to dance?"

Would she care to! As she sank into Mal's arms, she tossed back, laughing: "See here, you boys. There's to be no cutting in on this dance."

Mal found out all about Miss Ellen Greet as he guided her over a floor so crowded with dancers it was a miracle how any of them danced at all. He learned that his little partner had left a home in Hartford, Conn., to come West, seeking a job unaided. How she'd been forced to land in the offices of a Pasadena law firm by means of a stenographic course she'd had at school and a letter to the head of the firm from her father. How she liked her job at earning her own living and at seeing life through a law office. He was told all about her experiences at his premiere the preceding evening and her feelings arising therefrom. And he did his best to edit her panegyrics over the part he had played in stimulating her emotions.

"Would you mind telling me," whispered Ellen, nestling with delight in his arms, "telling me—what—what made you notice me in all this crowd of lovely girls and women?"

"Your young chaperon," Mal answered with prompt truth.

"Well, I knew you'd approve of chaperons," Ellen said triumphantly. "That's why I wouldn't come here with David without one—"

"You'll never know how grateful that makes me!"

"You're just the kind of man who——"

"Not putting another halo on me, are you, for I'm not eligible to wear it."

"O, yes you are!"

Just People.

"See here, my dear, don't let your idealistic imagination run away with you. Picture stars are more than apt to be—just people with the full quota of failings and—in some cases at least—lacks. You'd be woefully disillusioned, wouldn't you, if I were to tell you that one of the most beautiful of the stars is half-blind, for instance, with eyes so myopic they're almost crossed. Another is well-night totally deafened—though rather clever with it. Another makes his audiences howl over his antics though he helps himself to do it with an artificial hand. And one of the great screen lovers lost a leg in the war."

"Three of these—well, if not lame ducks, exactly, certainly lame swans—are here. But I'll not pick them out for you. You'll have to find them yourself," Mal said, laughing at her. "We of the picture world only give away our scandals to the public."

Ellen replied by saying: "O, dear, the music's stopped!"

When it began again, Mr. Barkley sprang up and snatched his defaulting Cinderellen out from under Mr. Mallard's greatly admired nose. This seizure didn't please the lady, but after all, David was a tricky dancer, her surrender seemed to say. While the other two couples were slowly becoming separated from their champagne glasses, Mal held out an eager hand to Pamella.

"And now—at last, Miss Wyeth——"

She got up and laughed in a reminiscent little way.

"I was hoping this might happen!"

"Hoping? What's that to do with certainties?"

The crowd was growing steadily more hilarious though midnight was still over an hour and a half due. Miss Wyeth seemed so small and defenseless, keeping very much to herself—quite unlike other women—within his arms, that Mal looked anywhere but into her face. He was trying with all the skill he had to keep her from being crushed among the jam of dancers. Then he felt her eyes searching his. He glanced down quickly.

"You said something? This is the second time," he laughed, "I've caught you mistaking me for a ghost."

Her reply didn't fit the awed conviction shining in her face.

"No—I just wanted to see if you looked as scornful as your silence indicated, over my banal remarks about your kindness in giving us such a thrill tonight—on top of the thrill you gave us at the premiere."

"I'm sorry! There's such a racket. Rather awful, isn't it?"

Table Deserted.

She nodded, but on the whole gave the impression that she would put up with the racket for his sake. A delightful girl!

"Let's get away," Mal said abruptly. "Let's go out on the terrace where we can have some quiet while we talk."

Miss Wyeth readily agreed to this, and Mal suggested that they first return to the table for her wrap.

They found the table deserted and left very much in disarray. Several champagne glasses were toppled over among crumpled napkins. Chairs were pushed back with a look of haste, one or two of them tipped drunkenly forward. Miss Wyeth began to look worried.

Propped against an empty bottle at her place was one of the Excelsior's elaborate white and silver menus. A black scrawl of writing smeared itself across the back of the card.

"Too much competition—mixed with deceit from an unexpected quarter. As I can't convince my little Cinderellen that our friend isn't any more Mallard than I am, in spite of his goshawful voice and shifty eyes, I'm kidnaping her for the rest of the evening. Surely the Mallard imposter, who pretends to do everything the right way, will offer to see you home.

"P. S.—My advice—if he does—is to turn him down cold. D."

Mal never missed a chance to strengthen his position by being squeamish about reading over shoulders. Yet he asked anxiously: "Anything wrong, Miss Wyeth?"

"Yes. I've been most—unkindly ditched."

Roanoke Legislator Accused of Forgery

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 9 (AP).—Raye O. Lawson, Roanoke member of the House of Delegates, was indicted here yesterday on five forgery charges. True bills were laso returned on two grand larceny charges and an embezzlement charge.

Lawson, soon after the grand jury acted, issued a statement in which he said "political slugging" was behind the indictments and said he had been given no opportunity to present his case at a preliminary hearing as, he asserted, is the usual procedure in criminal cases.

His administration of funds in his care, he said, had been used as a basis for the charges.

English Star Seen Net Title Threat After Rousing Win

Helen Jacobs' 5th Crown in Danger

Alice Marble Also Goes to Semifinals; Perry, Grant Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Firmly entrenching herself as a serious threat to Helen Jacobs' ambition to win the title for the fifth straight time, left-handed Kay Stammers, of England, today stole the show in the United States singles tennis championships as she out-gamed and outplayed a courageous Carolin Babcock in a rousing quarter-final match.

The attractive southpaw star's 7—5, 3—6, 6—4 triumph, which advanced her to the semifinals, paled into insignificance the other quarter-final victory scored at 6—2, 11—9, by Alice Marble, of San Francisco, over Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., and likewise overshadowed the progress of her compatriot, Fred Perry, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, jr., of Atlanta, to the penultimate round in the men's championship.

Is Slam Bang Affair.

Miss Stammers and Miss Babcock met in the same round a year ago when the English player also won in three sets and before that in Wightman Cup competition. They set out from the start trying to blast each other out of the concrete stadium which was partly filled with several thousand spectators.

Their murderous shots from both wings were greeted by constant applause from the galleryites who were impartial. It was a slam-bang affair from the start, at the same time producing some of the finest shotmaking in either the men's or women's divisions of the combined tournament.

Loser Muffs Chances.

Miss Stammers, too, had her moments of inconsistency, but they were not so frequent as those which plagued Miss Babcock. The Californian miserably muffed two chances to take commanding control of the first set, "blowing" 40—0 leads for two-game margins in both the fourth and sixth games. But she never gave up fighting, even after yielding the fourth game of the second set at love on service to trail, 1—3.

At this point Miss Stammers, apparently taking too much for granted, became a trifle ragged and repeatedly bungled a flock of easy overhead smashes and volleys. Meanwhile Miss Babcock rallied to win five straight games and the set.

In the third and final set, Miss Stammers broke away fast to a 40—0 lead, but the Californian, breaking through her opponent's delivery in the sixth and eighth games, pulled up to 4—5.

Sporting Gesture.

In the tenth game, with the invader serving and the count 15-all, Miss Stammers' first serve for the third point was called out. The lineman's decision was questioned by the Californian, but the umpire sustained it. Miss Stammers then served the next ball out, too, now trailing, 15—30.

Miss Babcock then made a neat sporting gesture, but one that was costly to her cause, by purposely batting out her rival's next serve. The next two points were duck soup for Miss Stammers.

The British star will meet the

D. C. Amateur Hopes Play Walker Cup Aces

By Dave Herman,

Four Washington golfers—Roger Peacock, of Congressional; Levi Yoder, of Kenwood; Forrest Thompson, of Beaver Dam, and Gene Pittman, of Kenwood—drew Walker Cup stars for their first opponents in the all-match play National Amateur championship which opens Monday at Garden City (L. I.) Country Club.

Peacock, the District's foremost challenger for the title vacated by Lawson Little, was presented with a bye for the first round, but the man he meets in the second round next Tuesday will be Dr. William Sweddell, runner-up for the 1935 British Amateur Championship, and captain of the English Walker Cup team.

Albert (Scotty) Campbell, the Seattle sensation, twice former Canadian amateur titleholder, regarded as one of the "hottest" members of the American team, which routed the British at Pine Calley recently, will oppose Thompson, the one-time sandlot baseball player, veteran of Washington's contingent of eight in the blue-ribbon championship.

Yoder, Middle Atlantic champion, squares off against Ed White, of Bonham, Tex., the young fellow who won the National Intercollegiate at Congressional last year. There was a report current last night that White, who starred on the Walker Cup Team, had dropped out of the tournament and returned to his home in Texas.

Eighteen-year-old John Langley, youngest member ever to play on the British Walker Cup team, was paired with Pittman, the little Kenwood golfer, who has made such a hit since coming here from Texas last spring.

Pittman is in the first quarter of the championship in which 210 golfers will compete. Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, former National Open titleholder, and Francis Ouimet, Walker Cup captain, are among other topnotch players in this quarter.

Peacock and Tweddell are in the second quarter. In this same division Claude Rippey, of East Potomac Club, first Washington public links golfer ever to compete in the National Amateur, will oppose M. H. Ward, of Takoma, Wash.

The third quarter, in which Campbell, and two other Walker Suppers—George Voigt and Reynolds Smith—have been assigned matches—is considered the easiest of the four divisions, although Thompson had the misfortune to draw one of the country's aces for his first match.

Bobby Brownell, 17-year-old Indian Spring strippling, who last Sunday defeated Peaccock in the District Amatur finals, battles Ralph Strafaci, of Brooklyn, brother of the former National Public Links titleholder, Frankie, in the fourth bracket—same bracket in which Yoder competes.

In this bracket, Tommy Webb, of Washington Golf and Country Club, meets Charlie Boywid, of Chicago, and Volney Burnett, of Indian

$80,000 Spent By Reds for 5 Players

Recent Purchases Total $115,000 as Crosley Sees Flag in '37.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds, enjoying one of their most prosperous seasons in a decade, set their sights toward the National League pennant today by paying $80,000 in cash and players for five minor league stars.

The purchases, which included four players from Nashville of the Southern Association and Third Baseman Eddie Joost of the San Francisco Missions, brought to more than $115,000 the total the Reds have spent for baseball "ivory" in the last few weeks.

President Powel Crosley, jr., indicated the program of building for 1937 and future years had not yet ended.

"I'm not predicting a pennant for next year," he said, "but we're building the club with the view to winning it the first chance we get. I know Manager Chuck Dressen will be aiming for the championship next year. We're going to help him all we can by going after any minor league players we believe can do us some good."

Crosley said the attendance at the Reds' home game so far this season had surpassed 500,000, far ahead of last season when the club turned in a $50,000 profit and one of the largest season totals in more than ten years.

Jockey G. Elston Is Found Suicide

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 9.—Gilbert Elston, Helena, Mont., known to racing fans as the "gentleman jockey," was found shot to death here today. Coroner John M. Keaney returned a verdict of suicide.

Elston, who called everyone "mister," formerly rode for the C. V. Whitney stables and in 1931 was ranked as the No. 1 jockey of the middlewest.

Several years ago Elston was injured in a spill at Latonia and since then has been doing only occasional work.

He was found in a small bedroom with bullet wounds in the chest and forehead.

Boswell, 20-1, Triumphs in St. Leger

Woodward Horse Wins $62,600 Purse in Old English Classic.

By the Associated Press.

Doncaster, England, Sept. 9.—Lightly regarded in the wagering, William Woodward's Boswell, a 20-to-1 shot, today won the 156th running of the St. Leger Stakes, last of the British turf season's classics for 3-year-olds.

The New York banker's colt, a brown son of Bosworth-Flying Gal 2d, came from behind in the stretch and drew out to win by three-quarters of a length from A. G. Smith's Fearless Fox. Three lengths farther back came the Aga Khan's Derby winner, Mahmoud.

Boswell, running the 1¾ miles in 3 minutes 8 2-5 seconds, earned £10,554 (about $52,770) for his owner. The total purse was £12,535 (about $62,675.

Pat Beasley, who rode Woodward's Omaha in that great colt's heart-breaking defeat in the Ascot Gold Cup race, had the mount on Boswell and rode a heady race. He had Boswell in a threatening position all the way and then sent the colt into the lead in the stretch. Fearless Fox challenged but Boswell held him safe.

4 Homers Beat Tigers, 11-4, Lift Nats Into 3d

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, Sept. 9.—On the impetus of two home runs that Red Kress sent soaring over the leftfield fence, the Nats soared into undisputed possession of third place this afternoon.

When the effects of Kress' first home run with Sington on base in the sixth inning wore off an inning later as the Tigers staged a two-run uprising and tied the score, Kress rifled another home run over the same wall in the eighth inning to give the Nats a permanent lead.

They won the ball game, ultimately, by a score of 11 to 4, with a grand outburst of home-run hitting in which Kress played the leading role. Ben Chapman and Freddie Sington also contributed a homer apiece in the late innings and the four circuit swats drove in seven runs, accounting for the Nats' winning margin.

Chapman's blow, though superfluous, was a comforting clout indeed, to the Nats. It occurred in the eighth inning at a time when Joe Cascarella was attempting to protect a 5-4 lead Kress' second homer had given him. With two Nats on base, Chapman blasted the ball over the left field wall to boost the Nats' margin to 8-4.

Cascarella Gives 10 Hits.

The Nats' triumph was especially sweet in that the victim of their 13-hit attack was the rookie left-hander, Jake Wade, who in his last appearance at Griffith Stadium a week ago had beaten Washington with a three-hit preformance.

Joe Cascarella held the Tigers to 10 hits but he was at his best after the Tigers deadlocked the score at 4-4 in the sixth. In those last three innings he gave up only two hits, both singles by Gerald Walker.

The Tigers set themselves up to a 2-0 lead in the third inning when Al Simmons singled with the bases full. Young Wade did not permit a hit until the fourth when Hill doubled to center, but the Nats caught up with him in the fifth.

Sington Starts Rally.

Kennedy Beats Walberg and Grove to Win 20th; Error Wins Game.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Vernon Kennedy outlasted Rube Walberg and Bob Grove in a 13-inning pitchers' battle today to achieve his twentieth victory of the season as the Chicago White Sox defeated Boston, 3 to 2.

The White Sox, who retained possession of second place in the American League by conquering the Red Sox, tied the score in the ninth, driving Walberg out of action. Grove held them scoreless for three sessions, but helped let in the winning run when he threw the ball away on Larry Rosenthal's hit, Mike Kreevich, who had doubled to start the thirteenth, scoring. Kennedy held Boston to 10 hits, while Walberg and Grove yielded 11.

Potomac Boatmen Hold Annual Regatta Sunday

The Potomac Boat Club holds its annual club regatta Sunday and will be host to the Old Dominion Boat Club of Alexandria in what promises to be a keenly-contested aquatic meet. As they were defeated earlier in the year by the local club, the Virginians have pointed for this chance to regain prestige.

Pearson's 8-Hit Win Ends 3 Years in 2d, Scores Are 11-3, 12-9

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 9.—The New York Yankees blasted the Cleveland Indians to defeat in a double-header today to make the 1936 American League championship a certainty, after finishing second three consecutive seasons.

After Monte Pearson had held the Indians to eight hits to win the first game, 11 to 3, the Yankees downed the Indians, 12 to 9, in a slugging match, despite being outhit. Bump Hadley was the winner in the finale, although he had to yell for relief in the eighth inning when the Indians threatened by scoring four times. Gehrig hit his forty-fourth home run in the nightcap with the bases loaded.

Record Pennant Dash.

"Yeah," said a sports writer, "but it takes more than breaks to bring you in home with the pennant on September 9. That is the earliest the American League flag ever has been won and it is four days earlier than the great 1927 Yanks clinched it."

McCarthy's ball players were plenty happy as they changed their sweat shirts, imbibed in soft cold drinks and ate ice cream.

Possibly the most pleased was slender, modest Monte Pearson, whom the Indians sent to New York last winter in a trade for Pitcher Johnnie Allen. It was Pearson who had set the Cleveland team back with eight hits in the game which clinched the pennant.

"You don't need to ask me if I'm happy," Pearson said as he fingered the "pennant" ball—the one which Roy Hughes, Cleveland second baseman, hit for a long fly, the last out of the game.

"I certainly was lucky in that winter trading, falling in with a pennant winner and into a world series. But, I've had my best year in the majors. That was my eighteenth win this afternoon—as many as my best previous year."

Second for McCarthy.

"Ready to take the World Series, Joe?" a friend shouted to McCarthy.

"Gee, I hope so," McCarthy replied. "The club's in good shape now and we should be able to win it."

This was the second championship McCarthy has won during his six years as manager of the New Yorkers. In 1932 his team went on to win the World Series with four straight victories over Chicago's Cubs. It was the eighth American League championship for the Yankees.

Joe DiMaggio, sensational young outfielder playing his first season in the majors, was "tickled to death" that his first year in fast company was with a pennant winner.

"And I'm gonna try awful hard

Giants Split With Reds, 4-2, 2-3

Fitzsimmons Yields 8 Hits in Opener; Ott Hits Timely.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—The Giants' National League lead was clipped to 4½ games today as the Cincinnati Reds split a twin bill with the pace setters.

The Giants won the opener, 4 to 2, behnd Freddy Fitzsimmons' eight-hit pitching. The Reds got to Hal Schumacher for two runs in the third and another in the fifth to sew up the nightcap for a 3-to-2 decision.

With the second-place St. Louis Cardinals winning their single start against Boston, the split for the New Yorkers kept the Gas House Gang in the running.

Schumacher Hits Homer.

A three-run rally in the fifth inning, in which Mel Ott's timely single drove in two runs, put the opener on ice for Fitzsimmons. The only two Reds' runs were accounted for by Alex Kampouris' homer in the sixth with a mate on base.

In the nightcap, Hal Schumacher's homer, a long, 450-foot clout, gave the Giants one of their two runs, and Ott's infield grounder sent Joe Moore across with the other, but for the most part, Benny Frey and Peaches Davis, who divided the

All-Stars, Out of Shape, Viewed Game as Lark

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—Now it can be told. The New York Giants' 12-2 victory over the College All-Stars at the Polo Grounds last night was a keen disappointment to those who knew the setup for the game.

The Eastern professional champions missed the greatest chance the postgraduate players ever have had to deal a crushing blow to the Collegians' claims that they play the better brand of football. Despite the fact that they lost to the Giants last night, the All-Stars actually increased the prestige of coolege football with those acquainted with the mental and physical condition of the All-Americans.

Ever since their 7-7 tie with the Detroit Lions at Chicago a week ago, the college players were out on a big joyride. They took the game about as seriously as a major league baseball team takes an exhibition game with a class D club in the spring. Few of the players observed training rules and some of the violations were so flagrant that one player didn't even practice the day before the game because of a night of celebrating. Another prominent player confessed that he wanted to get the game over as quickly as possible so that he could go out on a party.

The coaches knew what was going on but had no discipline over the players. During one of the training sessions in Chicago, Coach Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, drove the squad through a three-hour workout and almost started a rebellion. After that Bierman discarded the tactics he used to send Minnesota through the past three years unbeaten, and preserved peace by letting the players do almost as they pleased.

"I saw the kids were holiday bent," said Bierman, "and had no desire to play football. I don't blame them much because hard training is drudgery but you have to go through it if you want to win football games. Since they were in no mood to take the game seriously, I let them have their way, more or less. I knew, too, that I probably could get more out of them in the game even though they might not be in the right condition."

In one talk to the collegians, Bierman cracked down on the All-Stars, many of whom were impressed with their reputations.

1934 Champ 'Satisfactory' In Return

Ukraine Favorite in Dead Heat With Moralist in 2d.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 9 (AP).—Although he defeated only one rival in a seven-horse race and disappointed the crowd that made him an odds-on favorite, Cavalcade, the 3-year-old champion of 1934, gave a satisfactory performance to trainer Bob Smith today when he made his first start in more than 15 months in a mile and sixteenth allowance event at Narragansett Park.

This great turf star from Mrs. Isobel Dodge Sloan's Brookmeade Stable had been out of action since he injured his right front foot after tossing his rider at the start of the 1935 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park. He wore a bar plate o nthat foot today. When he finished in soun dcondition, with Georgie Woolf up and carrying 121 pounds, his trainer assured track officials he would start in next Wednesday's $25,000 Narragansett Special. There again he will match strides with Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery, which trailed him consistently as a 3-year-old.

Dead Heat in Double.

This race was captured by Phil Bieber's Chancing, which led from the start and crossed under the wire with a neck on C. V. Whitney's Piccolo, which had three lengths on the show horse, W. A. Jones' Boston Brook.

Cavalcade broke from the fourth stall in sixth place and improved his position only once, when he passed E. E. Russell's Sun Apollo nearing the far turn. The leaders, however, were too far out front and Woolf eased up on the son of Lancegaye, and Sun Appolo pulled ahead of him in the sertch. Chancing, clocked in 1:44 1-5, paid $8.50, $3.70 and $2.80. Piccolo returned $6.20 and $4, and Boston Brook's show price was $5.50.

Victor Emanuel's Miss Merriment captured the 6-furlon; feature by a half length from Mrs. Elizabeth A. Snow's Happy Knott and earned $3,045 by her victory. Miss A. Doris' Lady Higloss showed.

The second race, the tail end of the daily double, resulted in a dead heat between Mrs. F. Fossiter's Ukraine and William H. Gallagher's Moralist, which pushed out of the pack in the home stretch.

Jimmy Leto Signs As Foe for Furr

Jimmy Leto, Hartford welterweight who holds decisions over Frankie Klick and Harry Dublinsky and who fought World Featherweight Champion Lew Ambers to a draw, has been matched to fight Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium Monday night.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MEROVECH, $9.50, $5.20, $3.40; QUEEN VIC, $25.30, $13.60; ZULU LAD, $6.00.

MEROVECH was steadied along back of the pace until reaching the stretch, wore down the pacemaker when called upon and was going away at the end. QUEEN VIC, quickest to begin, drew clear in the first quarter mile and steadied along in front under slight restraint, fought it out willingly when called upon. ZULU LAD was well placed the entire trip and held on stoutly to the close. PRINCE DANNY was unable to reach the leaders under pressure after holding to a forward position during the first half mile. CAPITOL HILL was unable to enter into serious contention. SIR KAI dropped back in the opening stride and raced far back in a dull effort.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:53. Winner, Mrs. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—†UKRAINE, $4.10, $4.20, $3.10; †MORALIST, $9.40, $10.30, $5.70; REAL JAM, $3.30.

MORALIST had speed from the start, was on the outside around the turn into the backstretch, moved up on the outside rounding the far turn, closed stoutly and outlasting REAL JAM lasted to get a dead heat with UKRAINE. The latter, as usual, slow to begin, made his bid in the last three furlongs, saved ground into the stretch and closed going stoutly. REAL JAM displayed speed from the start, was given a breathing spell when DEDICATION went to the front, came again and held on willingly in the final drive. BALPIN, far back until the closing quarter mile, finished with a rush. DEDICATION stopped badly in the last three-sixteenths. ORTHOPRISM unable to reach the leaders.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:27½. Winner, Mrs. Etta M. Franc's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY KIN, $11.80, $6.80, $4.80; DIE HARD, $6.20, $4.40; TAKUS, $4.90.

MY KIN was prominently placed from the start, followed in nearest pursuit of OUR CREST for the opening half mile, wore the latter down when called upon and hard ridden at the end held DIE HARD safe. The latter, outpaced early, closed in determined fashion on the outside through the stretch. TAKUS closed in bold fashion in the last quarter mile and was going stoutly at the end. FESTOON closed a good gap. OUR CREST had keen early speed, faltering badly in the closing furlong. LADDIE STONE stopped after going a half mile.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $3,000 added. The Newport Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Victor Emanuel's br. m. (5), by High Time—Nobility. Trained by J. P. Smith. Net value to winner, $3,045; second, $600; third, $300; fourth, $150. Time, 0:23, 0:45 3-5, 1:11 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS MERRIMENT, $4.40, $3.20, $2.40; HAPPY KNOT, $3.90, $2.70; LADY HIGLOSS, $2.50.

MISS MERRIMENT had good speed from the beginning, was on the inside in the run down the backstretch, was eased back nearing the far turn and sent to the outside, responded gamely when called upon, took command in the stretch and held HAPPY KNOT safe. HAPPY KNOT displayed her usual keen early foot, drew clear leaving the backstretch and fought it out gamely when overtaken. LADY HIGLOSS avoided the early pace, was sent up on the outside when reaching the stretch and closed with good energy. BEEFSTEAK, well placed early, was unable to improve his position under punishment. BIEN FAIT was unable to threaten.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. The Hartford; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:28. Winner, P. Bieber's ch. h. (5), by Chance Play—Courtly. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $825; second, $165; third, $75; fourth, $35. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:38, 1:44 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHANCING, $8.50, $3.70, $2.80; PICCOLO, $6.20, $4.00; BOSTON BROOK, $5.60.

CHANCING went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew away into a good lead and hard ridden at the end held PICCOLO safe. The latter, restrained while holding to a prominent position, closed stoutly in the stretch and was gaining on the winner at every stride at the close. BOSTON BROOK, in nearest chase of the pace, was unable to reach the leader and faltered in the last furlong. ROSSELLI raced well up all the way, though unable to improve his position when placed under punishment. SUN APOLLO never could enter into contention. CAVALCADE, lightly restrained until last three furlongs, failed to respond when called upon.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and five furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:58. Off at 5:02. Winner, Mrs. J. J. Dolan's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RONFALON, $6.00, $3.60, $2.60; STILL ALARM, $6.50, $3.40; FIRST BID, $2.90.

RONFALON took command leaving the backstretch the first time, was rated along in front and hard ridden through the stretch, held sway to the end. STILL ALARM, in closest pursuit of the winner throughout, held on willingly to the end. FIRST BID went well placed all the way. ACE OF SPADES was taken far back and under a choking pull was never a threat. SECRET VOTE faltered. ANHELATION trailed all the way.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:33. Winner, Mrs. R. Pollard's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOCAP, $8.50, $4.90, $3.30; UNLAWFUL, $12.20, $6.20; THE TRIUMVIR, $4.20.

BOOCAP was not hurried during the early stages, began moving up in the last half mile, wore down UNLAWFUL for the lead when reaching the stretch, drawing out steadily in the last furlong. UNLAWFUL, in closest chase of the pace established by TUXPAN, disposed of the latter for the command and though holding on well, was unable to keep pace when challenged by the winner. THE TRIUMVIR, in close quarters after rounding the first turn, moved up stoutly in the half-mile pole, made a bid to reach the leaders after reaching the stretch though not good enough. STAR FIRE was well up all the way.

Time Out!

Narragansett Park, Sept. 9.

Dear Al:

This time last year the papers were full of reports of horses found to be stimulated. Whether or not the practice has been discontinued we cannot tell. The saliva tests go on and the positive findings are few and far between. The narcotics people have been quiet of late and if they know something they are keeping it to themselves. Most tracks have been examining every winner. They tell me that some of the horsemen were making a racket doping their charges and then taking second money. With the uncertainty of racing that would be drawing it pretty fine. A jockey would have a hard time making sure he was second in any race. This year the spotlight seems to be on dead heats. The all-Stephen finishes, oddities before the coming of the cameras, and now almost a daily occurrence. In the days before the cameras, the judges seldom called a dead heat. One official told me how a dead heat resulted in Maryland a few years ago. One judge called the first two horses as Nos. 4 and 5. A second judge said they finished 5 and 4. The third judge, who happened to be the senior man, said, "I didn't even see them." So the dead-heat sign was hung out. BILL.

First race—Beautiful seems well suited in the day's opening event. Catrone will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. Tooth Pick is a fair sort and should be at least second. Elizabeth Farley can better that last and may benefit from a change of riders.

Second race—Red Badge fits well in this field and packs the early speed that decides this kind of races. I'm going to string along. Starogan has worked well and may squeeze Bedight out of the place money.

Third race—Cap't Yarbough will draw a lot of play in this test and seems entitled to it. I'm depending on Porter for a good ride. Gayette has some promising races. Dusky Miss to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Aunt Flor gets the call here. She is fit as hands can make her and may make every post a winning one. Blue Gay and Pharatime to take care of the others.

Fifth race—The Tarn entry of Rushaway and Faust seems to hold a strong hand in this contest. Both are at their best and any price will be a good one. Knowing's last was a good effort. Black Mistress promises to be a keen factor.

Sixth race—Cohort Miss has been knocking at the door and probably will find this race to her liking. She favors the route. Bull Finch and Reservist to complete the money picture.

Seventh race—St. Jensund, with Longden to do the riding, should annex the chief part of this purse. Cablegram and Yap will be ready to battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Best bet—Red Badge.

Shea Captures Mid-Atlantic Golf Title

Dettweiler 2d in Junior Tourney; Victor Has Total of 154.

Billy Shea, raw-boned Congressional County Club golf star, who has won virtually every junior title of importance in this section, yesterday added the Middle Atlantic championship to his prized collection in the 36-hole tournament at Congressional's course.

Three over par in the morning with a beautiful exhibition of stroking, 18-year-old Shea took a five-stroke lead at the halfway mark, with red-haired Johnny Farrell, of Hillendale, namesake of the former Open champion back in second with a 79.

Detweiler, who seldom goes over the 80 mark in a round at Congressional, knocked his chances for a proverbial loop with an 82 in the morning. A 43 on the outgoing nine made it quite embarrassing for the tall lad, and his 39 didn't help him on the incoming side a bit. In the afternoon when Shea turned in 41, Dettweiler had picked up four strokes on him with an even par 37, but she averted a possible tie by coming home in 38, three over par, while Dettweiler soared to a 40.

Farrell was in a comfortable position to catch Shea after shooting a 79, but the Baltimorean took 85 strokes in the afternoon for 164, to tie for third with left-handed Marle Thorpe, jr., of Chevy Chase, who had 81-83—164.

PWA Nine Defeats Greenbelts, 4 to 3, in Post's Play-off Series

Farrell's Hit Is Big Blow Of Duel

Murphy and McIllhenny Hurl; 1,500 Watch Well-Played Game.

By the Associated Press.

Public Works Administration's fast-moving baseball team opened its drive for honors in The Washington Post Baseball Association week-day play-off series yesterday at South Ellipse with a rousing 4-3 victory over the Resettlement Greenbelts.

The game, witnessed by 1,500 fans, evolved into a pitchers duel between Jim Murphy, of PWA, and Mac McIllhenny, of the Greenbelts.

Murphy, his burning speed ball baffling the opposition in seven of the nine innings, yielded five hits, one of which was made by Pitcher McIllhenny, who slashed out a single in the second to score Keegin and Bradley with the first two runs.

PWA Starts With Rush.

Two runs were scored by PWA in the first inning. Koenig walked and was sacrificed to second by Hudson. Jewett beat out an intended sacrifice and Koenig went to third. Koenig scored on McIllhenny's wild pitch. Harvey hit a hot grounder which hopped over Wolfe's head, enabling Jewett to cross the platter.

Harvey, outfielder was the only man to get two hits. In the eighth inning Manager Jacobs, of Greenbelts, stated he was protesting the game, claiming that Harvey was ineligible. Play was not interrupted.

Capital Amateur Boxers in Victory

Testing his injured right after a long lay-off locally, Eddie Saugstad, of the District Engineers, bowed to Earl Tucker, to the tune of boos and catcalls. Saugstad pummeled his opponent viciously in the first heat, and was the aggressor in the last two.

Cardinals Down Bees, 3-1, in 15th

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Sept. 9.—Leo (Lippy) Durocher collected five hits off Deacon Danny MacFayden today and drove in enough runs to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-1 victory over the Boston Bees and break up the brilliant 15-inning pitching battle the bespectacled veteran waged with Righthander Jim Winford.

MacFayden, striving for his seventeenth triumph, held the Cards to 10 hits, three of which came in the fifteenth, when the visitors put on a two-run rally to gain their first success over the lowly Bees in seven starts.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

There's a lad at Catholic University named Irish Carroll who has been batting 1.000 in a football uniform for four years now and folks who are surveying the situation for a successor to Tuffy Leemans as Washington's big-shot back can rest their glance awhile on this fellow Carroll.

POVICH.

It seems that young Mr. Carroll insists upon playing winning football. No team that numbered the lad in its line-up since 1931 has lost a football game. Whenever young Carroll leaves the field, the worst he gets is a draw and only one tie game has marred his winning record in four seasons.

He captained the Baldwinsville (N. Y.) High School team through an undefeated season for the Long Island scholastic championship and then he moved his talents to La Salle Military Academy where he was part and parcel of a team that was unbeaten, untied and unscored on.

College football's far-flung espionage system spotted his talents in prep school and young Carroll was induced to come to Catholic University in 1935. The Carroll influence was immediate. Catholic University's freshmen experienced their first undefeated campaign in several seasons.

He joined up with the varsity last season and blossomed as the best back on the team, 178 pounds of curly-haired, bottle-legged dynamite. No undefeated season was Catholic University's, but young Carroll's record remained intact. In the only game which C. U. lost—to De Paul—our Mr. Carroll was tethered to the bench with three broken ribs suffered the week before.

Any time the Catholic University center snapped the ball to young Mr. Carroll last sason, it was synonymous with a gain of 8.4 yards. That was the yardage that the elusive Mr. Carroll averaged in his first year of varsity football, carrying the ball more than any other back on the team.

He's no Leemans, not yet, at least, but when Leemans graduated from Washington gridirons, the mantle of Washington's greatest current back fell becomingly upon the sturdy shoulders of young Carroll. Washington fans who saw him perform last season are of one mind about that, or ought to be.

Because, bluntly, young Carroll is a running piece of stuff. Three of C. U.'s major games last season, played on fields fetlock deep in mud, saw Carroll bouncing through the line, skirting the ends with sheer speed and tripping through a broken field like a galloping gazelle. He was awful good.

In Short—

Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova coach, recognized Carroll's talents when he named Carroll to the All-Catholic College team last season . . . for the National Catholic News Service . . . getting into shape to Carroll means that he will add about five pounds to his 175-pound frame within the next month . . . a summer's work in a machine shop where he was tossing centrifugal pumps around left Carroll as lean of fat as a steel-jacketed bullet . . . Coach Dutch Bergmann plays him at right halfback because he runs better to his left than to his right . . . he's an honor student, too, majoring in economics . . . The very snooty United States Golf Association has advised reporters covering the National Amateur tournament at Garden City, Long Island, next week, that the press entrance to the clubhouse will be through the servants' gate . . . but they add that it is a brand-new servants' gate.

Cobb Smashs 4 World Auto Marks in Bonneville Flats

By the Associated Press.

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 9.—John Cobb, of London, set four new world motor car speed records today and tonight Ab Jenkins, fighting to bring those four and many others back to the United States, charged the smiling Briton "trespassed" in his run on this famed salt speedway.

Jenkins, first racer to use the flats, was forced out of a projected 48-hour endurance grind Monday night by car trouble.

Today, as the Utah driver rushed repairs at Salt Lake City, Cobb took to the course and quickly captured two world records from his countryman, Capt. George E. T. Eyston, and an equal number from Von Souck, of Germany.

Asserting the American Automobile Association, through Arthur Pillsbury, chief Pacific zone times, "discriminated" in permitting Cobb on the course, Jenkins said.

"My car will be ready to go again Saturday. I had made arrangements to scrape the 12-mile circle which Cobb used and was intending to use it myself Friday or Saturday.

"I won't bother Cobb for the remainder of the week, but I do want to protest against discrimination by the AAA. Pillsbury took the liberty of permitting Cobb to trespass."

Cobb showed up unexpectedly at dawn in his unorthodox high-wheeled, airplane-motored racer and was off on a 12-mile circular course almost before any save his mechanics knew what he was about at 6:07 a. m. (9:07 a. m. Eastern standard time).

Cobb's new marks in terms of miles per hour:

Distance or time	Cobb	Old record
One hour	167.690	162.53 (Eyston)
200 kilometers	166.266	162.42 (Eyston)
100 kilometers	167.618	163.40 (Stuck)
100 miles	168.59	166.04 (Stuck)

Kress' Homers Lift Nats to 11-4 Win

Wade with a double to center and then it was that Kress drove his first home run over the scoreboard. But the Tigers got a run back immediately when Gehringer drove a pitch into the right field seats and they tied it at 4-4 when Myatt singled after Cascarella walked Rogell and hit Owen.

Nothing of importance happened after that until the eighth when Kress hit another important home run, leading off the inning. Mihalic banged a single to right and Cascarella walked at which point Chapman got into the home run race with his clout that put the Nats ahead, 8-4.

Sington tossed his cap into the home run ring starting the ninth with a blast into the right field seats and Joe Cascarella drove in the second and third runs of the inning with a single that scored Mihalic and Bluege. Those runs were entirely superfluous as previously noted, but they were comforting at the moment.

Walker Cup Golfer Sets Course-Mark With 69

Garden City, N. Y., Sept. 9 (AP).—Albert "Scotty" Campbell, American Walker Cup player from Seattle, today shot a 69, 4 under par, in his first time around the Garden City golf course, scene of the National Amateur championship, starting Monday.

This is the lowest score any amateur has ever made on the course, according to Frank Bellwood, professional at the course.

Matthews, Richardson Gain Playground Finals

C. U. Gridmen Listed for 1st Drill Today

Carroll, Adamaitis Back in Harness; 39 Due to Take Workout.

The Catholic University football team, 39 strong, will report for fall drills this morning at 10:30 o'clock on Kililon field, site of the new practice gridiron.

Coach Dutch Bergman and his aids will find that five familiar faces of the past will be missing when the Cardinal team takes the field this morning. These men are Capt. Ed Karpowich, tackle; Pete Dranginis, quarterback; Bill Lajousky, guard, and George Mulligan and Hal McGann, ends.

However, the team will still have its brilliant sophomore back of last season, Irish Carroll, as well as Bill Adamaitis, star of the Orange Bowl; Hermie Schmarr, sterling right end and captain-elect, and Joe Yanchulis, center, who was voted the most valuable player of the team last year.

Two-a-day practice sessions are on the menu for today and until September 29, at which time the players will register for classroom work.

Cubs Win 1st, 10-5; Phils Take 2d, 5-4

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Phillies came back in 12 innings in today's nightcap to nose out the Cubs, 5 to 4, after absorbing a 10-5 larruping in the opener.

Garibaldi to Face Joe Cox Tonight

Promoter Joe Turner will move his rough house indoors tonight, climaxing it with a match between Gina Garibaldi and Joe Cox, with the implied promise there will be as much roughing as wrestling. Both are heralded (?) as two of the toughest acting gents in the profession.

Attraction of the other four bouts is to be Nick Campofreda, former Western Maryland gridder and boxer in his local debut. He will oppose Carl McQuade.

Abe Coleman and Ed Maske are booked for the semifinal of 30 minutes; Cliff Olsen will grapple with Little Beaver, and Eli Fischer and Ivan Managoff furnish the rest of the blod and/or thunder.

6 D. C. Teams In New Pin League

Baltimore - Washington Loop Replaces 1936 Organization.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 9.—The Southern Men's Duckpin League, an eight-team wheel, comprising two teams each from Washington, Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk, and which struggled through a hop-skip-and-jump campaign last season, has folded up.

Bowling, however, is not to be without its intercity league wars during the impending seven-month session of pin-pounding, for announcement was made here today that a new circuit, labeled the Inter City Duckpin League, has been organized.

The new wheel is strictly a Washington-Baltimore affair, with each section placing six teams in the race to make the flag dash a 12-team scramble.

Patterson, Overlea and Twentieth Century, of this city, each have taken two franchises in the loop, with Convention Hall, Lucky Strike, Georgetown Recreation, Hyattsville, Bethesda and Temple representing the Washington area.

A 22-week pennant is planned. It will open September 26 in the Capital, with the initial local matches slated here the fillowing day.

George Slagle, of Georgetown, is president of the league; Wilmer Robey, of Twentieth Century, vice president; Paul Lohr, of Patterson, second vice president, and Charles Young, of Washington secretary.

Van Ryn's cannon-ball service and spectacular volleying and overhead games were more than Bitsy could handle in the first set and troubled him no end in the second until finally, by playing his shots deep into Van Ryn's territory, he kept the former co-holder of the National Doubles title back and seldom permitted him to advance to the net.

Pound, $5.06¼ At Top Mark For Two Years

Demand Follows French Labor Sympathy With Spanish Loyalists.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—The pound sterling hurtled upward to new high ground in world markets today as demand for the British unit from continental Europe followed the clamoring of French leftist workers for assistance to the loyalist Spanish government. Other foreign currencies were steady to firm in terms of the dollar.

Banking quarters here said a major part of the rise of the pound to $5.06¼ in New York, a new high since August, 1934, was directly traceable to fears that the French general confederation of labor in a momentarily expected pronouncement might champion the leftist demands for aid to the Madrid government. The federation, foreign dispatches said, claimed a membership of 3,500,000 workers and, with the leftist workers already on occupational strikes, a general strike similar to that of a few months ago might be staged, it was feared.

Bankers in Italy and Switzerland reported a rush of French citizens to put their wealth in safe deposit boxes in those countries.

Four New Highs.

Gold bloc currencies here were steady to slightly firmer. French francs, with control support, edged .00 1-16 of a cent higher to 6.58⅞ cents, while Holland guilders recovered .08 of a cent to 67.73 cents. Swiss francs held steady at 32.56 cents.

New highs for the year were established by four other foreign currencies allied to the sterling bloc, the Norway krone at 25.44 cents, up .03 of a cent; Sweden krona, 26.11 cents, up .04 of a cent; Denmark krone, 22.61 cents, up .03 of a cent, and the Tokyo yen, 29.60 cents, up .04 of a cent.

In London the dollar lost 1½ cents in sympathy with the French franc, and because of offerings from New York, closed at 5.06¼ to the pound, compared with the overnight New York rate of 5.05⅝ to the pound. The American unit in Paris ended at the equivalent of 6.583 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 6.584 cents.

Quota For Copper Is Increased 5%

London, Sept. 9 (AP).—The production quota for copper, it was announced today on behalf of companies operating under the restriction plan, had been ordered raised 5 per cent, effective October 1.

The increase raises the maximum production under the curtailment agreement to 80 per cent of capacity.

Stock Seat $130,000, Decline of $3,000

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange announced today arrangements have been made for the sale of a membership at $130,000, off $3,000 from the previous sale.

The year's high price was $174,000 February 19, and the low, $100,000 May 4.

Two Bids Received For 3d U. S. Liner

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—The United States Lines, subsidiary of the International Mercantile Marine Co., reported today the receipt of two bids for the construction of a third steamer to join the Manhattan and Washington in the New York to Hamburg service.

The New York Shipbuilding Corporation, subsidiary of Cord Corporation, with plants at Camden, N. J., bid $12,995,000 for construction of a duplicate of the Washington and $13,095,000 for duplicating the Washington with improved machinery.

Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., a U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiary with properties at Kearney, N. J., submitted a bid for an improved Washington type steamer at a price of $16,500,000 subject to increases in labor and material costs.

New York Shipbuilding's bid stipulated delivery within 32 months while that of Federal provided completion within 36 months.

Slump in Corn Carries Other Grains Lower

Board of Trade Rules That Argentine Corn Is Valid Delivery.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Abrupt downturns of 2¼ cents a bushel in corn prices after an early display of strength today had an unsteadying effect on all grain in general.

One disconcerting factor was announcement that the directors of the Chicago Board of Trade have formally refused a petition to exclude Argentine corn from being acceptable on future delivery contracts here. The directors took the ground that they were powerless in the matter, grain standards being fixed by the Federal Government at Washington.

Corn closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1⅛ cents down, September, 110⅛ to 110½; December, 94⅜ to 94¾; May, 90⅜ to 90½; wheat ¼ to ⅝ down, September, 111⅛ to 111¼; December, 110⅜ to 110½; May 109 to 109¼; oats also ¼ to ⅝ off; December 42¼, and rye varying from ¼ decline to ½ advance; December 80½. The outcome for provisions was unchanged to 15 cents decline.

Gross Steel Tonnage Highest in 6 Years

New York Sept. 9 (AP).—Production of 4,195,130 gross tons of Open-Hearth and Bessmer steel during August was the greatest of any month since March, 1930, when 4,254,331 gross tons were produced, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today.

The output in August was 7 per cent above the July production of 3,922,731 gross tons and 44 per cent above the output of 2,915,930 gross tons in August, 1935. During August the steel industry operated at 73.52 per cent of capacity, as against 68.74 per cent in July and 48.78 per cent in August of last year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Run Into Profit-Taking; Bonds Advance; Commodities Unsettled.

New York, Sept. 9.—Bond prices hardened, but stocks had to give up the greater part of yesterday's gain in a less active market. Turnover was around 1,600,000 shares over a broad list. Commodity markets were unsettled. December wheat dropped half a cent to 110⅝ cents a bushel.

Profit-taking in stocks was brought on partly by the recent bulge in prices and partly perhaps because of the retreat of the London market before the swirl of Continental news. Signs of fresh trouble for the French franc was an upsetting influence in the speculative markets, weakened a little anyhow by the advance.

Trade news mildly supporting. Incidence of the holiday is bound to affect the score of business activity for this week, but in comparison with a year ago the record continues to brighten. For one thing, commercial loans at the banks are steadily increasing, and the expansion is coming at a time when bank deposits and currency in circulation are highest in years. So far no great increase in the velocity of circulation has taken place, but indications point in that direction.

Bonus money has largely been spent, but that performance has encouraged greater spending all round and the Government doles of other sorts are rolling out with no sign of stoppage until after election, if then. A season of unusually heavy retail purchasing is opening, and a considerable backwash on manufacturing is bound to be felt.

Pressure on Francs.

Foreign exchanges moved further to the front of the financial stage. Pressure on francs, i. e., a flight of capital from France plus perhaps some speculative acitivity brought on by the new armament expenditures just announced and the Communist outbreak in one industrial area of the country, continued.

The sterling franc cross-rate rose to 76.92 francs to the pound, the highest of the movement, and this weakness in francs against sterling found quick reflection in a rise in sterling here to a figure well above $5.06, which was about the highest price witnessed since the disturbances created by the devaluation of the American dollar. The franc was unchanged against dollars, being anchored at a fixed quotation against gold shipments. Sterling area currences, especially Scandinavian rates, were buoyant, and Indian rupees also soared. Guilders were slightly improved.

In the exchange market the American stabilization fund was credited with intervening in the franc, providing dollars here for the Bank of France against gold in the bank's vaults. If the fund was active and there was no way of finding out, it would be the fifth or sixth time it has helped out the French Central Bank in a routine transaction which normally would be handled by the Federal Reserve Bank.

Swiss Bank Rate Cut.

The British fund was reported to be intervening occasionally in the Paris market in an effort to keep sterling from swinging over too wide a range. After the Paris-London cross rate went to 76.92 it was forced down about 10 points. Meanwhile, in the face of these difficulties the Swiss Central Bank cut its discount rate. Ordinarily that would indicate confidence in the ability of Switzerland to stay on gold, but that country probably has decided with France to sacrifice the gold standard if necessary in order to stimulate trade with cheap money. Nobody supposes that the Swiss franc could stay on gold if France abandons it.

In stocks the turnover in ten issues made up more than a 50, of the total. Only two of the most active issues were priced above $15 a share.

New Sales Peak Set By Montgomery Ward

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today sales for August and for the first seven months of the current fiscal year were the largest of any corresponding periods in the company's history. August sales totaled $27,422,133, an increase of 20.02 per cent compared with August, 1935. Sales in July this year totaled $25,635,-868. First seven months sales totaled $186,785,453, an increase of 19.63 per cent compared with the corresponding period last year.

Among them were Consolidated Oil, Budd Wheel, Radio, Budd Manufacturing, Otis Steel, Canada Dry, Sparks Withington and Chicago Great Western preferred. They advanced, in contrast to most of the leaders yesterday, the higher priced issues, which were a little soggy today.

Metal Stocks Sag.

Most of the metal stocks weakened. The London market for coppers improved on news that output would be increased, a development which naturally bore down on domestic coppers. American Metal, with large foreign holdings, rose nearly 3 points. Borden and National Dairy, in the milk-price dispute, worked lower. Merchandising shares were mixed. Most of the rail equipments and motor accessories worked lower, Mail orders softened.

Among the stocks to sink 1 to 2 points on rather small volume were General Motors, Chrysler, Sears, Bethlehem, United States Steel, Union Carbide, Central, Santa Fe and Kennecott. Steels as a group receded. Crucible was one to climb into new high territory. Rails were pressed down 1 to 2 points. Erie second preferred, Gulf Mobile preferred, Norfolk and Pittsburgh & West Virginia were nicely backed.

Oil shares were firm. Most of the utilities turned downward, although Telephone increased its price. Local traction shares were mixed. Traders noticed that Greyhound broke 3 points or so. Kinney preferred and AGWI preferred were features of the odd lot post dealings.

Banking Position.

The weekly figures of reporting member banks in 101 cities as of September 2 disclosed the usual pre-financing shifts of Treasury securities to New York. Holdings of Government direct obligations rose $29,000,000 in this district, Chicago banks selling $25,000,000. For all the reporting banks there was a net decrease of $11,000,000 in Government direct obligations and an increase of $3,000,000 in guaranteed securities. Holdings of other securities were down $22,000,000. A feature of the statement was continued expansion in miscellaneous and commercial loans, which increased $28,000,000, the increase being evenly distributed among several districts. Demand deposits were down $44,000,000 and deposits of domestic banks were up $134,-000,000. Reserves increased $106,-000,000, the increase being a reflection of large Treasury spending in the week ended September 2.

Earnings Tax Likely to Force More Dividends

Some Companies Hope for Repeal of New Act Before March 15.

New York, Sept. 9.—In view of the heavy taxes levied in the revenue act of 1936 on corporation earnings not distributed as dividends, a number of companies are planning to disburse a substantially larger proportion of their earnings for the current year, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Because of the rapid earnings expansion experienced by many corporations this year, it is obvious that in many cases distributions would have been increased regardless of the new tax. Many companies exempt from the workings of the act, including those incorporated in foreign countries and those whose fiscal year began before January 1, 1936 (and who are therefore not subject to the law until next year) are following the general trend in paying out a larger part of earnings to stockholders.

A number of companies are waiting until after the election before declaring increased dividends, in the hope of some assurance that the law will be repealed before tax returns for 1936 are due, on March 15, 1937.

Directors of Air Reduction Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common, both payable October 15 to stock of record September 30. On July 15 the company paid an extra of 50 cents a common shore. Air reduction is a producer of oxygen, acetylene and other gases with properties throughout the country and headquarters at New York City.

Extras Declared.

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—More liberal dividends declared by important manufacturing and mercantile companies helped to cheer the business world today.

Directors of J. C. Penney Co. increased the dividend on the common stock to $1, payable September 30 to stock of record September 18. On June 30, 75 cents was paid. The company operates 1,481 department stores throughout the country.

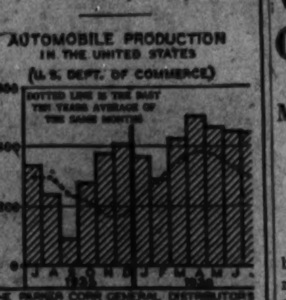

Western Electric Co. boosted its common dividend to 75 cents, payable September 30 to stock of record September 21, a dividend of 50 cents paid on June 30 was the first disbursement since June 30, 1931, when 75 cents was paid. The company, which is controlled by American Telephone and Telegraph Co., makes and installs telephones.

L. A. Young Spring & Wire Corporation, declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 21. The company has plants in Detroit, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and on the Pacific Coast.

Directors of Noblitt-Sparks industries increased the dividend to 50 cents, from 37½ per cent paid quarterly. The dividend is payable October 1 to stock of record September 21. The company produces automobile accessories.

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Directors of the Reliance Manufacturing Co. today declared an extra dividend of 10 cents a share on the common stock in addition to the regular of 15 cents, payable November 2 to stockholders of record October 22. The quarterly preferred dividend of $1.75 also was voted, payable October 1.

Year's Auto Turnout Put At 4,200,000.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 9.—The midyear crop of estimates of U. S. automobile production indicates that about 4,200,000 cars will be manufactured this year. In July, 31 per cent more automobiles were turned out than a year ago, while production the first seven months of this year topped the same 1935 months by 13 per cent.

Store Sales Rise Sharply in August

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Sharp increases in August retail sales were reported today by chain and department stores operating in various sections of the country.

F. W. Woolworth Co. reported August sales of $23,186,341, an increase of 7.56 per cent over the like month a year ago. For the first eight months sales of $170,814,510 were 5.36 per cent ahead of the similar period of 1935.

Spiegel, May Stern Co., Chicago mail-order concern, had August sales of $3,169,969, the largest for that month in the company's history and the forty-third consecutive monthly increase. The total was 49.2 per cent above August, 1935.

Interstate Department Stores, operating in Eastern and Midwestern States, reported $1,792,395 sales in August, a rise of 24.2 per cent over that month last year. Sales included the company's own departments and excluded groceries and leased departments.

J. J. Newberry Co., operating stores in 42 States, had an August total of $3,916,349, up 9.4 per cent over the like month a year ago.

Bombay, Sept. 9 (AP).—Cotton prices rose sharply in a frantic buying rush in the Bombay market today, caused by the United States Department of Agriculture's drastically reduced cotton crop estimate issued Tuesday. Options advanced as much as 8 rupees (about $3.05) per kandy of 784 pounds.

McLellan is Forming New Chain Store Group.

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—W. W. McLellan, former president and founder of the McLellan Stores Co. announced today he is forming a new chain of 5-cent to $1 stores in the South. He is purchasing seven units in Georgia and Alabama and has obtained an option on five additional stores in Tennessee. He declined to say in what towns the stores were.

The new venture, which is to be known as the W. W. Mac Co., has an authorized capitalization of more than $1,00,000, representing 40,000 preferred shares and 80,000 common. About $250,000 of the preferred will be sold privately at $25 a share, he said.

Dairy Farming In County Gains, C. of C. Is Told

Fairfax Receives $26,000 Annually in Taxes, Kincheloe Says.

Dairying is the largest single industry in Fairfax County, Va., James U. Kincheloe, county commissioner of revenue, told the September meeting of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce. He said there are 180 dairy farms in the county paying about $26,600 annually in taxes to the county, or 10 per cent of the entire county tax.

These farms, Kincheloe said, are growing annually and for the current year 10,000 head of cattle have been assessed for taxes. In addition the dairy farms employ 440 families, exclusive of the feed stores and other employes of firms supplying the dairy farms with equipment and materials.

The dairy farmers of Fairfax County are becoming progressive, C. T. Rice, prominent dairy farmer and cattle dealer, stated, and as a result it has created a widespread demand for local dairy cattle. Local cows are being shipped regularly to dairy sections throughout the United States and South America, he declared.

He also urged the dairymen to join the soil conversation program and rotate their pastures similar to other agricultural crops.

Wells A. Sherman, of McLean, discussed the question of milk as an article of interstate commerce. He spoke briefly on the argument that the local health departments have created such regulations and safeguards around the milk industry, under the guise of protecting the public, that each milk shed is independent of other sections. Under such regulations it is virtually impossible for milk to become the subject of interstate commerce, he asserted. In line with this argument, he said, milk producers and distributors in return for the monopoly in each milk shed have patiently submitted to the health department regulations.

Other speakers included E. W. Gaumnitz, of the dairy marketing division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Milk Producers Association.

Several times during the evening the discussion threatened to become heated, concerning the relationship between the producer, distributor and consumer, as to variation in price, but these arguments were cut short by President Francis Pickens Miller of the trade body, who presided.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council, and Mathew F. Boyd, vice chairman of the same group, challenged both Gaumnitz and Derrick to tell just what dairymen received for milk. They claim the price relationship is being withheld by association officials.

The Fairfax County Business and Professional Women's Club will meet this evening at Fairfax. A picnic supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock on the lawn of the Methodist Episcopal Church preceding the meeting.

The town council of Falls Church, Va., will hold a special meeting in the mayor's office tomorrow night to open bids for the construction of a sewage system in the town. Bids will be received up until 8 p. m.

Minister Accepts Call to Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 9.—The Rev. C. Worthington Lowe, of Upper Marlboro, Md., recently extended a call to Grace Lutheran Church to become its pastor, today announced that he has accepted.

During the summer, he has been acting as supply pastor. He succeeds Dr. L. A. Thomas, who resigned to become pastor of a church in Lincolnton, N. C. The new pastor is a graduate of the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia and of the College of William and Mary.

New Maritime Unit Is Due to Be Named

By the Associated Press.

Col. J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, indicated yesterday the possibility that the new Maritime Authority would be named before the contract was signed for the proposed new United States Lines ship to succeed the Leviathan.

Johnson, in charge of maritime matters under the present organization, confirmed a New York announcement that the New York Shipbuilding Co., of Camden, N. J., had submitted a bid of "around $13,000,000" for construction of the ship, and that another bid had been received from the Federal Shipbuilding Co., at Kearny, N. J. The Federal bid was said to be 16,500,000 with an alternate of $17,500, including a labor provision.

The Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. has been the sole bidder for the proposed ship on three previous occasions. The last time Johnson described the estimate, which was approximately the same as the lowest announced today, as too high and asked the Navy Department to submit bids. They ranged up to $18,000,000.

Extortion Suspect Is Trapped by Son

Chicago, Sept. 9 (AP).—Frank R. Thomas, whose 12-year-old son led Federal agents to his door, was charged with extortion today in a warrant issued by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker.

United States District Attorney Michael L. Igoe said Thomas, insurance agent, was suspected of attempting to extort $2,000 each from two wealthy residents of Chicago suburbs, one of them his part-time employer—Harold R. Kendall, president of the Washington National Insurance Co.

Kendall recently received a letter ordering him to leave $2,000 in a public locker in a railroad station. He sent a decoy package.

Federal agents and policemen, hiding near the locker last night, saw Thomas' son pedal up on his bicycle. Igoe said the boy explained his father had sent him to pick up the package, and offered to lead the officers to his home.

Tear Gas Disperses Strikers

Middletown, Conn., Sept. 9 (AP).—State police used tea gas bombs tonight to disperse 800 strikers at the Remington-Rand, Inc., plant here after violence, dormant for several weeks, broke out anew. Four persons were slightly injured. When the factory, where a strike began May 26, shut down for the day, strikers pelted automobiles carrying workers. Five arrests were made.

City Ownership Of Waterworks To Face Council

Special Meeting Is Set for Oct. 20 in Alexandria; May Issue Bonds.

The question of whether or not Alexandria should own its water system will be thrashed out at a special meeting of the city council October 20. Mayor Emmett C. Davison has expressed himself as strongly in favor of a municipally-owned plant, whether this is accomplished by purchase or condemnation of the plant of the Alexandria Water Co., or by the installation of a system which will parallel the present one.

The matter was brought to a focus in the council meeting of Tuesday night when a report of the water committee of the council was submitted, giving a resume of a conference with the water company, in which the latter proposed to purchase from the city its fire hydrants, and charge, in perpetuity a return of 9.79 per cent on the investment for hydrants, which would include maintenance, and from which would be deducted the city tax of $2.60 per $100 valuation of the property. The mayor does not believe this would solve the water problem, and the council agreed to go into the entire matter at a special called meeting. Mr. Davison stated his belief that the present water rates are too high, and could be materially reduced, as well as giving better service for domestic consumption and fire protection, if the city owned and operated the plant.

A proposal for an issue of $300,000 of public improvement and funding bonds, which had previously been before the council, also has been held over until the next meeting. Members of the old council had been supplied with data regarding the bond issue, but a new member has not had an opportunity to study it. The necessity for the bond issue has been questioned by some of the councilmen.

The building of a dog pound and the appointment of a poundmaster was one of the items approved by the council Tuesday night. An amendment to the present city ordinance was submitted by the city attorney, but this also appeared to require further study, and the only action taken was the providing of a pound and a master thereof. The pound is to have a lethal chamber, in which dogs are to be destroyed instead of turning them over to Washington or Maryland establishments for possible vivisection.

On the Air Today

Enter now Don Voorhees into the controversy over swing music. Maestro Voorhees, who plays a bit of music himself for some of the better air shows, casts his lot with the antiswing camp. Bravo, huzzahs, et cetera!

This man Voorhees is equally at home with dance and classical scores before him. And he contributes a new idea for the existence of swing music, namely, that it's a lot more fun to do than to listen to. I'm wondering if that doesn't sum up the partiality of some dance band leaders for the grinding, blaring unmelodious stuff known to the listener as the monotony of swing?

Voorhees says: "Swing music proves conclusively, I think, that formal and informal musical trends go by cycles. Frankly, I object to the terms 'jazz' and 'swing.' Both are really no more than forms of improvisation—a word musicians use to donate music that a fellow just sits down and plays without a formal musical arrangement to guide him. And often without much preconceived idea of just what kind of sound he is going to make."

Amen, Brother Voorhees.

Further: "Jazz was really introduced by the famous Dixieland Jazz Band, a bunch of white boys from New Orleans who were so exuberant that they couldn't keep their minds on printed notes. It caught on, but the public got tired of it. Then the dance cycle swung away to smoother, dressed-up arrangements and the Whiteman influence put a top hat on what had been jazz." And Voorhees points out there have been other cycles—which have died quickly.

"Personally, I don't like to listen to swing and I don't think the cycle will last long. Academically, it is important, at least, as a phase of musical progress. It gives real talent a chance to develop."

Jane Froman has left Hollywood to join Ed Wynn's stage show. Gertrude Niesen will replace her in "Hollywood Hotel" for two weeks. Then Donald Novis joins the cast . . . Frank Parker will guest with Ben Bernie on the 22nd . . . Charles Butterworth, the "dead-pan comic of stage and screen, has been booked for the Fred Astaire series and makes his first appearance with the star of the show next Tuesday night.

Remember Norman Brokenshire, once the tops in net announcing? He's trying another comeback. Last Sunday morning I happened to catch WINS (New York) in an announcement that Brokenshire is to handle a noon-time news airing for that station.

A new record for visitors to Radio City was set Labor Day weekend when 17,491 persons made the guided tour of N. B. C. facilities. A new record for a single day was set Sunday, with 8,141. The previous high was Labor Day Sunday, 1935, with 6,483. If the big shows continue to move to Hollywood for point of origin these figures will stand for a long time to come.

2 Bandits Steal Rings As Throngs Pass Store

Two nervy bandits smashed the window of the A. Kahn, Inc., jewelery store at 935 F street northwest and escaped with three small trays of rings as theater patrons retrning home walked by naware of the robbery.

The trays, it is believed, contained abot 15 usemiprecious rings. Police answering the radio call expressed amazement that the burglars should choose a time when many persons were walking by.

The men, both described as short, were dressed in gray. They made their escape by rnning up Third street.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Sept. 9 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—A moderate demand was being received today on greasy combing domestic wools at about steady to firm prices, compared with sales last week. Territory wools of ¼ blood grade were bringing mostly 70@73 cents, scoured basis. Combing ⅜ blood Territory wool continued strong, prices ranging 77@80 cents on a fair movement. Medium-grade Ohio fleeces were rather slow, but a few sales were closed at 38@39 cents in the grease for ⅜ blood and 37@38 cents for ¼ blood, the maximum prices of these ranges being difficult to secure.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Siamese Twin, Husband Seek An Annulment

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Sept. 9.—Harold J. Winling, New Orleans attorney, today filed a petition in Civil District Court asking annulment of the marriage of Violet Hilton, one of the American Siamese twin sisters, and James Moore, her dancer-husband.

The petition was signed by Moore and Miss Hilton. Daisy Hilton, the other twin sister, did not sign it.

The petition asserted that the couple went through with a marriage ceremony as a "publicity stunt" in connection with Miss Hilton's appearance at the Texas centennial and that they did not intend to enter "into a contract of marriage," or assume any of the responsibilities of the marriage status.

The couple, the petition continued, had understood that a ceremony would be performed under fictitious names, but when they arrived for the engagement they were booked under their right names.

The petition said Moore and Miss Hilton never had lived together as man and wife.

The ceremony was performed last July 18 in the Cotton Bowl Stadium at the centennial in Dallas and the ceremony was "open to the public at a fixed charge, and that several thousand people attended."

The entertainers have been appearing under contract at a New Orleans night club.

2 Suspects Freed In Watchman Case

Two Washingtonians arrested as suspects in the murder last week of Marion J. Riley, 59-year-old coal company nightwatchman, were released from the Arlington County jail yesterday.

The release was ordered by Detective Sergt. Harry L. Woodyard, in charge of the murder investigation, who declared that there was "absolutely no evidence to connect these men in any way with this crime."

Both men were former employes of the coal yard, operated in nearby Virginia by the James E. Colliflower Co., and investigators felt their knowledge of the plant might give them a lead to the murderers.

Riley's murder was an incident of an attempt to rob the company safe, thought to contain employe pay envelopes, sometime Friday night or early Saturday. Riley was beaten to death and robbed of his pocketbook containing nearly $400. The safe was hammered open and found to be empty.

Virginia authorities last night continued to hold for questioning six colored men, arrested shortly after the crime was discovered.

Berkeley County Teachers Organize

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 9.—Two hundred and nine teachers of this county, meeting here yesterday morning, organized a Berkeley County Educational Association, the first such organization ever attempted here, and elected George Ludwig, principal of Hedgesville High School, as the first president.

Other officers are E. W. Miller, principal of Martinsburg High School, first vice president, and Banks Wilburn, secretary-treasurer. The group decided to leave the appointment of a constitutional committee to Ludwig. As planned now the association will be an affiliate of the West Virginia Educational Association.

Prior to the organization of the county association, the teachers were given instructions for the coming school year by County Supt. G. William Ropp, and addresses were given by A. J. Gibson, State supervisor of high schools, representing the State department of education; Ludwig, representing the State Educational Association, and Dr. Edwin Cameron, of this city, representing the West Virginia Medical Association and the State department of health.

Women Are Enlisted In United Cancer Fight

Madison, Wis., Sept. 9 (AP).—A "women's field army" soon will be mustered from all parts of the Nation for a thorough fight against cancer, Dr. C. C. Little, of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, announced tonight at the International Cancer Institute here.

Dr. Little said the society was enlisting the aid of more than 2,000,000 members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in America as an integral part of its cancer control program.

They will be enrolled in an organization to be known officially as the "women's field army against cancer."

G. O. P. Has Advantage In Franklin Figures.

Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 9.—Registration figures for Franklin County, made available today at the county commissioners' offices, show an increase of 897 eligible voters over last year. The enrollment is 39,211.

The Republican enrollment of 18,856 is a gain of 393 over 1935, while the Democratic enrollment of 12,895 is 1,237 more than last year.

There are 7,398 voters who profess no party allegiance.

Post Will Install.

Danville, Va., Sept. 9.—E. B. Rhodes will be installed tomorrow night as commander of Post No. 10, American Legion. Plans for the coming year and a review of the past year will be heard and the American Legion Auxiliary meeting with the parent body will offer a program of entertainment.

Swing Contest Shows Film Fans Vary Widely on Astaire Merit

. . . $200 in cash, 244 theater tickets . . .

Post's Editor for Competition Swamped by Entries for Cash Prizes, Tickets; Many Reasons for Liking Screen Star Are Recorded.

There must be innumerable reasons why Washingtonians like Fred Astaire.

The Post's contest editor literally has been swamped with entries in the Fred Astaire contest for $200 in cash awards and 244 guest theater tickets. And, as far as we can see by a very quick glance through the entries, everyone likes the star of "Swing Time" . . . for a different reason.

Have you seen the show? Have you sent in your entry?

Do it today. You may win a sizable lump of money, a flock of free theater tickets and a new 1937 Packard Six, too! Here are the directions:

Go to the RKO-Keith Thetaer. See "Swing Time." After the show, pick up your contest entry blanks in the lobby. Write a 25-word, or less, description of "What I Like Best About Fred Astaire" on one of them and another composition of 25 words or less on "What I Like Best About the New Packard Six."

Entries in the Astaire contest must be in the hands of The Post Contest Editor not later than Tuesday. Awards: First prize, $50; second prize, $25; five third prizes of $10 each; 10 fourth prizes of $5 each; 25 fifth prizes of $1 each. In addition, each cash prize winner will receive four Keith's guest tickets and 58 pairs of tickets will go to the writers of the 58 next best 25-word appreciations of the dance star.

Entries in the Packard Contest must be in before November 11. The 12 winners, from all parts of the country, each will receive a new 1937 Packard Six automobile.

Complete rules of the two contests are printed on the entry blanks. Join the contest today—and send in as many entries as you wish.

Only 1 of 163 Loses Parole During August

8 of 159 Released From Lorton Sent Back After Arrests.

In August only one man of 163 paroles under jurisdiction of the District Board of Indeterminate Sentences and Parole had his parole revoked, it was announced yesterday by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the board.

Of 159 men, also under jurisdiction of the board who were not paroled but released from Lorton Reformatory at the expiration of the shortest period of their indeterminate sentences, eight were sent back to the reformatory—one for commission of a felony, four for misdemeanors and three for violations of rules, LaRoe said.

Statistics Are Cited.

La Roe cited statistics comparing men paroled in New York State and in the District of Columbia which showed that in 1934 in New York 10.8 per cent of paroled men were declared delinquent and 6.3 per cent were convicted of new crimes, while the corresponding percentages for the District were 9.65 and 2.63.

Said La Roe:

"While the results are not yet wholly satisfactory, the board's staff is being gradually increased, and the amount of delinquency among paroled men is small.

Finds Jobs for Men.

"The board is finding jobs for its parolees before releasing them, experience having shown that this substantially reduces the number who go astray. The board is receiving commendable support from the business men of the District in placing the men in suitable jobs."

La Roe and members of the board have been fighting for several years for larger appropriations for the board, in order that paroled men may be more adequately supervised, that their applications may be more closely checked and that the board have a representative on duty at the reformatory in capacity of a trained social worker.

Foster Mother Loses Fight to Keep Child

Bowling Green, Ohio, Sept. 9 (AP). Two weeping women left the Common Pleas courtroom here late today, one a mother, carrying in her arms the baby boy the court had restored to her, the other the foster mother who had cared for him during the past eight months.

The mother, Mrs. Mary V. Cook, obtained a writ of habeas corpus to regain the 9-months-old James Edward Cook from Mrs. Leonard Kramp, to whom she had surrendered him soon after his birth.

Mrs. Kramp had pleaded that she be permitted to keep the child she had come to love.

Mrs. Cook testified that she gave James away because her husband was jobless and her own meager income as a waitress was insufficient to support them all. Now, she said, her husband had a job and she wanted the child back.

Landlady Is Held In Stabbing Death

A coroner's jury, investigating the death of William Grover Jenkins, 46, retired District fireman, yesterday ordered Jenkins' landlady, Anna M. Sanford, 42, of 516 E street southeast, held for the grand jury.

The Sanford woman and a roomer in her home, Edna M. Weaver, 35, were arrested on an open charge of investigation the night of September 4, when Jenkins was found dead from stab wounds in his room. Miss Weaver was exonerated yesterday.

"In our opinion," the jury said, "Jenkins died at the hands of a party or parties unknown. It is our opinion that Anna Sanford had guilty knowledge of the death."

Cleric Accepts Call.

Luray, Va., Sept. 9.—The Rev. J. H. Childress, of Richmond, has accepted the pastorate of the Disciples of Christ Church, Luray, recently made vacant by the resignation of the Rev. F. A. Blosser, who accepted a charge in Maryland.

15 Inch Length

Made of the Elastic that Breathes

If you want to lose weight, wear an "Airway" as so many fastidious women are doing. It is woven to the shape of your body just as French corsets are. Covered elastic strands are woven together to make this corset. There are 150 holes to the square inch. That means that perspiration escapes quickly without irritating your skin—and thus you can wear an "Airway" all the time. All "Airway" girdles are of rubber less than two weeks old. This means it is live fresh rubber that will last much, much longer. And you can punch a hole in this corset and it will not run! Sizes 23 to 30. 17 inch length. 13.50.
